Bombs were dropped on several towns again today as the Nazis planes struck at southwest Scotland and southwest England.

When they had escaped by only a few yards, the bombs in the plane went off, the woman covering the pilot with her body to prevent his being injured by flying particles. Corporal Meadows was decorated with the Order of the British Empire.

ROUMANIA FACES FURTHER LOSSES AS NEIGHBORS SNARL

After grabs already made by Soviet Russia, Rumania momentarily expects further demands from two other neighbors, Hungary and Bulgaria, both of whom seek return of areas lost to King Carol's country at the end of the first great war. The map shows the area of Russian occupation and also the boundaries over which Hungarian troops (lower left) and Bulgarian forces (lower right) may soon be marching. Carol's armies (top left) retreated before the Red invasion but there are indications that they might be ready to match their strength with either or both the other revisionist nations. Best bet is that Russia will peacefully complete occupation of Bessarabia and northern Bukovina and that Hungary and Bulgaria, under pressure from Italy and Germany, will leave their claims for later settlement.

SAYS PEACE 'REASONABLE'

Chancellor Hitler Agains Tries To Make Impression Of Good Intentions

Following is a Canadian Press telegraphic digest of the Berlin speech of Adolf Hitler which came too late for publication in yesterday's paper:

Speaking before the Reichstag, Chancellor Adolf Hitler addressed "one more appeal to the reason of England," asserting that "a world Empire would be destroyed" if Great Britain insists on continuing the fight. Hitler claimed he was not asking for peace in the voice of a victor demanding capitulation of the vanquished but rather as a victor proposing a reasonable peace. He asserted that British statesmen apparently have no conception of the destruction which would be visited upon the British in a fight to the finish. Hitler shouted that people left behind in London after the assault would have ideas entirely different from those of Churchill and his colleagues.

Touching upon Russo-German relations Hitler claimed that these had been fixed once and for all by clear delineation of interests. Hitler said that a policy based on real friendship with Italy and similar relationship with Great Britain would have been a boon to the world if England had accepted it.

Der Fuehrer did not say what he expected the British to do in response to his peace offer but left no doubt that "peace" would be on German terms.

Hitler said he had "never intended to annihilate or even harm the world."

As usual, Hitler began by assailing terms of the Treaty of Versailles. He also assailed "Jewish capitalist war mongers," blaming them for the war.

Der Fuehrer said that on September 2 last the conflict might have been averted when Premier Mussolini of Italy made a proposal for peaceful negotiations.

Hitler declared that a German soldier had found a document on June 19, 1940, which led to the uncovering of other documents of the Supreme Allied war council showing, Hitler claimed, that the British and French had planned to use small countries to their own ends. Finland, the Balkan states and Belgium were among the nations which were to be used for their own purposes by the Allies, Hitler said.

Hitler reviewed the opening of the conflict in Norway, claiming that Germany had moved in only after British forces had tried in vain to do so.

Der Fuehrer praised his German soldiers.

AIR FIGHT IS FIERCE

Several German Machines Brought Down in Straits of Dover When Navy Meets Planes

R.A.F. Busy

Attacks on Barge Concentrations Near Rotterdam and Boulogne Are Made

LONDON, July 20: (CP)—British and German air fighters engaged in two fierce battles yesterday. One was over the Straits of Dover when a cloud of raiders—estimated at about 70—swarmed down on a destroyer in convoy on the southeast coast. The warship, which was reported undamaged, fought off the attack with anti-aircraft guns and brought down one bomber. Royal Air Force fighters chased the bombers back to the French coast where they engaged in a sky battle between Boulogne and Calais. Observers said that at least four planes fell in flames into the sea. The attacks were the most spectacular of a series of bombing raids during the day on northeast and northwest England, southwest Scotland and on a trawler seventeen miles off the southeast coast of Ireland. There were several casualties but no fatalities. There was a machine gun attack against civilians at a railway station. Considerable damage was done in a southeast town where one bomber was shot down and others driven off after a salvo of thirty bombs was dropped.

The second Nazi air attack was on a British harbor on the southeast coast in which fifty enemy raiders were engaged. Considerable damage was done to the town. One of the bombers was shot down and others were driven off after a salvo of thirty bombs had been dropped.

This morning the toll of Nazi planes brought down in twenty-four hours was placed at fifteen, including three Stukas, while the British loss was five.

R.A.F. Hits Barges

British war planes renewed daylight attacks yesterday on barge concentrations near Rotterdam and Boulogne which the Air Ministry said were apparently gathered for attack on Great Britain. There was also an attack on the giant Krupp munition works, the British airmen reporting terrific explosions ensued. At LeHavre warehouses were bombed. It was also announced that coastal command planes, usually reserved for defence, had made wide range attacks along with other bombers on a great variety of objectives, some deep in central Germany. Four British planes failed to return.

TOKYO, July 20: (CP)—The inner government of the new Kenoye cabinet reached a decision yesterday on relations with Italy and Germany and informed quarters claimed it calls for closer working arrangements with the Rome-Berlin axis.

These sources said the question of whether the Netherlands East Indies and French Indo-China will be taken under "protection" is still not clarified.

It is believed Japan will attempt to reach an understanding with Berlin on any South Sea action.

A SMOOTH CUY

Adolf Hitler is one of these "smooth guys." His tongue landed him in the position of chancellor and his force made him dictator. Now he rules most of Europe except Great Britain and he is covetous to control that little group of islands. Should the fates decree that he gets that much, he will never be satisfied until he takes a slice out of European Russia and has Italy under his heel. He is that kind. Just as soon as he stops conquering, his rule in Germany will end.

People who listened to his speech carried here by radio yesterday say that it was one of the smoothest, cleverest speeches ever heard. It was an attempt to make the world think that Germany was naturally a peaceful nation, wishing nobody any harm and that the only aim in life was to benefit humanity.

British people will not be fooled by this speech. It is certain that we in Canada are not fooled by it. We never liked a wolf in sheep's clothing and we have had too many lessons in the past months to feel disturbed over the real meaning of this particular wolf.

AUSTRALIA SPEAKS

Australian ships have spoken for the country they represent. They have sunk one of the crack Italian cruisers and put another to flight.

This is not a mythical sinking, like so many of those claimed by the enemy. After the sinking of the ship a British destroyer stopped and picked up nearly half of the members of the crew, something like 250 men. It is an indication to the world that Empire support is really valuable.

New Zealand and Canadian naval units have also been active with credit to themselves.

A CRAZY WORLD

This does seem to be a crazy world. Our ships set out to sink enemy ships and to shoot down all who oppose them. Then when a ship is sunk the British sailors risk their lives trying to save members of the crew of the enemy vessel who are in danger of drowning. These rescued men will be taken to a British port, treated kindly, fed well and held there until the war is over or until they get a chance to escape. If they escape they will at once rejoin the Italian forces trying again to kill the British.

LET THE WORLD KNOW

The people of Germany are forbidden to listen to radio broadcasts emanating from Great Britain or United States. They are subject to severe punishment if they do this. The German dictator does not think it would be good for the people to hear the truth. In this country and in Great Britain the people are allowed to listen to anything they wish. The government trusts the people, believing that they have sense enough to distinguish between the false and the true.

We have often wondered how the people of Canada would feel if the government issued a decree that they were not to listen to American or German radio broadcasts. We feel sure they would be inclined to keep their radios tuned to the banned stations just to show the government that they can do as they like in this country and that they are entitled to hear every side of every question discussed.

SPORT CHAT

The line-up for Fraser Street in tonight's Intermediate Softball League game against Dominion Dairy will be as follows: Postuk, catcher; Arney, pitcher; Vuckovich, first base; Killas, second base; Bill, short stop; Gillis, third base; Pavlikis, left field; Gurvich, centre field; Anderson, left field.

Opening of all of Lake Wasquesiu in Prince Albert National Park, Saskatchewan, for pike and pickerel fishing is announced by the Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa. For more than three years all fishing was banned in the western portion of this lake because efforts were under way to stock these waters with small-mouthed black bass.

Joe DiMaggio cracked out three hits—one a ninth-inning home run with the bases loaded—to pace New York Yankees to a 5-1 victory over Bob Feller, Cleveland Indians' pitching prodigy, three years ago this week. Feller allowed seven hits and struck out seven but couldn't stop the Yanks' hard-hitting outfielder.

Hank Cleman, lanky Toronto walker, cracked George Goulding's 1910 Canadian mark for the two miles at Toronto nine years ago yesterday. Cleman covered the distance in Ontario track championships in 13:54.4, compared with Goulding's 14:07.4.

BLOCKADE PLUS DRIVE BY AIR IS GT. BRITAIN'S BET AGAINST GERMANY

Veteran Expert Reviews War Situation With Mother Country Concentrating on Her Own Defence

By MAJ.-GEN. SIR CHARLES GWYNN

LONDON, July 20: (CP)—The British Empire now fights the Axis powers single handed except so far as it may receive assistance from the remnants of the forces of those countries which have been overrun. In some cases such assistance may prove of extreme value. But for the moment it is better to review the situation without taking it into account.

What is the Empire's position?

It is a fundamental principle of strategy that the base of operations and supply should be secure. And, for the first time, Great Britain, the main base of the Empire, is threatened. What is the nature of the threat and what provision can be made to meet it?

The enemy has an immense air force and has secured bases from which he can launch air attack at short range. He has a great army magnificently equipped. But he is faced with the problem of transporting it across the sea or by air before he can use it for the attack on Britain. And if he cannot transport it, it is useless to him as a means of defeating Britain.

The enemy has a surface navy, efficient but numerically far inferior to that of Britain. He has, however, secured a great number of ports which will facilitate submarine or surface attack on British sea communications. They might also provide bases from which raiding land forces could be transported.

The important point to grasp is that now, standing alone, Britain is able to concentrate her forces for her own defence and is relieved of the necessity of expanding them currently upon the continent. Her air force, if still numerically inferior to that of her opponents, has proved itself to be of greatly superior quality. Operating from its home bases it has secured power of concentrated effort.

Enemy aircraft will undoubtedly continue to succeed in penetrating defences but at great cost of trained pilots and of machines. The enemy's power of attack will be greatest in the initial stages, before loss of morale and machines exercises cumulative effect. Moreover, British air power will receive constant reinforcement of trained personnel and of material from overseas colleagues and factories. Her army is now concentrated for her own defence and its equipment is superior to that which could be brought by air invaders with their limited powers of transportation by air or sea.

Navy Still Strong

The main defence of Britain is, however, still her navy and it is growing rapidly. Aided by air power and by mine defences it can absolutely prohibit the transportation of a large invading force to British coasts, even if the enemy could collect the great mass of shipping necessary for such an operation.

The most the enemy could hope to accomplish would be, in favorable conditions of weather, to land small raiding parties supported and assisted by air borne troops and air attack.

On the whole the Empire is in a strong position to maintain a defensive war indefinitely.

What power has it, however, of offensive action on which ultimate victory depends? That is a large question which I must leave over until a later commentary. But let me indicate an answer.

Positively, Britain must try to win this war by a combination of blockade plus offensive air power. First, the strangling fingers of the blockade in which the navy is the muscle, will clutch tighter, especially on the vein of Nazi oil supplies. Second, Britain's rising air power will be used to strike at key points in German military strength and in the end to destroy German air power itself.

TRICKS OF "HAW-HAW"

Nazis Try To Revive Interest In Broadcast By Naming War
Prisoners In Germany

By D. E. BURRITT
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON, July 20: (CP)—German propagandists formulated a new plan to "compel" Britons to listen to Nazi "news" broadcasts. It was to intersperse propaganda with names of British prisoners of war and thus "force" the folks at home to listen nightly to Lord Haw Haw, the mysterious German voice believed to come from at least four different announcers.

For months all Britain heard with amusement the radio voice of Lord Haw Haw who used to prove "so entertaining" with his subtle tidbits of news which always contained suggestions that Germany knew exactly what was transpiring in Britain at all times.

Each night the repeated plaintive bars of Haw Haw's "signature" advised British listeners that he was about to start unspinning what later became described as his "bag of lies." Still, prior to and even in the earlier days of the war, his nightly broadcast proved entertaining. "Of course we know," people would say, "it's a pack of lies but he is funny. And some times there may be something in what he says."

That belief was just what Haw Haw had been endeavouring to establish. It began to appear that listeners were not laughing as much at Haw Haw's jokes. In fact his jokes were weakening if not disappearing. Strict propaganda was fast becoming his theme. And that is what started to turn people against him. Today, Haw Haw's audience is reduced to those curious enough to hear "what lies they have on hand tonight."

Campaign Spread

Newspapers began to admonish the public to ignore Haw Haw. Under the sponsorship of the London Daily Mirror, anti-Haw Haw groups were formed. In many parts of England the campaign spread with rapidity. All kinds of dodges were suggested to avoid Haw Haw. In Cardiff, Wales, a girl walked the streets days on end, carrying a signboard "don't listen to Lord Haw Haw. Give him the air. He's full of wind anyway."

In other parts of the United Kingdom school children went from door to door getting neighbors to sign pledges that they would ignore the broadcast. Many other means were found to make the German "news" broadcast unpopular. Haw Haw was losing ground rapidly.

But the German propaganda officials quickly thought up other plans to demand attention. The German radio began broadcasting names of prisoners of war. In each nightly "news" broadcast they would announce a few names of British prisoners.

British propaganda authorities became aware of the fact that people were spreading the word that names of their relatives might be heard if one listened nightly to the German broadcast.

So inquiries were made and the British propaganda bureau discovered that instruction had been given German radio announcers to "compel" listeners abroad to tune in for the hope of hearing prisoners' names and learning the fate of their relatives.

Held Up Letters

To make sure people did listen German authorities ordered that letters written by prisoners were not to be posted until after the writer's name had been announced on the radio; that foreign correspondents must not be allowed to interview prisoners until the radio had announced the names and prisoners' names were not to be forwarded to the Red Cross until the radio had fulfilled its work.

But to counter this stroke, the British advised listeners the propaganda department would have official listeners to copy down the names of all announced prisoners and then would notify the next-of-kin.

Most of Smaller Vessels of Prince Rupert
Halibut Fleet Complete Season's
Operations—43 in This Week

The week ending with last night saw most of the smaller vessels of the Prince Rupert halibut fleet concluding their operations by completing their final catches of the season following the closing of the near Area No. 2 grounds to fishing last Sunday. During the week forty-three Canadian boats were in with catches totalling 531,000 pounds, bringing the Canadian grand total for the year up to 4,888,099 pounds. During the same week American fares totalled 266,000 pounds, making the total for the season 6,325,100 pounds. The total of both Canadian and American landings for the week was 797,000 pounds, bringing the total for the season to date up to 11,213,119 pounds. Prices continued good and steady during the week, the high bid for Canadian fish being 11c and 7c which the P. Doreen received for 12,000 pounds and the low 9c and 7c which was paid in a number of instances. For American fish the high price of the week was 10c and 7.5c which the Sherman received for 17,000 pounds and the low 9.5c and 7.5c which the Alliance was paid for 10,000 pounds.

C.P.R. steamer Princess Adelaide, Capt. William Hughes, arrived in port at 3:30 yesterday afternoon from the south and sailed at 10 p.m. on her return to Vancouver and waypoints. Included among the Adelaide's passengers were a considerable number of round trip tourists.

Running somewhat late on account of cannery freights, Union steamer Cardena, Capt. John Boden, arrived in port at 2:30 this morning and sailed an hour later on her return to Vancouver and waypoints.

Dr. Neal Carter, director of the Prince Rupert Fisheries Experimental Station, returned to the city on the Princess Adelaide yesterday afternoon from a brief trip to Vancouver on official business.

A very satisfactory sockeye run continues on the Skeena River with the gill net boats still averaging about fifty fish. The Naas River run has been falling off somewhat with average this week being fifteen or twenty fish to the boat. Seining will start in the Naas River area tomorrow night. A few pinks are commencing to show up in the Naas area although not in any great quantity as yet. Sockeye fishing will close in the Rivers Inlet area August 2, it is announced. About three weeks later the season in the Skeena River district for sockeye gill-netting will be closed, it is expected.

C.P.R. steamer Princess Louise, Capt. S. K. Gray, is due in port at 3:30 this afternoon from Skagway and other Alaska points and will sail at 5 p.m. for Vancouver.

COLLAPSE OF FRANCE EXPLAINED

LONDON, July 20: (CP-Reuters)—The defeat of the French army, the "finest in Europe," and the subsequent moves of the French government envisaging capitulation are attributed in objective French circles to two causes—military views held by the French general staff and deep-rooted political division.

On the military side the general staff had minimized the importance of tanks and aircraft and had regarded them as auxiliary arms. They held that, as in Napoleonic times, the war would be won by infantry masses and, acting on the lessons of the last war, they calculated on a war of position and of fortifications.

General de Gaulle, chairman of the French National Committee here and chief of the military cabinet in the former Reynaud government, who foresaw the German tactics, earned opposition by his theories which ran contrary to other opinions. The general had inspired M. Reynaud's book on mechanical warfare, recommending mass production of tanks and planes.

During the fighting in the forest of Warndt at the start of the war the French tanks proved their superiority. The Germans learned their lesson well, however, and speeded up the equipment of their armored divisions. They entered the battle with masses of tanks and over one front of 60 miles nearly 4,000 tanks were used.

Meuse Bridge Error
In the calmer period before the invasion of Belgium May 10 in sufficient attention was paid to instructing the troops in the lessons of warfare taught in Poland. Consequently, when, through the fatal error of not blowing up the Meuse bridge, the German tanks, accompanied by swarms of planes, roared down on the Ninth Army, the troops were forced to retreat. This created the gap which never afterwards was closed.

In the armies and divisions the morale was good but the losses in men and material in the initial operations and at Dunkerque were catastrophic. Subsequent brilliant tactics and unceasing fighting never made up for this initial defeat. The Germans, pushing their advantage home, pressed the tired troops relentlessly with fresh divisions. The French troops finally were separated into armies fighting without a continuous front. They were scattered in Brittany, on the Loire, in Champagne, on the Maginot Line and in the Alps.

It is unlikely that the Germans could have kept up such massive attacks with mechanized columns and planes, which needed large quantities of petrol, if the Allies had not suffered so heavily at Dunkerque. If it had been possible for the French to hold the Germans on the Seine and the Somme it might have been that defeat would have been turned to a victory.

Blow To Morale
The really serious blow to public confidence was struck when the government decided to leave Paris and subsequently not to defend the capital. When the government reached Tours, reports of imminent capitulation became current. At Tours, Marshal Petain and General Weygand were said to have argued on these lines: "As soldiers approach the general on the other side and we shall secure an armistice which will save France's honor and avoid useless slaughter."

In vain, M. Reynaud, M. Madon and others argued that they were dealing with Hitler and not with soldiers. Still divided, the cabinet decided on the night of June 18 to leave for Bordeaux. Arrangements there were primitive and the lack of organization contributed in the sense of defeat to hopelessness which was growing.
