Bad Week-End For Ships In North Sea; Big Casualties In Losses of Mines

Converted Cruiser Rawalpindi, With Heavy Casualty List, and Crack Polish Liner Pilsudski Are Worst Losses of Unrestricted Warfare

LONDON, November 27: (CP)—Allied and neutral shipping suffered severe blows during the week-end and again today with the loss of the British armed cruiser Rawalpindi and the Polish liner Pilsudski as the major casualties on Sunday and the Holland-American liner Spaarndam and the Britisher freighter Royston Bridge today. Sunday was the most disastrous day so far in the war at sea. The Rawalpindi, formerly a crack Peninsula and Orient liner which was requisitioned by the Admiralty and armed at the first of the war, and the liner Pilsudski, pride of the Polish merchant marine which was taken over by the Admiralty and had operated under the British flag since the start of the war. It is estimated that some 280 lives were lost on the Rawalpindi. Relatively few were lost in the sinking of the Pilsudski. The Rawalpindi carried a crew of around three hundred of whom only seventeen are believed to have been saved. She was a luxury ship of 16,667 tons built in 1925. It was not explained how she was sunk nor was the location of the disaster given. The Admiralty appealing to the press that speculation and comment be curtailed until a further official announcement was made.

The Pilsudski, 14,294 tons, struck a mine in the North Sea and several were believed missing with 171 dead. There were two explosions, survivors of the Pilsudski reported, a large part of the superstructure collapsing. Many of the survivors are injured. The liner was virtually torn in half. It was at first reported that the Pilsudski had been torpedoed but it is now believed she was the victim of German mines. The Holland-America Line vessel Spaarndam struck a mine in Thames Estuary. She was an 8,859 ton vessel. Forty members of the crew and one woman passenger were rescued. Details of the sinking of the Royston Bridge were not immediately available. Other losses of the week-end included the Dover freighter Hookwood, 1,537 tons, which was mined, seventeen members of the crew being rescued with two missing; the British Trawler William Humphries, believed to have been shelled by a submarine, the crew of eighteen being unheard from since. The 6,336 ton Swedish tanker Gustaf E. Reuter was reported disabled off the northeast coast of England after striking a mine, nine members of the crew being unaccounted for. A German coast-guard cutter also sank after an explosion, sixteen members of the crew being missing. Copenhagen reports that a German trawler, being used as a mine patrol vessel, sank within one minute after striking a mine off the Danish coast, nine members of the crew being evidently lost. There are also reports of a Nazi submarine attacking a North-German Lloyd liner which was being brought in by a British prize crew and sinking the vessel. The prize crew was safe but four Germans were killed. This was the 3,670 ton Borkum which was being taken to a British port. The German 4,458 ton freighter Konsul Henrik Fisser has been brought safely to port.

CONGRATULATIONS

The congratulations and thanks of the community are due to F. A. MacCallum, Arnold Flaten and their energetic band of helpers in the recent Red Cross campaign. Speaking generally, the whole community wished to subscribe to the fund and the people were glad to have the collectors call. In putting on the campaign they were working for this community as well as for the people who will receive the benefits from the contributions.

Mr. MacCallum has already publicly thanked his helpers and the public. We would like, on behalf of the public to thank Mr. MacCallum.

WHAT HE SAW IN RUSSIA

Colonel George Drew, who visited Russia this year, has been giving some of his impressions in Toronto Saturday Night. In the latest number he says:

"The truth is that there are greater inequalities in Russia than in any other country in the world today. In the cities, and particularly in the country, I saw filth, squalor, hunger and depravity such as I had not believed existed anywhere in the world. Outside of the fortunate minority, the people literally live in rags. Their pitiful wages cannot buy even the cheapest of clothes as we understand the word. The peasants and most of the manual workers in the cities wear smocks and shapeless breeches which they make of sacking or such other material as they can get."

Mr. Drew goes on to say that, in spite of the increase in population, no new houses have been built in Moscow since the revolution. The only increased living accommodation for the three million new residents has been some indescribably ugly, badly built and unsanitary apartment dwellings capable of housing, even under present Russian conditions, about 50,000 people. This is at a time when Great Britain built more than three million new homes and many other countries made wonderful advances in housing their people under improved modern conditions.

After comparing conditions in Russia with those in France at the time prior to the revolution, Colonel Drew says:

"The simple and terrible truth is that the Russian people are now living under conditions far worse than those which preceded the revolution. According to the official statistics of Professor S. Prokopovich, the buying power of the workers is less than half what it was in 1913 if it is interpreted in terms of the food and clothing which can be bought by the average wage. Not even the most ingenious propaganda can disguise the effect on national morale of such extremes between the poverty of the worker and the extravagance of the party leaders."

Colonel Drew then quotes from Vincent Sheean, a journalist who has until now been an apologist for the Russian system and who now says in part:

"A measure of industrialization and of agrarian collectivization has been achieved at the cost of millions of lives; the workers have lost every liberty hitherto known to man, and can choose neither their place, times nor kind of work; they cannot organize, strike or protest in any way; the prison and the knout are installed in factory and collective farm."

"The human and economic waste has been colossal, more, probably, than any nation has ever known in twenty years of its history; and the enslavement of the proletariat and peasantry, which no longer have even the right of movement from one part of the same district to another, is without parallel in the records of mankind."

Miss Ketchum Becomes Bride

Pretty Wedding At First United Church Manse Saturday Evening

A quiet wedding, but one of much local interest, took place on Saturday evening at the United Church manse, Rev. J. C. Jackson officiating, when Mildred Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Ketchum, was married to John Edward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wide, of Cardiff, Wales. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charmingly attired in a short navy blue velvet costume trimmed with gold, with off-the-face hat to match, and carried a beautiful bouquet of mauve and yellow chrysanthemums. She was attended by her sister, Miss Clara-bell Ketchum, who wore a most becoming wine-colored costume with gold trimming and hair ornament. She wore a corsage of rose carnations.

Fred Radcliffe attended the groom.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the marriage. Some forty to fifty guests were received by Mrs. Claude C. Ketchum, wearing a navy blue crepe costume with hat to match and corsage of rose carnations. The bride and groom received the congratulations of friends under a wedding bell with pink and white decorations. The table, covered with a beautiful lace cloth, was centred with a three-tier wedding cake and graceful with rose and white carnations. Mrs. James Krikevsky and Mrs. William Brass noured and serveurs were Mrs. L. Wide, Mrs. W. Roberts and the Misses Frances Yager and Olive van Cooten.

Previous to the serving of refreshments, Meth Davis sang the ever-popular bridal song "O Promise Me" with much feeling. The toast to the bride was proposed by William Brass and replied to very suitably by Fred Radcliffe. Many beautiful and useful wedding gifts were on display, testifying to the popularity of the bride who has lived in Prince Rupert since her babyhood, attending the local schools.

Following the marriage Mr. and Mrs. Wide are residing on Eleventh Avenue for the winter, proceeding to Dawson in the spring where they will take up permanent residence.

Five thousand Prince Rupert people read the Daily News. It pays to let them know what you have to sell.

Christian Liberty Should Be War Aim Says Local Pastor

"If we win this war, and I think we will, will we have the liberty for which we say we are fighting or will we forget God in our victory as we did after the last war?" asked Rev. H. G. Funston in his morning sermon at First Presbyterian Church yesterday. The subject was "Christian Liberty."

Christian liberty Mr. Funston defined as a state where Christian principles had such a hold that other considerations were of secondary importance. Unless Christian beliefs were embraced, there would still be the bondage of terror and sin.

The challenge to Christian believers would be greater than ever, declared the pastor. Possibly the grey field uniforms were not the worst enemy the world was facing today. Were not ungodliness and disregard of Christian principles even worse.

Boy Scouts To Boost Apples

New Type of Tag Day on Saturday In Prince Rupert

The First Prince Rupert Troop and the Canadian Legion Seal Cove Troop of Boy Scouts are going to help popularize British Columbia apples on Saturday which is to be known as "Boy Scout Apple Day." Scouts will call at city homes with a basket of juicy, red British Columbia apples and offer them at five cents apiece though they will not refuse more. Only three apples will be sold to a customer. In the afternoon, the Scouts will sell apples on the street as a new form of tag day—instead of donors receiving only a tag, they are given a nice, big red apple to munch.

The Boy Scout movement is non-denominational and non-sectarian and is represented in this city by over thirty growing boys training for good health and citizenship under capable leadership. Scouting does not allow the direct solicitation of funds for its work. So "Boy Scout Apple Day" is admittedly for the purpose of raising funds for carrying on their work in Prince Rupert and Seal Cove. But in helping the Scouts, the citizens are asked to help themselves to health and help the B. C. apple growers. The apples are being purchased through local sources and the limit placed on individual sales is to avoid interfering with regular retail trade.

U-BOAT CREW TREATED TO MEAL ON DECK

This scene, passed by the German censor, is unusual because it gives for the first time since the beginning of the war a view of a flotilla of German U-boats in an unnamed naval base. In the foreground the crew of an undersea boat, just returned from a tour of duty at sea, are enjoying the luxury of a meal on the deck of their boat. In the background are at least seven of the undersea craft riding their moorings.

CHAMBERLAIN DEFINES WAR AND PEACE AIMS

no cause that could be more worthy of the supreme sacrifice. Let us be thankful that we are not having the large casualty lists like those of the first days of the last war."

The Prime Minister went on to refer to the anxiety, disturbance, of mind, material loss and severe hardship that so many of the people were enduring—not forgetting the black-out. Business in many cases was dislocated. Buildings had been commandeered at short notice. Parents had been separated from their children. Heavy taxation had impaired incomes and had imposed severe restrictions upon expenditure. There were irritations and inconveniences and many difficulties and discomforts. Many of these had been caused by precautions against attack from the air which had not occurred. Had such attacks occurred and the preparations not been made, the government would have been blamed—and rightly so.

Must Still Watch

"Even now, we cannot assume that the Germans will not change their tactics and make a sudden attack from the air. Therefore we must continue many of the restrictions although some of these may be revised if it is considered wise to do so without undue risk to the public safety. Meantime, we are sure all these restrictions will be cheerfully borne.

"Some of you may ask: why have we not attacked the enemy with more vigor? In reply, I would say that the art of war consists in bringing pressure upon the enemy at the right place and time. We are not losing by delay but time is on our side. Every week that passes by intensifies the economic pressure upon Germany. The blockade is slowly but surely depriving her of the resources she must have to pursue the war. How different is the position of the Allies who have unlimited resources of men and materials! We are bound to win in the end. It is only a question of how long it will take us to achieve our purposes, which brings me to the question of 'What is the purpose for which we are today standing side by side with our French and Polish allies?'"

"In my mind," continued the Prime Minister, "I make a clear distinction between war aims and peace aims.

"The war aim, to put it briefly, is to defeat the enemy, not merely to defeat military forces but to defeat aggression and a bullying mentality which would dominate people by force, a mentality which finds satisfaction in persecution and torture of innocent people and in violation of pledged word whenever it appears convenient.

"If the German people can be convinced that that spirit is bad for themselves as well as for the rest of the world, they will abandon it. If they abandon it without bloodshed so much the better but abandoned it must be."

A New Europe

Peace aims could only be determined by the passage of time and events but broad principles might be declared at this time.

"Our desire should be, after accomplishing the war aims, to establish a new Europe, not founded upon the tearing up of old frontiers but a Europe with a new spirit, a Europe of nations which would approach the difficulties they face with goodwill and mutual tolerance. In such a Europe the fear of aggression will have ceased to exist. Problems will be settled on equal terms by sitting at a round table with the help of disinterested third parties if considered desirable."

There could be no lasting peace, the Prime Minister believed, except with a constant flow of trade, an exchange of goods and services.

The new Europe, Mr. Chamberlain said, should also give each country the unfettered right to choose its own form of internal government so long as that country did not pursue external policy injurious to its neighbors. In such a Europe armaments could be gradually dropped as a useless expenditure except for maintaining internal law and order.

There would be needed machinery capable of conducting and guiding the new Europe in the right direction. How long it would take to set up this machinery could not be predicted nor was it necessary to designate at this time the kind of machinery that might be needed.

"I add my hope," said the Prime Minister "that a Germany, animated with a new spirit, may take part in the new operation."

"First, however, we must attune our war aims and win the war. In the war aim members of the British Commonwealth of Nations are united today as they have never been before in all our history. Let us gird up our loins confident in tenacity and resolute in determination that this reign of terror under the present German government must come to an end in order to build a new Europe.

"We know we are fighting with right on our side and against the wrong. Let us go forward and, with God's blessing on our arms, we shall prevail."

(A true story)

One of our customers said recently, "Why don't you tell parents that the way to please their children is to let them open a savings account themselves? My little daughter aged six, came to her mother the other day, and said she wanted to go to the bank herself and open an account. Her mother, being wise, called up the Bank Manager, told him the story, and said that her small girl would be in to see him soon . . . Sure enough, in came the child, clutching a little purse. Signed her name four times [which she told her mother afterwards was foolish] and got her bank book. Did it all herself!"

That young lady has the right idea. She regards the bank as HER bank. You can make it yours.

PRIVATE AND CONFIDENTIAL

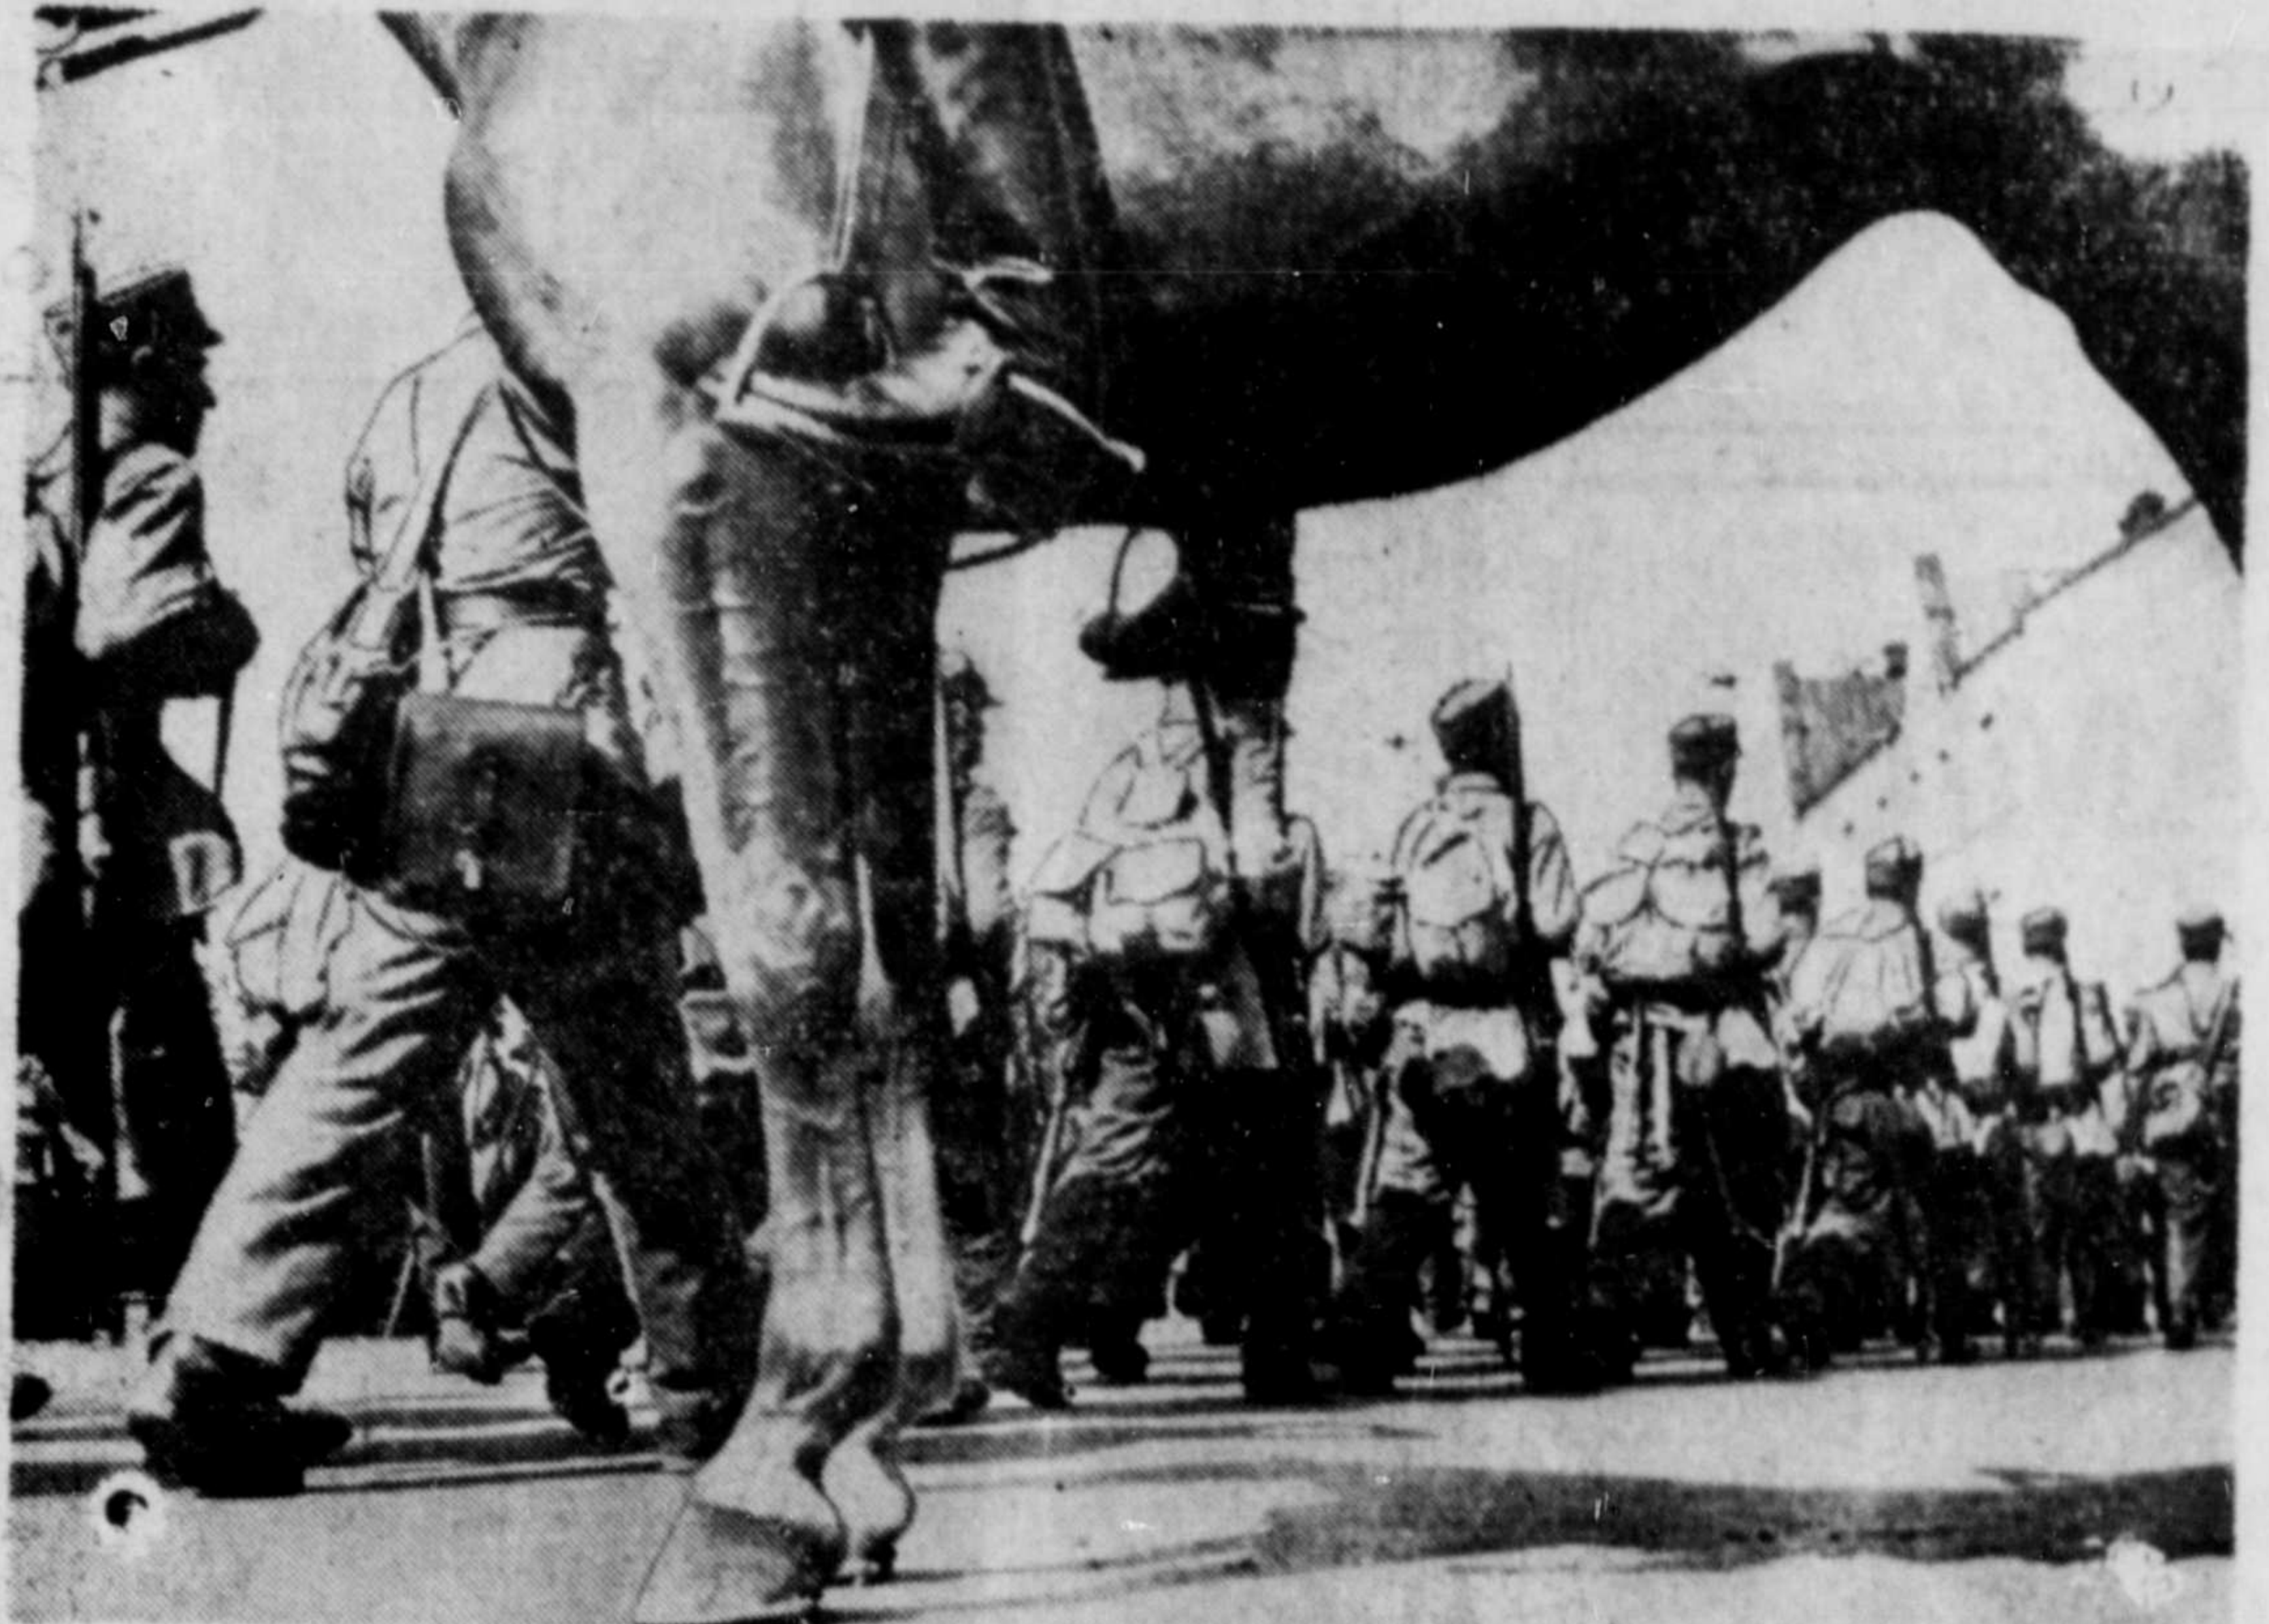

You would like to meet this little girl . . . just as we did. But we cannot divulge her name. For you see, her banking affairs are private; the details of her account jealously guarded as are those of all our customers. Sorry!

NOVEL IS ON SCREEN

"Wuthering Heights" Picturized at Capitol With Merle Oberon and Laurence Olivier

Picturization of a poignantly dramatic and stirringly romantic novel, "Wuthering Heights," starring Merle Oberon and Laurence Olivier, comes as the feature offering to the screen of the Capitol Theatre here for the first half of this week.

The story unfolds on the wild and desolate moors of Yorkshire. It is the tale of a high-spirited quick-tempered beautiful girl who is madly loved by two men— one, half gypsy and half gentleman, the other rich and well-born. The girl is desperately in love with the former but is led by glittering wealth and esteemed social position into an unhappy romance with the latter. The strange three-cornered love story is told with dramatic impact, sweeping romance and interms of stark human emotions, mysteriously influenced by the desolate moors. The east in support of Miss Oberon and Olivier includes David Niven, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Flora Robson, Donald Crisp, Hugh Williams and Miles Mander.

Lavish sets and elaborate period costumes are among the features of the picture which have been ranged to give appropriate ground.
