NORWAY IS PRINCIPAL BATTLEGROUND AS WAR THREATENS TO SPREAD

Action on Land, At Sea and in Air Continues As Allies Strive to Stop Nazis From Continuing Aggression

While there are portending shadows of important developments along the Western Front and in the Lowlands as well as in the Southeast towards the Balkans, Norway is still today the principal battleground of Europe. Action on land, at sea and in the air continues as the Germans strive to consolidate those positions taken in this week's campaign and to extend the range of conquest while the Allies—Great Britain, France and Norway—endeavour to break the hold and smash the power of the Reich.

The position of Sweden in relation to the war in Scandinavia appears to become more grave. It cannot long remain out of the conflict appears to be a generally accepted fact. If the British Navy, it is claimed, has been successful in blocking the movement of German troops and supplies by the sea routes to Norway, a German invasion of Sweden in order to provide the Reich with a land route would appear to be the next move. Meanwhile, Sweden is in a state of emergency. Last night there was a black-out of Stockholm as well as of coastal points and lighthouses. An official Swedish statement today declared that that country would endeavour to maintain its neutrality as long as possible. No matter what demands may be made of Sweden, it was said to be inconceivable that Sweden, under any circumstances, would co-operate with Germany in opposing Norway.

In London today an important announcement was made to the effect that the British Navy had completely mined the Skagerrack and Kattegat, entrances to the Baltic Sea, thereby immobilizing the German navy and cutting off the Nazi expeditionary forces in southern Norway from Denmark and the rest.

The Swedish Admiralty yesterday announced that it had mined waters off the west coast of Sweden as an act of self-protection. In London today it was also announced that there had been no major naval engagement in the Skagerrack today, the last incident of note in that area having been the torpedoing last night of a German supply ship.

General Activity

While Great Britain continues naval activity at sea, keeping the Air Force engaged in reconnaissance and attack, at the same time landing troops, all with a view to recapturing such German-occupied points as Oslo, Bergen, Stavanger, Trondheim and Narvik, Norway appears to be holding its own in stubborn land fighting against the Nazis. Bergen and Hamar have been recaptured from the Germans, according to persistent Norwegian reports which the British fail to confirm and which the Germans emphatically deny. The railway line between Narvik and Sweden has been cut and German troops in the north isolated. Germany reported yesterday to landing troops in Norway by parachute.

Meantime on land, on sea and in the air the battle between the Allies and Germany for mastery of the invaded country goes on. Trondheim is one of the points on which conflict is centering. Norwegian land forces with British

That was something with which the government of Canada had no intention of interfering.

Holland Is, However, Preparing For Invasion—Nazi Planes Over Paris

The French claim to have got the best of rather heavy artillery exchanges yesterday in the region of the Vosges Mountains. Holland is still preparing for a German invasion. First and second defence lines have been strengthened and hospitals as well as many civilians have been evacuated from the German frontier area.

German planes flew over Paris and elsewhere in the central portion of France during the night. Air raid alarms were sounded but no bombs were dropped.

Events in Scandinavia should not cause the Allies to forget the Western Front and the possibility of developments there, a French newspaper says.

Germans Are Evidently Masters Yet of Kristiansund, Stavanger, Bergen and Narvik—Naval Battle Off Trondheim With Land and Air Forces Active

STOCKHOLM, April 12: (CP)—Seven German warships are reported in Norwegian advices today to be bottled up in Oslo's harbor and the Norwegians, trying to seal the capital with an iron ring, expect important action at any moment. All highways east and northeast of Oslo are blocked by Norwegian defence forces, according to advices reaching here, as the defenders attempt to weld the solid ring around the capital.

A Finnish radio broadcast report received from the Swedish-Norwegian frontier and emitted from Helsinki says that a battle has been progressing since last night near Kongsvinger, northeast of Oslo. The Norwegian government announces by radio that Germans elsewhere are masters of Kristiansund, Stavanger, Bergen and Narvik. British troops were being landed south of Narvik, it was said.

The situation at Trondheim remains hidden in military secrecy. Five German warships including a pocket battleship, are reported off that port where British forces are said to have attacked by land and sea. Last night a naval battle outside of Trondheim was reported while Royal Air Force planes were co-operating with land forces.

Germany claimed to have seriously damaged a British aircraft carrier and cruiser off Trondheim. Royal Air Force planes were reported to have attacked an airport at Stavanger twice, setting a gasoline dump on fire with Nazi bombers being damaged when it burned.

It is estimated that Germany has already landed from two to four divisions of troops in Norway. The range of conflict is widespread. Eidsvold has been another scene of fighting. Thousands of bombs—both explosive and incendiary—have been dropped on towns and villages in southern Norway, many being set afire.

HELP WITH YOUR THOUGHTS

When helpful news comes through from Europe, we find a good many people beginning to find flaws in the cause for rejoicing and also they seem to have grave doubts about the final outcome. That is not the way to help the men who are fighting our battles. Let us unite in sending across the Atlantic confident thoughts, thoughts of victory that, like our men, scoff at defeat. The poets tell us that thoughts are things. The psychologists tell us that thoughts have a profound effect on the action of men. Some religionists tell us that thoughts are much greater than actions and that mind is much greater than matter. If we project our thoughts across to Europe, we help to keep our men in good cheer and we also have an effect on the people against which they are fighting. So we can help to combat the lies of that archliar Goebbels. We suggest it is poor policy ever to let a neighbor or friend or enemy hear us utter one word that would indicate doubt as to the righteousness of our cause, the ability of our men, the wisdom of our statesmen or the final outcome of the great struggle.

NO SETBACK IN NEWS

As the details of the fighting in and around the North Sea come in, no setback seems to be experienced as a result of later developments. The British people are slow to give details for a number of reasons. It is natural for them to be reticent and careful about what they say, especially in wartime, and it is necessary to be careful not to give news to the enemy. All day yesterday the number of enemy casualties seemed to be increasing until it reached a point that indicated how great was the victory the allied forces had won.

To Drive Nazis Out

Moves are also being made to drive the Nazis out of Oslo. British warships were reported moving up the fjord while shore batteries were being reinforced by the Germans with more Nazi warships also reported to be on the way.

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Goteborg, Sweden, said that German transport driven aground in Wednesday night's battle off the Swedish coast were still blazing and that one thousand bodies were reported floating on the water. Six of ten German transports were reported sunk following an encounter with British naval vessels in Skagerrak. Bodies of no less than three thousand German soldiers and sailors are reported to have been landed at Oslo.

Germany resorted to air bombing of civilian populations in southern Norway yesterday including Hamar, Elverum and another small town not far from the Swedish frontier

GALIANO ISLAND

This well known Gulf Island inherited its name from a northern island named by Captain Vancouver in 1792 in respect for his friend, Don Dionisio Galiano, Commander of a Spanish expedition, with whom he breakfasted one early morning at Point Grey.

GALIANO wasted days on end battling against poor winds and strong tides. Precious days that the fisherman of today would waste except for the advantages of efficient marine engines and fuels. Even hours are vital when fish are running . . . that's why motor dependability is essential. Guarantee results by re-fueling and lubricating with Standard Marine Products. They are specifically developed for all classes of coastal vessels!
