NAVAL BASE AT NARVIK STOCKHOLM, May 4: (CP)-Great Britain will continue fighting for Norway "with greatest vigor," an authoritative source emphasized today. "The distance from German air bases of operational area around Narvik will undoubtedly prove to be in our favor," it was said. Well informed British quarters indicated Allied efforts in Norway would be concentrated in building a powerful naval base in Narvik region. German forces are reported to have entered Namsos.

War News

AIR BATTLE HEARD

LONDON-Heavy gunfire was heard off the southeast coast of England last night after a flight of German planes had been seen. British fighters took off in pursuit of what were believed to be German mine-sowing planes. The flashing of shells could be seen. There were also German flights last night off the northeast coast.

BZATTLE AT BORKUM

LONDON-A British plane returned yesterday from the Island of Borkum after engaging in battle with three German planes, bringing down one. The British plane returned home in spite of the fact that she was in a damaged condition and that one of the crew had been killed.

BITTER ACCUSATIONS

LONDON-Bitter accusations have been made in the British, Norwegian and Swedish press as to the Allied campaign in Norway. It may lead to a general election, some political observers believe, with Clement Atlee, Labor leader, mentioned as possibly emerging as the new Prime Minister in a coalition government. As far as Swedish criticism is concerned, a British spokesman said that, had Sweden done one-tenth as much for Norway as did the Allies, Norway might not have been in its present plight. Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill, one or both, are expected to outline the situation next Tuesday. Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, says the whole war cabinet, and no single individual, is responsible.

STRONGER OFFENSIVE

ROME-A stronger offensive by Germany against the Allies is forecast by Foreign Minister Count Ciano's newspaper Telegrafo of Leghorn. "An offensive against British territory was never closer than it is today," asserts the newspaper.

LOWLANDS ANXIOUS AGAIN

BRUSSELS-There is new anxiety in the lowlands over possibility of invasion. The official Belgian radio urges the people to pay no attention to rumors from any quarter but to remain calm.

INSULTS EXCHANGED

PARIS-An exchange of insults between the French and Germans through loud speakers across "No Man's Land" led last night to a heavy exchange of rifle, machine gun and even heavy artillery fire but not a single man was wounded on either side. Bursts of artillery fire on both sides," an official communique said. The Germans attacked on a wide sector but were beaten back in disorder, the communique announced.

Britain Again Faced With Raising Continental Army; More Favorable This Time

GENERAL SIR HUGH ELLES K.C.B., K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O.

For the second time in a generation we are faced with the task of raising an army on the Continental Scale, and that means, in one way and another, we are faced with a larger or smaller degree of expansion of existing resources, or the creation of new resources; it means not only the raising and training of men but the building up of factories and industrial processes which can supply the necessities of war. All these things require time and somehow or other the time has to be gained.

In 1914, we had to fight for time. You know the story of how the old Expeditionary Force, reinforcer astime went on by Regular Troops from overseas and by some splendid Territorial Battalions formed the wall behind which the Territorials were expanded, the Dominion hundred per cent of land and 35 forces were formed and the New Armies were assembled. NECESSARY WITHDRAWAL

Because the British forces have found it necessary to withdraw from Norway does not mean that they are beaten. Usually the British start out rather badly. It is not the first victory that counts but the last. The British had a bad time in South Africa when the war in that country started. There were a number of bad early setbacks in the last Great War.

We have just as much faith as ever that we shall win the war. The British and French fight best when they seem to be beaten. So far they have not been beaten. They have gained immensely on the sea as a result of the Norwegian campaign and next week we shall learn why the withdrawal took place.

When the war is over it will be found that the British and French still control the Mediterranean Sea, the Sue: Canai, the Straits of Gibraltar, the North Sea and they will see that the ruthless slayers of women and child-l ren are put back within their own boundaries with sufficient curb on their activities to insure that they do not FOR SALE- Five room modern place. as far more orderly. The expansion of our Citizen Armies is being made upon the machinery that exists in the Territorial Army and it is a year since that Territorial Army was doubled, and it is nearly a year since the Militia Act, now the National Service Act, became law. This Act, enables the registration of men between certain ages and their calling up as and when required. This does not mean that all the volunteers necessary are not forthcoming by any means, but it does mean that the army can be formed and carried on with the least possible dislocation to industry and that the civil life of the country can 'go on as uninterruptedly as other circumstances allow. Already an orderly flow of troops has begun from this country to overseas.

I want to say a few words about the question of supply. By supply I mean the provision and the actual delivery of weapons, guns, of shells, of tanks, and vehicles, of hutting, of signalling equipment, of engineering stores, and the whole of the parahpernalia which

HARMONY BOYS ON THE WESTERN FRONT

This trio of members of Britain's Royal Air Force is trying out the power of music on the savage breasts across the way. The boys call themselves the "Grosvenor House Orchestra," Grosvenor House being the name of their dugout. It is also the name of a ritzy London hotel.
