Yellow Knife, N.W.T., Residents Predict 15,000 Population

WINNIPEG, Jan. 3: (CP)-North West Territories residents think that the mining town of Yellowknife on Great Slave Lake, 400 miles northeast of Edmonton, will have 15,000 population within a few years, D. R. MacDougall said when he stopped here enroute from the north country to Toronto.

In addition, surrounding communities are expected to have almost as many residents. "I have been in many mining areas during the past 20 years and I have never seen a field with such tremendous potentialities," he remarked.

Mr. MacDougall thought the principal need was a canal around the "Rapids of the Drowned" on Athabaska River near Fort Smith, N.W.T. This would obviate carrying heavy freight over the 15-mile portage and enable movement of freight to Yellowknife by water for one-half cent a pound. The canal could also provide 275,000 horsepewer in electrical energy for the mining area.
