Major Sea Disaster In Sinking Of Italian Liner; Some Believed Lost In Mediterranean Sea

TOULON, France, January 22: (CP)—A few crew members are still missing today with 539 survivors landed following a major sea disaster, not, however, associated with the war, in the destruction by fire at sea early Sunday of the Italian liner Orazio. The 11,669-ton ship, with 412 passengers and crew of 300 on board, was shattered by a violent explosion after which she took fire sixty miles from Barcelona. The survivors took to lifeboats and some jumped into the sea without waiting. British and French warships were among the vessels which picked them up, taking them to Marseilles, Toulon and other ports.

BRITISH TAKE OFF GERMANS

Interesting Case Arises as Result of Incident Off Japanese Coast

TOKIO, Jan. 22: (CP)—The Japanese government formally protested to Great Britain today at the halting of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Asama Maru by a British cruiser off the Japanese coast and the taking off of twenty-one German seamen who were on their way home via Russia from the United States where they had been employed on an American freighter. The protest, delivered to the British embassy, is regarded as a routine diplomatic move and is not expected in Japanese official quarters to develop into a major controversy.

The Germans, it is suggested, were technicians and skilled seamen and are regarded by the British as being of possible aid to Germany in actively prosecuting the war, thereby being legal prisoners of war. It is expected they will be taken to Hong Kong and interned.

In a message to the ship owners, Capt. Watanabe of the trans-Pacific liner says that the British naval officers halter his ship came aboard and, after making inquiries, removed the Germans. As a result of this action, officials of N.Y.K. said that it was probable that the company would refuse to carry any more Germans on its boats. This may affect over 500 German members of the crew of the scuttled German liner Columbus now at San Francisco awaiting transport to Vladivostok enroute home on Japanese ships.

SOVIET DEAD TESTIFY TO FINLAND'S GRIM COURAGE

The twisted bodies of these slain Russian troops graphically tell the story of Finland's grim resistance to the Soviet invader. This picture was made on the Karelian Isthmus front. Lying where they fell, cut down by Finnish fire and the bitter winter weather that has proved the brave little nation's stoutest ally to date, the Red Army soldiers are part of the thousands annihilated in vain attempts to smash through the Mannerheim line of defences. Neutral estimates place Russian casualties as high as 33,000 on all fronts in Finland.

Strong Red Attacks Thrown Back Air Raids In Finland Continue

HELSINGFORS, Jan. 22: (CP)—Strong Russian attacks were flung back both on the Karelian Isthmus and north of Lake Ladoga at the week-end, a Finnish communique reports. The Russians suffered heavy losses.

In the fighting on land, the Russians are still meeting with reverses on all fronts at the hands of the stubborn Finns. The retreating Reds have finally taken a stand fifty miles from their frontier in the Arctic area. Thousand Russian bombs are estimated to have been dropped at the week-end on twenty-seven Finnish towns but only one person was killed and four injured. There was considerable property damage however. Eleven Russian planes are believed to have been brought down.

The Finns retaliated on Sunday for heavy bombing raids by the Russians over their cities by attacking Russian air bases across the Baltic Sea in Estonia. The Finns also dropped bombs on the Russian naval base at Kronstadt. Overhanging clouds today lessened air raid activities.

Now the freezing of the Gulf of Finland from Estonian to Finnish shores confronts Finland with the possibility of an over-ice attack from Russian bases in Estonia. Foreign observers speculate on the chances of success of such a thrust but the Finns said they were well prepared to meet it. Some sections of the coast are already barricaded with barbed wire.

Russian planes were ranging over southern Finland Saturday, heavily bombing Abö and other towns.

LONDON, Jan. 22: (CP)—Four British ships, including a destroyer, and three neutral vessels were included in a heavy week-end toll in the war at sea. Eight of the crew are known to be dead, seventy-three others are missing and may be dead while 118 are reported to have been saved. The commander went down with his ship.

Twenty-nine persons are believed to have been lost with the six merchant vessels.

In addition to the Grenville, the other victims of the war at sea were:

Estonian steamship Nautic, 1050 tons.

Swedish steamship Flandria, 1179 tons.

Danish steamship Telkla, 1469 tons. In addition, the 1569-ton Norwegian vessel Maurita is presumed to be lost.

WAS HE RESPONSIBLE?

It is just possible that the late Senator Borah, who died at the week-end, was responsible for the present war. When the President of his country planned and carried through the formation of a league of nations for the purpose of insuring peace it was Senator Borah who led the opposition which defeated it and destroyed its usefulness to the world.

Borah was a stubborn man of great ability but possibly little sense. He lacked vision but was consistent in his attitude. Often he was right but on such subjects as the support of the League of Nations and his opposition to tariff reciprocity and in being a stickler for constitutional practice he found himself out of touch with the spirit of the times. Had the League of Nations received the full support of the United States it seems most probable Japan would not have raided Manchuria, Italy would not have taken Ethiopia and Albania, the Spanish civil war would have been nipped in the bud, Czechoslovakia would not have been invaded and neither would Poland and today the world would have been at peace. If the present war is a bad thing for the world, Borah was one of the responsible parties in failing to prevent it. Most of the evil in the world is done by well-meaning and able people whose abilities have been misdirected.

TROTSKY'S VIEWS

Leon Trotsky, the father of Bolshevism, now an exile in Mexico, in an article in Liberty, declares that "on the wave of a new revolution in Russia a new international organization would inevitably arise which would wipe out the Comintern and deal a mortal blow to the authority of the Soviet bureaucracy in its national entrenchment in the U.S.S.R."

Speaking of the bureaucracy and its work the same authority says: "the tendency toward Socialist equality proclaimed by the revolution has been stamped out and defamed. In the U.S.S.R. there are twelve to fifteen million privileged individuals who concentrate in their hands about one half of the national income and who call this regime 'socialism.' On the other hand there are approximately one hundred and sixty million people oppressed by the bureaucracy and caught in the grip of dire poverty."

Trotsky does not think Germany will triumph. He says "German imperialism arrived too late; its military fury will end in a tremendous catastrophe." He sees all sorts of changes in the meantime. He says that so long as Hitler remains strong Stalin will remain his satellite but he will break with Germany when it suits his purpose to do so.

HIS VIEWS PRONOUNCED

Borah Opposed League, Criticized Britain and Favored Russian Recognition

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 22.—In the Senate Chamber, with President Franklin D. Roosevelt and other leaders of the nation including senators, congressmen, judges and administrators, tribute was paid today to the memory of the late Senator William E. Borah. There was a state funeral service after which the body left for home at Boise, Idaho, where interment will be made.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22: (AP)—In the international field the late Senator Borah was one of the "irreconcilables" in opposing American membership in the League of Nations and adherence to the world court, a critic of Great Britain on the subject of Irish freedom and an advocate of recognition of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

As a champion of Russian recognition he provided many Americans with letters of introduction to Moscow officials and was often referred to as "Russia's unofficial passport bureau." Soviet officials communicated with him frequently.

"I would establish normal relations with the Russian government in doing so I would not endorse that government or the communistic theory but I would have no fear of contact with it."

Guards State Rights

He was a firm believer in maintaining the balance among the executive, legislative and judicial branches of the government as set up in the federal constitution and fought measures which he deemed in conflict with that principle of which threatened to invade state rights. Thus, although he favored votes for women, he opposed the federal suffrage amendment, holding it was a matter of state legislation. On much the same ground he voted against the child labor amendment.

Immediately after the world war he began a campaign for the release of political prisoners. He opposed American military occupation of Haiti and San Domingo and advocated a small army and general disarmament.

He was known as a friend of labor and initiated several senate investigations of working conditions in the coal and steel industries. Also he was an advocate of economy and largely on that ground opposed the soldier bonus system. He was a foe of high tariffs and fought Canadian reciprocity.

One of the first to sense the breaking down of party lines, he nevertheless would have no part in third party movements. Two parties, he held, was the ideal arrangement for the American system of government.

Clings To Party

Thus when Theodore Roosevelt bolted the 1912 Republican convention, indignation at the "steam roller" tactics which forced President Taft's renomination, Borah, although a Roosevelt floor leader, did not follow his leader into the "Bull Moose" ranks.

In 1924 he assailed many of the policies of President Calvin Coolidge at a time when "Bob" LaFollette the elder was gathering his forces for a third party presidential ticket. But Borah refused to join the cause of the Wisconsin senator.

Again in 1932 when the shaggy-haired Idahoan clashed with President Hoover, to whose election in 1928 he contributed materially, he exhibited the same reluctance to desert the party. The break with Hoover came over farm relief and the fact that the Hawley-Smoot tariff act raised rates on industrial as well as farm schedules. Borah took no part in the campaign against Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Unlike some other Republican independents, who carried their bolt from Hoover to the point of public support of Roosevelt's campaign and of advocacy of his 1933 emergency recovery program, Borah went his uniquely independent way.

Opposes 'N. R. A.' Movement

He voted for several of Roosevelt's emergency measures but strongly opposed others on economic and constitutional grounds. He also disliked the way in which congress delegated broad powers to the chief executive.

He was particularly bitter against the national industrial recovery act which suspended anti-trust laws to permit competitors in an industry to agree on wages and hours of labor in the interest of increased employment and a consequent higher buying power that would raise prices. Borah classed this as "an advance step toward the ultra-concentration of wealth and the first step to end all anti-trust laws."

An inflationist and advocate of rehabilitation of silver, Borah predicted from the first that the world economic conference at London in June, 1933, would go up in thin air unless it did something about the money question. He endorsed President Roosevelt's action, however, in refusing to enter into an agreement there to stabilize the dollar before the domestic drive had advanced prices to a normal level.

Satisfied To Be Senator

After he became senator, Borah never sought any other office. In 1896 he was an unsuccessful candidate for the house of representatives as a free silver republican. Then in 1903 he ran for the senatorship, receiving 22 of the necessary 26 Idaho legislative votes for that office. It was related that he refused a "trade" at that time which might have given him the needed margin. Four years later he won the post and the legislature re-elected him in January, 1913. He won popular majorities in the November elections of 1918, 1924 and 1930.

He virtually declined the vice-presidential nomination with Coolidge in 1924 and turned down earlier an opportunity to become republican leader of the senate under Harding.

Senator Borah was a lawyer by profession. He was born at Fairfield, Ill., on June 29, 1865, went through Southern Illinois Academy and studied law at the University of Kansas. He was admitted to the bar in 1889, began practice at Lyons, Kans., moved to Boise, Idaho, in 1891 and won broad plaudits as an advocate a few years later when he was special prosecutor in the celebrated trial of Haywood, Pettibone and Moyer. They were officials of the Western Federation of Miners, accused of having caused the assassination of Frank Steunenberg, former governor of Idaho.

When he went to the senate he already had a reputation as an orator, but it was years later before the country was to see the full scope of his forensic powers. During the historic fight over the League of Nations, he attracted wide attention by the clarity of his arguments and the force of his delivery.

Shans Society Affairs
In the national capital, he took little part in the social life, preferring to spend his leisure hours with a book or on solitary horseback rides in Rock Creek Park. He was a total abstainer from alcoholic drinks, tobacco, coffee and tea.

At 30 he married Miss Mamie O'Connell, daughter of a former governor of Idaho. Mrs. Borah was frequently in the society headlines, entertaining foreign dignitaries who never missed seeing her husband on visits to Washington.

The senator was greatly moved by and grateful for the efforts of the public health service in 1932 in rushing serum to save the life of Mrs. Borah who became ill with parrot fever in Boise.

Interest Taken In Real Estate

More Activity Than in Years Recorded Here

There is a decided interest being taken in real estate the last few weeks, more than has been the case in the past ten years. The city has sold two lots on Fourth Avenue almost across from the Presbyterian Church to H. K. Christensen on which it is understood the purchaser is going to build this year.

It is understood that the city has sold an improved property in the downtown district although officials are not saying anything about being taken.

THAT TIGHTENING UP

Editor, Daily News:
In this following quotation from a recent editorial of yours you make your position quite clear: "It seems too bad that when Canada is at war it should find attempts to undermine her at home. . . . France is shutting down on the enemy within her gates and there is no good reason why Canada should not do the same." How you reconcile this unequivocal statement with your "expressed" desire to maintain that Canadian freedom which you boast so much about, is difficult to see. One simply can not have one's cake and eat it too for, if censorship of speech and press, destruction of the powers of labor unions, maintaining of concentration camps and proscription of political thought constitute Fascism, then it may be truthfully stated that France is today a Fascist country. Is this what you wish? The politicians on top would give the impression that these curbs are only for the duration of the war—but who knows?

The following list of men in France who have been hunted and arrested, except for a few very aged men who are kept under police surveillance, is illuminating. Among the victims are Marcel Deat, formerly a leader of the Socialist Party; Victor Marguerite, novelist, army officer turned pacifist; Prof. Emil Chartier; Georges Pioch, journalist; Henri Jeanson, author and film producer; Maurice Wulens, editor of "Les Humbles"; Michel Alexandro, secretary of the Committee of Anti-Fascist Intellectuals; and Prof. Felicien Chailay, whose "Souvenirs of Colonization" made a profound impression with its revelations that French imperialism in equatorial Africa had reduced the native population from 40,000,000 to 2,500,000. Furthermore religious leaders have not been spared. French pacifists now have their "Pastor Niemoeller" in Rev. Philippe Vernior, a Protestant clergyman, behind the bars. Also imprisoned is Henrie Roser, international secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, a world-wide pacifist organization. I might point out for your information that none in the above list is a Communist. Also, already some of the wives of Trade Union leaders have received notices of their husbands death "in prison."

Let there remain any doubt as to your real meaning you say "there is likely to be a tightening up" here in Canada. Timed as this editorial was to coincide with the two year sentence meted out to the editor of the Toronto Clarion, our Eastern Communist paper, and the cut in our recent relief rate, this can only mean that you are fully aware of the order of events to be expected. Therefore your policy can only lead to, first, the suppression of the Communist Party, then to the C.C.F. Coincident with this, labor unions will be destroyed and then all civil rights of the ordinary citizen can be completely and safely ignored. Under these circumstances it would be most unsafe for your "enemy within our gates."

I can not believe that the citizens of Prince Rupert are behind you in this program.

R. E. COLEMAN.

"Stanley and Livingstone" Features at Capitol For First Half of This Week

Picturization of one of the greatest historical adventures on record, "Stanley and Livingstone," one of those much-discussed and long awaited films, comes to the screen of the Capitol Theatre here for the first half of this week. It is the story of the young New York newspaperman who received orders seventy years ago from his publisher to go to Africa and ascertain the fact of David Livingstone, the resultant adventures changing the whole course of his life and bringing him undying fame. The story of necessity centres around the adventures of the newspaperman who was in time to give the world more knowledge of Africa than any other man but there is also romance woven into the theme and the picture is said by those who have seen it to possess all the essential entertainment features.

Spencer Tracy plays the leading role of Stanley while Sir Cecil Hardwicke has the part of Dr. Livingstone. Nancy Kelly and Richard Greene play an important part in the romantic story. Walter Brennan, Charles Coburn, Henry Hull and Henry Travers are also integral members of the cast.
