FIGHTING IS MORE INTENSE

Allies Continue to Close in on Narvik and Trondheim With Sea and Land Forces

Germans Most Active In Air

Are Now Engaged in Indiscriminate Bombings, Laying Waste Norwegian Communities

LONDON, April 23: (CP)— All phases of the war in Norway are becoming more intense. Allied forces are continuing a determined drive by land, sea and air on Narvik and Trondheim. To the south-east there is also bitter fighting with directly contradictory reports as to its progress although the Allies appear to have made decisive gains. German denials notwithstanding.

Both the Allies and the Germans claim to have possession of Lillehammer which is evidently the focal centre of present fighting in the area to the north of Oslo.

There have been conflicting reports in regard to the possession of Hamar and Elverum but, as suggested by the British authorities themselves yesterday, it now seems the claim of Norwegians from Stockholm that they had been re-taken from the Germans were premature.

Savage Air Attacks

Savage aerial attacks by swarms of fighting planes have featured the German campaign, their objectives being British troop concentrations although they are not hesitating at bombing civilians without warning. Five Norwegian towns are reported to have been virtually destroyed by explosion and flames. The ravaged towns include Hamar, Elverum, Dombas, Steinkjar and Namsos.

With the British naval concentration off the Norwegian coast being increased and the landing forces greatly strengthened by almost continual arrival of troops, arms and ammunition, rings are being drawn gradually tighter around Narvik and Trondheim.

Narvik, faced by bombardment from the sea and closing in forces by land, is expected to fall within hours. In response to an Allied warning, the Norwegian civilian population has completely evacuated and trapped Germans are preparing to make a last desperate stand. One German force of 1500 men is said to be completely surrounded. In all, there are estimated to be 3500 German soldiers at Narvik. There was a snowstorm there yesterday.

British and French troops have been playing an important part in the forming of a spearhead of the drive upon Trondheim from Namsos in which area there is deep snow. Steinkjar has been occupied and from there the advance continues steadily southward.

An effort of Germans to land troops at Steinkjar, which lies at the head of Trondheim Fjord, failed yesterday.

Meantime, the Allies are also continuing the advance northward towards Trondheim from Molde, Andelsnes and Dombas and claim to now have control of railway lines leading from various directions into Trondheim. The Germans are hastily throwing up fortresses around Trondheim.

Further British naval activity against German transports in the Skagerrack area was reported today. The Germans claim that their shipments of men and heavy fighting equipment, including armored cars and tanks, to Norway are in-

MUST WAR TO DEATH, HE URGES

Battle Not Only Against Hitler But Whole German People, Declares Alfred Duff-Cooper On St. George's Day

LONDON, April 23: (CP)—War to the death against the whole German people and not merely the Nazi regime was urged by Rt. Hon. Alfred Duff-Cooper, former First Lord of the Admiralty, in an address before the Royal Society of St. George at St. George's Day banquet in Grosvenor House tonight. Duff-Cooper's subject was "The Toast is England." He was substituting for Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who was unable to keep the appointment owing to pressure of war duties.

Duff-Cooper said that the German attacks on Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Denmark and Norway were "crimes of the whole people." "The Allies should not be deceived, he warned, into later accepting the explanation that unrepresentative politicians had committed the crimes. "Let us not underestimate our antagonists," he said. It was "wishful thinking, dangerous thinking, to believe we can drive a wedge between the German government and the German people. We have got to defeat them first in battle and it may be a formidable and fearful task. How long the war will take no one can say but victory is certain to be ours in the end." No nation that had command of the sea had ever been beaten in a great war. Great Britain had command of the sea when this war started and its command was even stronger today. Great Britain had access to all the raw materials of the world. It also had the best wishes of every civilized and liberty loving people in the world and the strong arm of its own services. With firm determination and grim confidence, Britons were going laughingly and gallantly into battle by land, sea and air and victory would surely be theirs.

Germany in the past had appeared in many ugly forms but never more ugly than today under the gaze of blood-stained money-makers and murderers.

Duff-Cooper's speech was punctuated with many rounds of applause.

Chancellor Asks People to Accept New Levies "For Sake of Victory"—Revenues Exceed Estimates and Expenditures Are Lower

LONDON, April 23: (CP)—Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced a war budget of £2,667,000,000 (11,879,000,000) for the fiscal year 1940-41 in the House of Commons today and imposed a host of new levies which he asked the public to accept "for the sake of victory." They ranged from increased levies on beer and tobacco, adding one penny to the ordinary letter postal rate of 1 1/2 pence.

Sir John said that steps would be taken to squelch tax dodging and predicted measures that would increase revenue by $101,000,000 to £1,234,000,000, leaving £1,433,000,000 to be borrowed. Immunity from large income surtaxes may be reduced from £2,000 to £1,500. The basic income tax rate is unchanged at 37 1/2 per cent. The beer tax is increased one penny per pint and the whiskey tax is increased fifteen shillings per proof gallon. The tobacco tax is raised three pence per ounce and matches and telephone tolls are increased.

Gloomy news was offset when the Chancellor asserted that revenues of the past year exceeded expectations while expenditures were below estimates.

FEATHERS ARE FINE

New York Debutantes Go Strong For Gay Plumage In Spring Trends Of Head Pieces

NEW YORK, April 23: (CP)—Debutantes are returning to feathers this spring, adapting gay plumage to their personalities.

At a recent beauty-fashion show by the Tuesday Deb Club the canary, bluebird, robin, ostrich, pheasant and peacock were inspirations for showy ornamentation. And the debutantes chose make-up to correspond with the exotic headpieces.

To feather one's hair the 1940 way, one will need lacquer and wire. And, says Josef who has designed some of the new hair-dos, one should keep the hair fairly simple, the better to show up bright feathers.

To simulate a canary, one girl swept her golden blond hair up on the sides into a swirling pompadour on top, using the yellow canary feathers to hug the back of her head and swoop around her shoulders so a tip touched her lips.

The bluebird coiffure worn by another debutante placed her dark blond hair in a topknot in front and combed the rest back from her face to fall forward over her shoulders. Wire and barrette held the hair so brilliant blue feathers could be laced into it.

Another striking headpiece was the black cock arrangement for Miss Patricia Snydam, a brunette with white skin. From a Brunette roll at the back, her hair swept high on top with aid of wiring and lacquer. The startling effect of her coiffure came from the way the black cock feathers marched straight up the back of her head.

Perhaps the strangest sight was pheasant feathers shooting in two upward directions from a V-shaped roll at the back of the younger Mrs. Halsey Fiske. Her hair was parted in the centre and carried high from the sides. The pheasant feathers seemed at least two feet tall. A tawny color make-up enhanced her olive beauty.

LABORITE PREMIERS

Government Heads of Norway and Sweden Made Their Own Careers

LONDON, April 23: (CP)—International politics in all of the Scandinavian countries have followed the same route. The Prime Ministers of Norway and Sweden both climbed from the ranks of labor.

Per Albin Hansson, Prime Minister of Sweden, was born in 1885, the son of a mason. He joined a cooperative and through this entered the trade union movement and labor politics.

Upon the death of Hjalmar Branting, head of the Swedish socialist group, he succeeded to the leadership.

Johan Nygaardsvold, Prime Minister of Norway, 60-year-old son of a poor farmer, began working in a sawmill. In 1901, he emigrated to the United States where he helped build the railways of the west until 1907.

On his return to Norway, he entered the trade union movement and got into labor politics.

The two countries are good friends now although once they fought each other viciously. The governments have the same goals: child welfare, social reform, a high standard of living, spread of culture and education.

They have wiped out poverty, illiteracy and have achieved the

THE MARTIAL SPIRIT

Indications seem to be that any nation which loses its power of fighting tends to go down and out. This is not a new discovery. Mussolini made it early in his career and that is why he had all Italian children taught to glorify war as a profession and read books which gave them martial inspiration. Something similar has taken place in Germany.

This war spirit is not exactly Christian but it seems to work and, while the present unsafe condition exists throughout the world, it seems that, to some extent at least, we have to show ability to defend ourselves if necessary. None of us even in civil life, can allow ourselves to be walked over by our neighbors, a tendency which seems prevalent everywhere. In national life this tendency leads to war.

Those who have dealings with the public can pick out the go-getters who push themselves to the fore. The weakling is always pushed aside. This is just as true in Russia as in any other country. In Canada we find the lads who have had to mix a good deal with their fellows learn to give and take and are likely to be a success.

As time passes we may find it possible to educate our children to the brotherly love ideal. Yet it is possible we do not realize what brotherly love means. Members of the same family quarrel and fight among themselves often more than they do with strangers. Ask any mother of more than one child if she has perfect harmony in the family. She will, if she is normal, tell you that her children are a great trial because they quarrel so much among themselves. It seems to come natural to them. It is an exhibition of brotherly love. It does not take much to arouse the martial spirit in such children.

HOW WE EDUCATE

In the democracies, such as Canada, United States and Great Britain, we show our brotherly love during election times by telling how dishonest, weak, foolish and imbecile are our opponents. We see no good in them and thus we teach our children to feel that everyone in authority is a crook, a grafter or a useless imbecile. That is not done in the autocracies. It is not allowed. That is why the leaders in our democracies are not highly esteemed. We pick the best men we know how and then abuse them after they are chosen. It is a common thing to hear that politicians are all crooks. Reiteration of the sentiment by opponents at election time breeds this attitude. Is it any wonder that the Reds look upon all who own anything, even a boat, as dishonest?

WARTIME FASHIONS

Dress Designer Who Kept Shop Open Finds Satisfaction Of Business Come-back

By MARY GOLDIE LONDON, April 23: (CP)—Miss Olive Todd, dress designer and owner of a business in the heart of Mayfair and well known in Canada where she carried on a similar business in Toronto, has just held her first wartime fashion show.

Last year, in times of so-called peace, her salon was beautifully decorated with spring flowers. This year, in time of war, the flowers were there again, making the room a place of cheer for eyes wearied by a long winter. The war has not closed Covent Garden market nor kept Miss Todd from making her early morning pilgrimages to buy quantities of lovely blossoms.

The doors of Miss Todd's shop did not close on Monday morning, September 4, 1939, as did so many others. She made a decision—and she has stuck to it. Many other, perhaps more famous, shops closed on the fateful morning and have remained closed since. Some closed from fear and some because, during those first days and months of war, there was a decided falling-off in the buying of clothes.

With the coming of war came the first reaction: "We must save our money, we must not buy new clothes. We are in uniform, therefore we don't need that kind of costume any more!" Miss Todd's decision was a tremendous one to make with adjacent doors closing one by one. After all, it was her profession, her career, her art—her very life. And, as such, it was worth a fight to keep alive.

Business Return One partner gone off to do A. R. P. service, another on the call-up list, a decrease in business, an increase in the price of materials, a large rental to pay—none of these things deterred her. Also, she had a conscience which said to her: "Keep as many of your staff as you can. They need the money to live."

While all this was going on customers came slowly back and work piled up. London began to come to life again with the coming of spring. After the first fear, women began to think again of clothes and new hats. Prices of materials were also rising so steadily there was a strong feeling some of them would shortly be unobtainable and many women thought it best to accumulate a supply in advance.

As time went on models for the show were designed and put under way. It was to be done in a small way but with a smarter collection and the two loveliest mannequins obtainable. So the show went on—and the people who watched it may or may not have looked beyond the beauty of line of suit and dress and seen the fascinating story that lies behind—of woman's courage, bravery and will-power.

The minister said that, therefore, necessary adjustments and renovations are being made to the exhibits at the New York fair.

THIRD AVENUE Open Saturday Night

Spring is really here and pretty soon it will be summer. It seems to be about time that all this year's plants were in their places with the exception of a few of the more delicate varieties. Only a few people seem to sow their flower seeds in the open ground. They either sow in boxes or under glass or they buy the seedlings when the time arrives from planting out. I have not yet planted my nasturtiums because they are to replace the forget-me-nots as soon as they are over and they will not be needed for several weeks. I shall sow them in a large box and transplant as soon as the ground is ready.

column will not be interested in all these minor changes. Nearly every home now has its garden plot. Many of them are interesting now. Some of them will continue interesting all summer but there are always a few that do not get past the spring digging. Yet even that is something to be thankful for. There is always the hope that the interest will continue.

I am told that there are some very fine new day lilies (hemerocallis). Not only are there more colors than formerly but they bloom at different periods of the summer. I have one that is in bud and will soon be showing color. I think it is "Apricot." The lemon colored flowers of the old fashioned plants will not be showing for a month or so. I should very much like to have a whole series blooming from May to September but for anything of that sort the garden should be a more permanent one than mine.

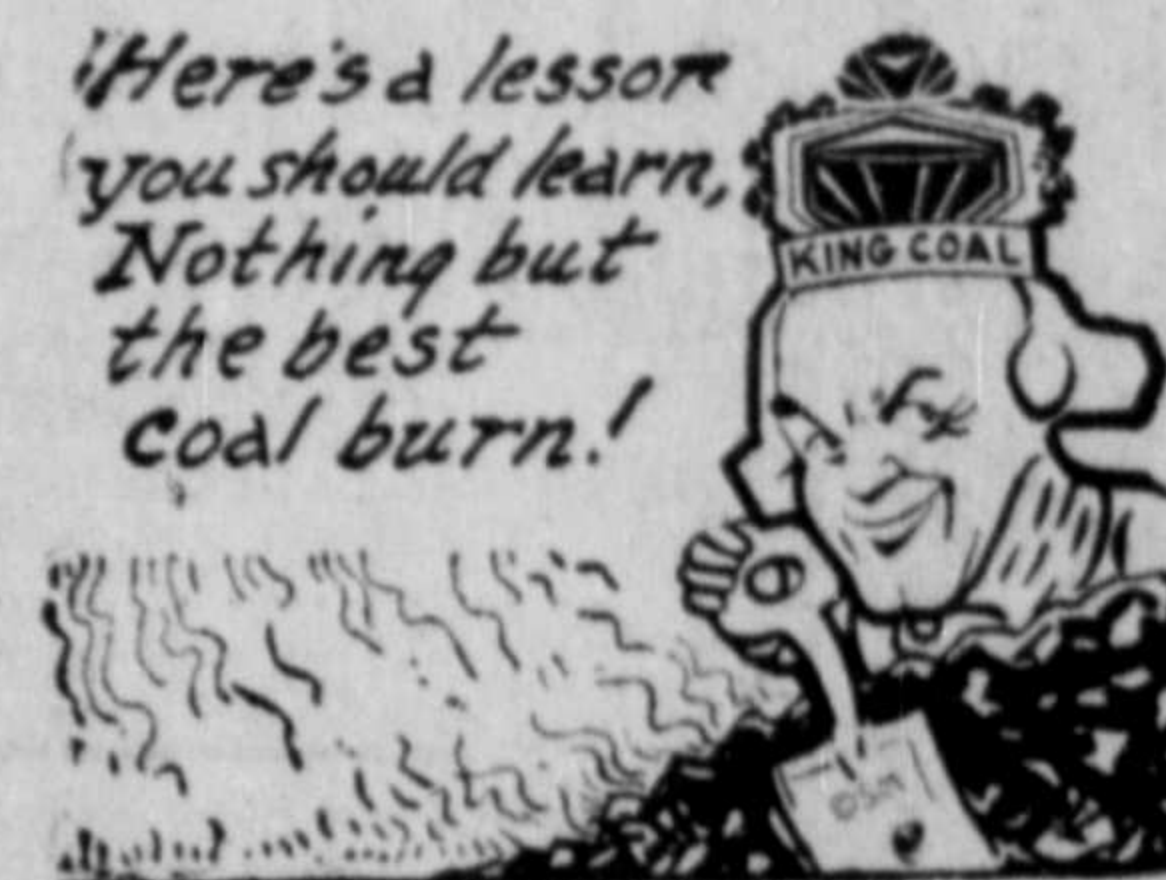

When passing that way last evening I could not resist calling to pass the time of day with my garden friends, William Moffat and Roderick McLean. They are making a new lawn on the side of the Ambrose Avenue house facing Hays Creek. Their newly planted avals are in bloom and some recently imported rhododendrons will bloom this season, judging by the appearance. Engineer David Todd of the Prince George sent me four or five nice little rhododendrons this week and they should do well in the muskeg soil. I understand there have been some hundreds of these little trees distributed in the city this spring. The rock garden is the most attractive feature of the Moffat and McLean place and always will be, I should think.—H. F. P.

INVASION ENDS LONG PEACE OF VIKING SONS IN SCANDINAVIA LAND

Nazi Onslaught on Norway Recalls Battling Norsemen of Other Days and Their Conquests

NEW YORK, April 23: (AP)—Fair-haired, blue-eyed fighters swarmed out of the foggy north centuries ago and struck terror into Europe. They were the Vikings—whose peaceful descendants today are fighting against being overwhelmed by the armed might of a Germany their forefathers nearly dominated. But the present Norway, Sweden and Denmark have till now enjoyed peace for many years. Twelve hundred years of warfare between them and now have demonstrated three things—that the Norsemen have always been formidable antagonists, given half a chance; that arms make the fighting man today as surely as they did then and that individual valor cannot beat numbers.

The first Norsemen probably migrated from the Eurasian steppes into a Scandinavia newly freed from glacial ice. Soon they built long ships and sailed for plunder as an easier way of life than farming their fjord-riven lands.

They battled into Britain, making it Angle-land. They plundered Paris. They settled Normandy. They ravished nearly every coast of Europe. Their nobles wielded power from Novgorod to Kiev and "Rus," the Slavic word for "Sweden," became the name for Russia.

Moved Swiftly They could do all this because the inhabitants of the old empires had forgotten the use of arms and because the Vikings could strike swiftly and get away swiftly in their long ships.

Their ships carried them to America, as yet undiscovered by Columbus, to the world capital, Constantinople. Meanwhile, stay-at-home Vikings fought among themselves.

Petty kings ruled the northland then. Strife was constant. Norway was finally brought under the single rule of Harold Fair Hair in the tenth century. In the eleventh, Norway and Denmark were under one monarchy. Three centuries later, Norway, Sweden and Denmark were under a single crown. It was only in 1905 that Sweden recognized the independence of Norway.

Two Warrior Kings As Europe built castles and learned again how to fight the Norsemen's power diminished. But Sweden fought with German states, with Russia, with Poland and with her Scandinavian neighbors and produced two fighting kings whose fame still rings.

In the 17th century it was Gustavus Adolphus who headed up the Protestant cause in Germany during the Thirty Years War. His infantry system and the religious fervor that inspired his troops helped make him one of the great captains of all time. But his army wore out from much fighting; he was killed at Lutzen in 1632.

In the 18th century it was Charles XII. He fought the Germans, the Poles and the Russians. By sheer genius and audacity he won battle after battle and humbled Russia. But his army wore out too and he died in an obscure siege.

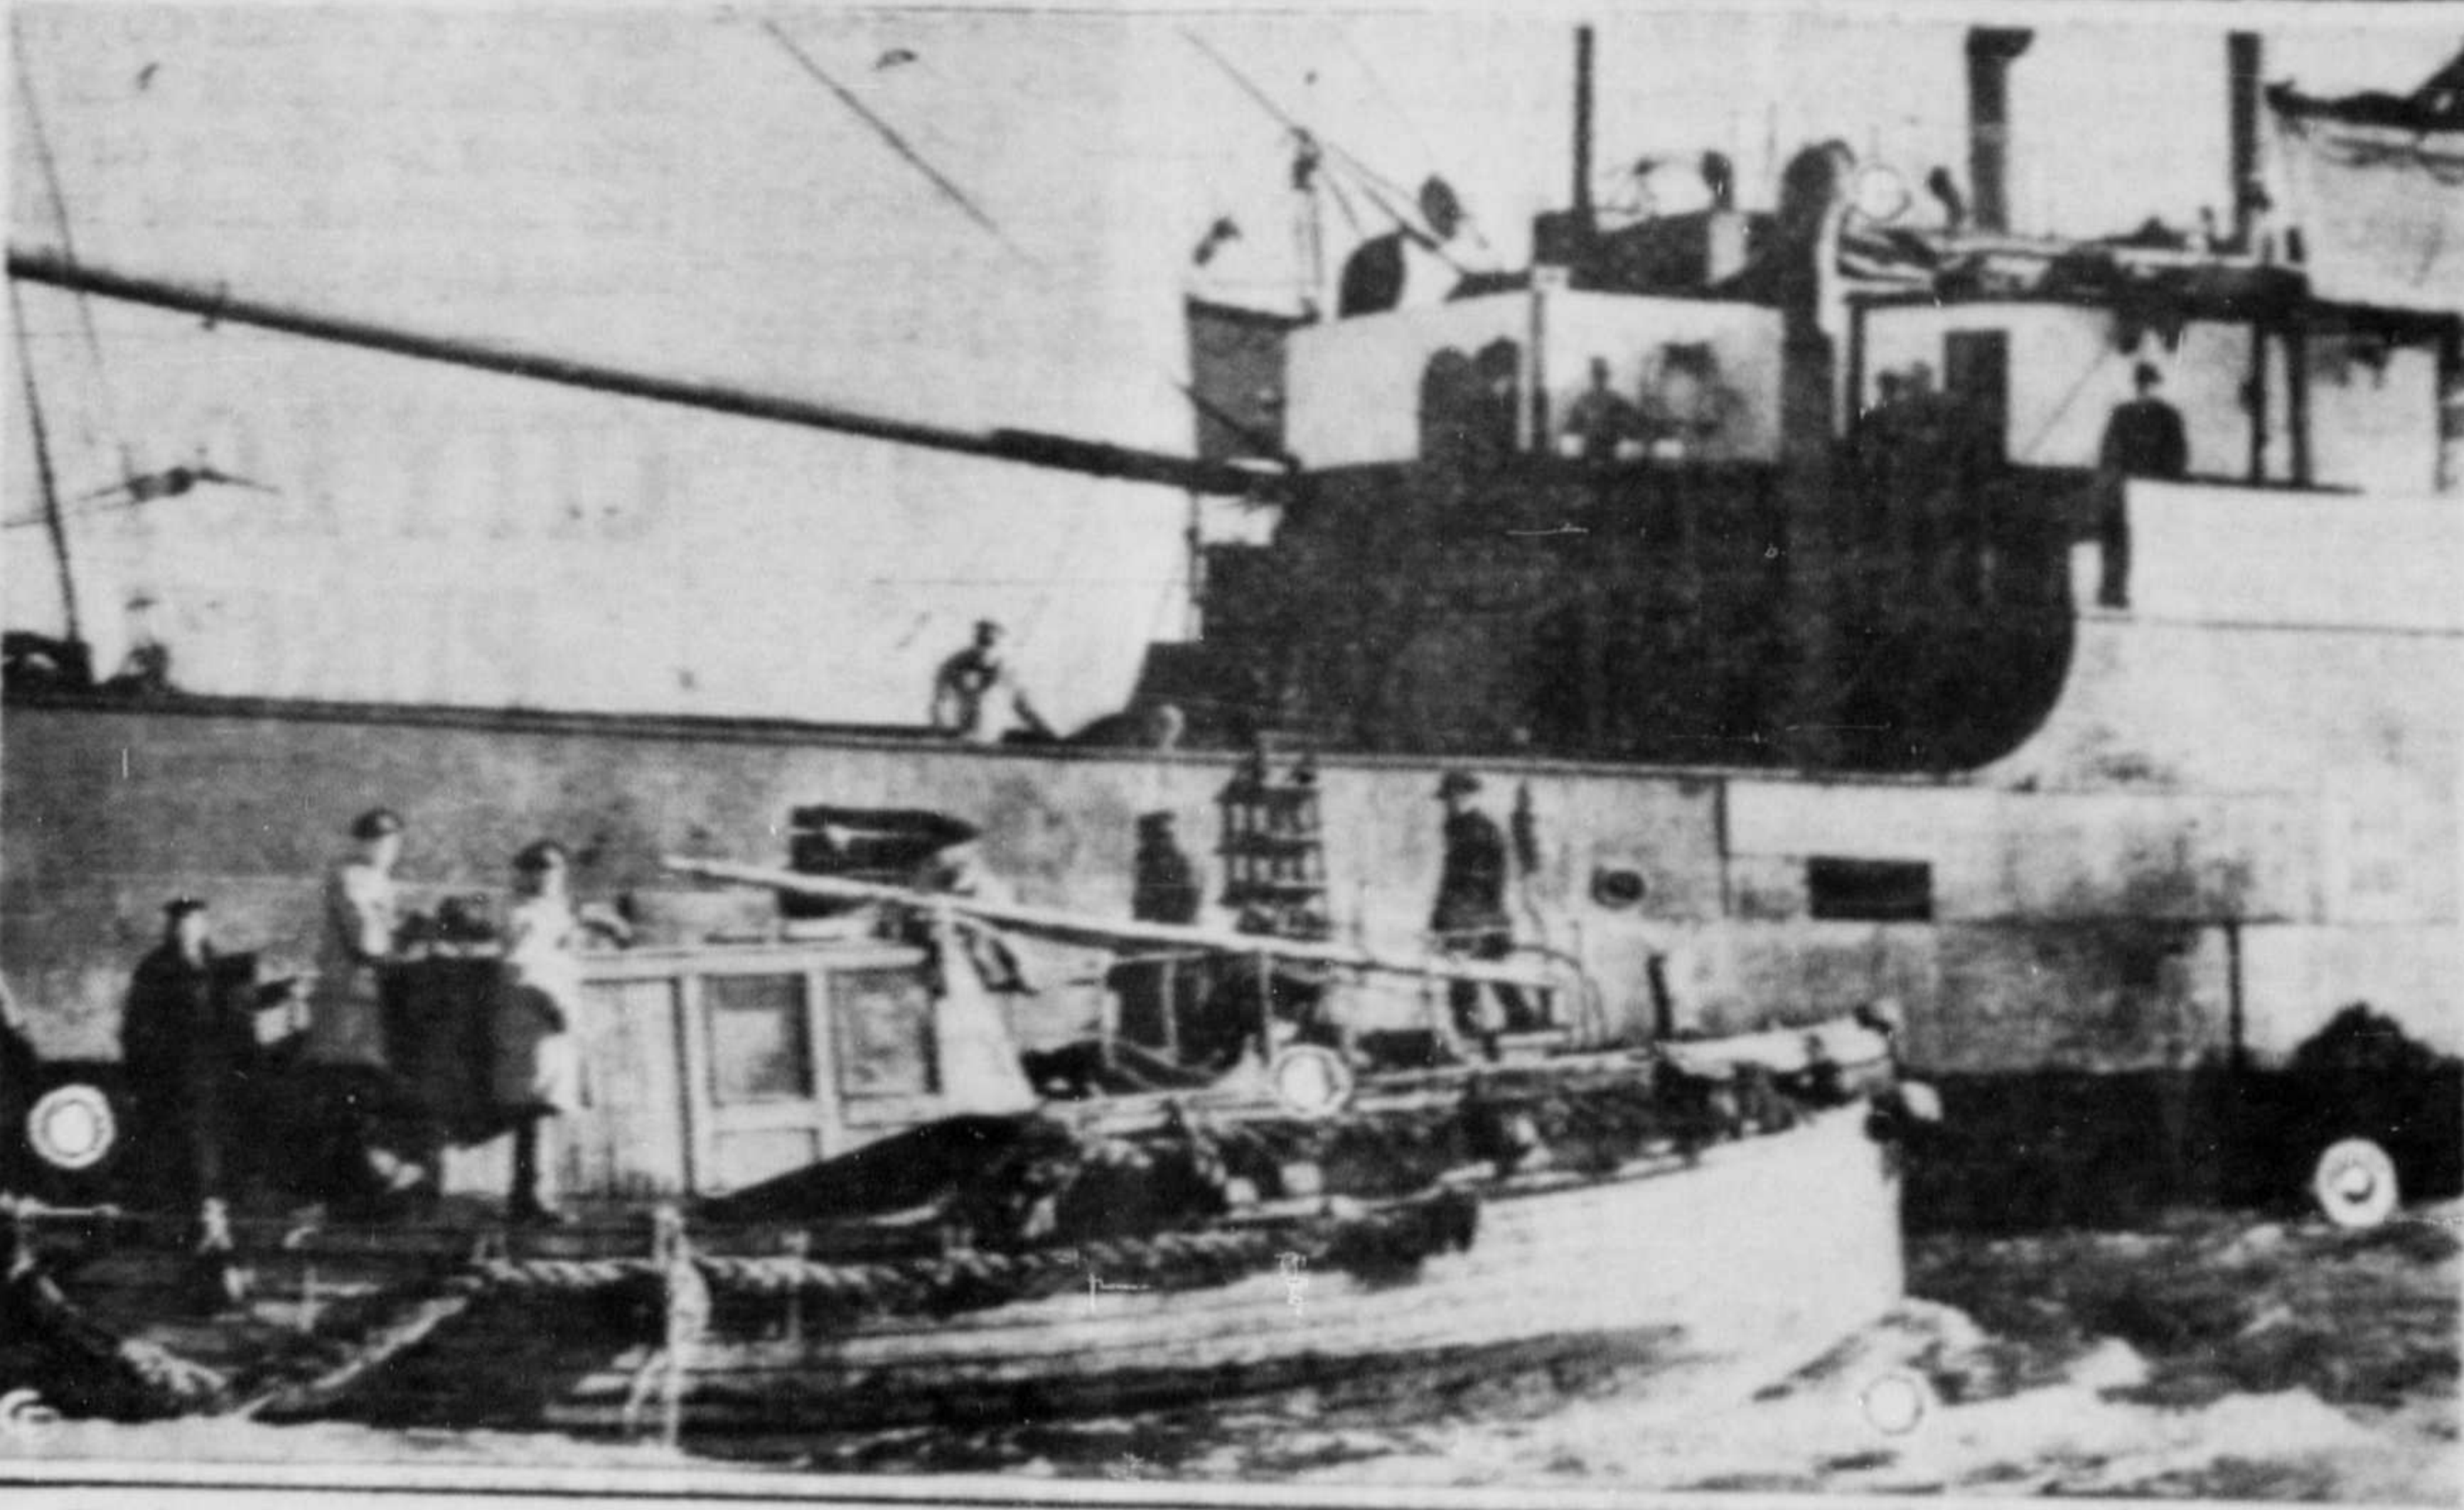

Helped Beat Napoleon The might of Europe had grown too strong for even the valiant Swedes and they were outnumbered in the grand alliance that brought about the downfall of Napoleon. After that, Sweden fought no more wars.

The northlands still are riven by fjords and many modern Norsemen find they can gain a living more easily by sea than by shore. As a result they are great sailors and fishers. Also they are hewers of wood in their wide forests, delvers for ore in rich mines and harnessers of water power. But Sweden especially has rich industries and Denmark rich agricultural fields.

The Norsemen, moreover, have made a cult of peace. They stayed out of the First Great War, tried to stay out of this one. They developed co-operation among them to develop co-operative plans of marketing and the literate and scientific arts.

They scarcely bothered to build armies or navies, even to the extent their few million inhabitants might have supported. Yet the artillery they manufactured was among the best in Europe.

BRITISH CONTRABAND CONTROL STOPPING GERMAN EXPORTS

England's contraband control of Germany's sea exports is thoroughly under way. A scene in a southern England contraband control base is shown. Top, with control officers at work in the intelligence room, making reports on the various merchandise they have taken from neutral vessels which had sailed from German ports with out-bound German goods. A contraband control launch, Bottom, is pictured approaching a neutral vessel suspected of carrying German exports.

Three Interpreters Needed For Hearing In Hove, England

HOVE, England, April 23: (CP)—Three interpreters were required when Hove magistrates heard and turned down—the application of 18-year old Elisabeth Szepessy to marry Andrew Kende, 37. The girl, a Czech, could speak that language only and Kende was a Jewish Czech.

The girl's parents, whose refusal of consent to the marriage led to the court application, spoke only Hungarian although the father knew a little German. Szepessy objected to the marriage because he wished to obtain a visa to go to Canada with his daughter and felt she had no prospects if she married Kende.

Dr. J. T. Mandy Provides Interesting Evening For Interdenominational Young People

The regular weekly meeting of the Interdenominational Young Peoples' Society was held last night in First Presbyterian Church Hall with a goodly number of young people and friends present. After conducting a brief worship service the president, Miss Winnie Cameron, introduced the guest speaker, Dr. J. T. Mandy.

With beautiful moving pictures, Dr. Mandy conducted a trip by boat from Victoria, Harrison Hot Springs and Vancouver to Prince Rupert which he called the "Gateway to the Great Northland." Scenes of Vancouver and Victoria gardens were displayed, chief among them being the roses in Stanley Park. The trip north to Prince Rupert, touching at such places as Alert Bay, Englewood and Port McNeil, was very beautiful. Arriving at Prince Rupert, a tour was conducted to points of interest. Halibut and herring fishing operations were witnessed and some excellent pictures of seagulls in action were enjoyed. An interesting feature included in the film was the Federal Building in each stage of its development from the time ground was broken until the construction job was completed.

The audience was then taken to some local gardens where many varieties of flowers were shown. Some interesting scenes were taken in Frank Dibb's rockery and the gardens of Walter Longwell, D. G. Borland, Thomas Priest and Theo Collart. The Court House grounds and police gardens were displayed and many beautiful moments were spent with Dr. and Mrs. Mandy in their garden at the different seasons of the year. The dahlias beds in Mrs. R. M. Winslow's garden were particularly fine as were those in C. P. Balagno's garden. First year pictures of H. F. Pullen's garden on Third Avenue showed just what could be done along that line.

Glorious sunsets, common to Prince Rupert, in natural color were among the beauties of the film.

Dr. Mandy added further interest to the showing of the film by commenting on items of interest and proved that he really knew his gardens by naming each flower as it was shown.

A vote of thanks was given Dr. Mandy for "opening the eyes of the young people to the beauties that surround us here in Prince Rupert." The meeting closed with the singing of "God Save the King."

SPORT CHAT

C. J. Mogridge, warden of Winchester Museum in England, has established proof that the first skating in Britain was done by Romans. A well-preserved pair of Roman skates of A.D. 200 period has been unearthed at Winchester. The skates were found in the peaty sub-soil 16 feet below the level of the ground in the centre of Winchester. The skates are of bone, possibly the shin bone of a horse or an ox, flattened and polished on one side by contact with the ice and roughly fashioned to fit a Roman sandal. Both skates are turned up at the toe. Holes bored through the bone suggest that the skates were held tightly by cords.

One of the least exciting championship boxing matches on record was fought a year ago last week in Los Angeles when Joe Louis knocked out Jack Roper of Hollywood. The outcome of the west coast city's first heavyweight title fight was a surprise to few of the 35,000 fans and Louis left almost immediately to train for his meeting with Tony Galento in June.

WALLIS IS GODMOTHER

Duchess of Windsor Wears Khaki —Is Busy In French War Work

PARIS, April 23: (CP)— Today Wallis, Duchess of Windsor, is no longer wearing her traditional blue—but khaki like her royal husband who serves at the front with the troops of whom he was once supreme chief.

Little is seen of the Duchess in Paris except in connection with war work. She is a large subscriber to each armament bond issue and has allowed her picture and encouragement to be used in connection with their publicity. But the moment war began she offered her services, turned her Mediterranean home into a convalescent hospital and is now actively engaged in the work of the French Red Cross, the Section Sanitaire Automobile Feminine and other women organizations which serve the army. Her latest achievement is to become "marraine de guerre," which translates roughly as "war godmother," to a whole regiment of French soldiers.

A short time ago a regiment of infantry, after several months at the front, returned for a rest period. It was stationed in a village in northern France. Since some soldiers were without families, they asked for a "marraine" and they drew—the Duchess of Windsor.

To the delight of the poilus the Duchess paid them a visit recently. The Flemish village was in festive dress. From all the windows the Union Jack and the Tricolor of France fraternized. Across the streets were paper streamers and garlands—faded garlands because they had already served to celebrate the Armistice. Nothing is lost in that corner of France—neither traditions nor streamers.

The mayor of the village with his red, white and blue sash of office about his waist, the priest in his gown and the inhabitants lined one side of the village square. At the end the regimental band was ready and the soldiers were drawn up to attention—some already wearing the Military Cross pinned to their tunics. Carefully camouflaged cars suddenly appeared and, when the Duchess stepped out, there was a cheer of recognition from the regiment of adoption.

Accompanied by Mile. Nicolle, Chief of the Red Cross, and the Countess de Tocqueville, the Duchess reviewed her soldiers, talking to them quite naturally, shaking hands here and there, asking a question: "What would you like? What do you need?" She was touched and surprised when a very young soldier, a peasant lad stooped quickly and with a courtly gesture kissed the hand she extended toward him.

Taking Shrink From Raw Wool

Australian Working on Process to Make Product More Popular

SYDNEY, Australia, April 23: (CP)—A new method of making wool unshrinkable has been discovered at the McMaster Laboratory in New South Wales and has already been proved successful in large scale tests.

A statement by the Australian wool board here said that the wool can be put under the new process for about six cents per pound. Its other advantages are the simplicity of the process, low initial cost for the necessary plant and the absence of any obnoxious odors or fumes.

The statement said it is believed that the process will widen considerably the market for wool which has suffered from the public's fear of shrinkage. It added that two other methods of making wool unshrinkable have been evolved in England but the Australian process promises to be the most effective.

Canada At War 25 Years Ago

April 23: 1915—British launched attack at Hill 60 near Zonnebeke on Ypres front. Submarine E 15 sunk in Dardanelles by British plect boats to prevent capture by Turks. First Canadian Division took over line in northern face of Ypres salient.

HIS MAJESTY DECORATES HEROES WHO COURAGED THE GRAF SPEE

"Veterans" of the historic River Platte naval battle, which ended in the scuttling of the Graf Spee, were decorated by King George upon their return to England. His Majesty, hand extended, left, is shown bestowing a decoration on one of the heroic seamen. Officers and men from the battle-scarred Ajax, Exeter and Achilles were honored. Before the decoration ceremony the seamen marched through the streets of London to the Horse Guards Parade, where His Majesty, accompanied by the Queen, took the salute, Top Right. Behind the King and Queen are the Duke of Kent and Prime Minister Chamberlain. Men of the Ajax are shown, Bottom Right, cheering the King.

RATIONING IN FRANCE

Cards System For Wartime Presents Fresh Concoctions for Madame and Monsieur

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD

PARIS, April 23: (CP)—This late April and spring in wartime. Everyone in France, be he or she citizen, refugee or tourist, is being provided with a food rations card.

The "Official," as the governmental weekly news bulletin is known, has confirmed it with five pages devoted to regulations governing the different categories of cards. Until something appears in the "Official" no notice is taken of it.

If in the past individuals in Paris felt twinges of embarrassment at the thought of being called a "worker," today everybody is eager to get into that privileged class. After a certain number of special categories, notably those of children from three to 12, people on medically prescribed diets, the rest of the population is divided into two classes—"workers" and "adults."

The ration card which bears the magic letter "t" is the prize. The "t" stands for "traveller" (worker) and those who have this card are entitled to more substantial food rations. Simple and unprivileged adults must get along with less.

Heavy Workers

There have been many chuckles in Paris over the list of people to be found under the "t" heading in the "Official." Flea trainers, sword swallowers and bearded ladies are solemnly noted as heavy workers. Super-rations are accorded to industrial workers, road-builders, brick-layers, carpenters and farm laborers, of course. The special favor is extended to rat-catchers, breeders of leeches and employees of funicular railways.

Show people and sportsmen are generally entitled to the special card—dancers, clowns, boxers, artists of rinks and sports fields, circus riders, trapeze artists, wrestlers are among them.

The "forts des halls" are particularly mentioned. These are the strong men of the city markets who sling half an ox jauntily on one shoulder and stride off with it or toss a 100-pound bag of onions into a cart with but a flip of the wrist. But house painters, chimney sweeps, boiler-makers, cartwrights and pigstickers are shown also to be in need of extra quantities of food.

Lace makers, hat makers, dress-makers are excluded from the favored and have to be content with the regime of ordinary mortals like bankers, financiers, business directors, university professors, politicians and journalists who are not supposed to use up any energy because their work is lighter or intellectual. These are relegated to category "a"—or "adult" and consequently to smaller rations.

Food Rules

The rules for pastry, alcohol, bonbons and meat are already in full force and the first reactions felt. The cafes, whose long zinc counters used to be piled with plates of pastry, tarts and buns, now hold sticks of buttered bread and crusty croissants. Some cafe proprietors with a spurt of genius have tried to replace the vanished pastry with plates of bread and butter liberally smeared with jam. These are spread temptingly within arm's reach.

But the real inspiration has been the new and strange assortment of sandwiches.

Up until the introduction of rationing the sandwich in France has been a despised and inglorious cousin of the large and varied family of sandwiches to be found in Canada. A stick of French bread 18 inches long—sliced up the middle—and slabs of cheese or ham wedged between was called a sandwich. Nothing elegant or refined about it. The Anglo-Saxon in Paris who ordered a sandwich found himself obliged to grip it firmly in both hands and open his mouth five inches in order to take an embarrassed bite.

The new sandwich has appeared—more or less of a success. It is a sort of open-faced affair. Typical is the one with a sardine on one corner, a mound of red cabbage mixed with mayonnaise, a bit of cheese, a slice of tomato and a ring of boiled egg.

The hungry Parisian whose habit it is to swallow two or three creamy pastries at four o'clock is now to be seen eyeing the new concoctions with some suspicion. It usually ends up by his sending his wife in to try one before venturing into this unknown and perhaps dangerous gastronomic territory.

Czechs and Russians Work Together in Toronto Missions Church

LONDON, Ont., April 22: (CP)—It is the war—but it works differently in the Church of All Nations here, according to a report of Rev. J. I. MacKay to the United Church Home Missions Board.

"Since the beginning of the war there has not been the slightest difficulty between any of our people. We have only had the greatest evidence of comradeship and understanding.

"We have seen Germans and Czechs working together in the friendliest fashion," the report said. "German women are knitting socks for Canadian soldiers and Russian women are giving aid to the Red Cross for Finland."

Representatives of 30 nations belong to the church, Mr. MacKay said. Most of them came to Canada to get away from war.

Five thousand Prince Rupert people read the Daily News. It pays to let them know what you have to sell.

SWANS AT KATHLYN

Rare Birds, 24 in Number, Spend Some Time There—Moose Make Themselves at Home

SMITHERS, April 23.—Two flocks of the rare trumpeter swans have been resting at Lake Kathlyn for the past two weeks on their way north but have now continued their journey, all of them having taken off with the exception of one bird, this one still being at the lake.

There were about thirty of the birds at the lake this year which is a larger number than has been seen there before and would denote that they are increasing in numbers under vigilant protection. Last year only about half of that number rested there.

One flock of the birds was on the west side of the lake near the railway track while the other flock was on the east side of the lake and used the farm of Olof Hanson M.P. as a feeding ground.

Motorists between Smithers and Telkwa recently have been stopping to watch a cow moose and a yearling calf that have been feeding at an old hay stack on the flat near the road on the J. B. Goodwill farm about two miles from Telkwa.

The animals are only slightly disturbed by the motorists and do not move far from their hay stack when cars stop and soon return when they have passed by.

These animals have been seen by the hundred along the railway between Smithers and Prince George by trainmen all winter, birds of 12 and 15 in a bunch being a common sight.

Men of the local unit are said to have complained to the cook that he hadn't warmed the plates for the Irish stew.

Supper time came and the boys saw the plates warming around the stove. Anticipating something extra, there was a chorus of "What's for supper?" The answer was "Jelly."

It was the last bus out from London and an old lady and daughter wanted to get aboard.

Old Lady: "You wouldn't separate mother and daughter, would you?"

Conductor: "I did once but never again," as he rang the bell for the bus to move on.

"Why?"

"It was just a take-off from start to finish."

GREAT FILM IS SHOWING

"Hunchback of Notre Dame," With Charles Laughton, at Capitol Theatre

How the love of a grotesque cripple for the dazzling beauty who pitied him leads him to save her life at the risk of his own is the powerful dramatic theme of the picturization of Victor Hugo's renowned novel, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," with Charles Laughton in the title role, which is an outstanding feature at the Capitol Theatre here for the first half of this week.

The hunchback is a bell-ringer in the great cathedral of Notre Dame. Here a beautiful gypsy girl takes refuge from a powerful noble who admires but persecutes her. Because the girl befriends him, the deformed bell-ringer rescues her from an execution for a crime of which the noble himself was guilty. The gripping climax comes when a mob storms the great cathedral to rescue the girl and the nobles attempt to carry her off.

Maureen O'Hara, a newcomer to the screen, uncovered by Laughton, depicts the gypsy girl while Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell, Edmund O'Brien, Allan Marshal, Walter Hampden and Katharine Alexander also have featured roles in the spectacle.

Q. C. CITY

A whist drive, the first in a series of social events to be held for the purpose of raising money to purchase a set of bookkeeping books for the newly formed Credit Union, took place in the school here recently. Over thirty members participated and the sum of $3.50 was realized. Prize winners were: men's first, Bert Roberts; ladies' first, Mrs. Andrew Christensen; consolation prize, William Joll. Delicious refreshments were served at the close of the evening.

Members of the Farthest West Dramatic Club met one evening recently at the home of the president, Mrs. O. Hill. It was decided to produce three one-act plays in the early fall. One play, with a cast of nine women, will be in rehearsal throughout the coming months. The other two plays, having mixed casts, will be left until the close of the fishing season. The evening was spent in reading the play chosen for immediate rehearsal and in selecting the cast for same.

The second storey wards of the Skidegate Inlet Hospital are being redecorated and alterations are being considered for the kitchen. Bridge cloths are being raffled to purchase a sewing machine for the hospital. Each cloth will have the names of all those donating to the fund embroidered on it and in time should prove of great value as a souvenir.

John Karkie, who has been employed for some time at Allford Bay, is confined to the hospital here suffering from an injured back. Mr. Karkie is very popular in the community and his many friends all wish him a speedy recovery.

Edmund Stevens returned on the last trip of the Prince John from a holiday trip to the south and, after a short visit home, will be leaving for Kelley's Logging Camp where he will be employed.

The central group of the Credit Union study clubs met recently at the home of Charles Hartie. There were thirteen members present. Literature pertaining to the formation and practices of the organization was studied. The nominating committee presented a list of names for consideration for the coming election. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., April 23:—Mrs. Glenn Cramer, wife of the distance runner, remarked while stopping at a restaurant: "It's a little bit of a headache to be a runner's wife outside of that, it's just about the same as being anyone else's. One difference, she said, is her husband eats seven or eight meals a week—to keep up his energy."
