Nazis Aim At King's Residence

BUCKINGHAM PALACE IS STRUCK FIVE TIMES IN DAYLIGHT BOMB ATTACK

King and Queen Present at Time But Take to Shelter and Are Unhurt—Downing Street Also Struck

LONDON, September 13.—Buckingham Palace and grounds were struck five times today by Nazi aerial bombs but the Germans failed in the attempt to destroy the edifice. A twin-engined war plane dived from the clouds straight for the Palace and leveled out to glide and aim its cargo. Two bombs fell in the open quadrangle in the centre, shattering windows, one demolished the private chapel in the south wing and two others, apparently incendiary, landed in the grounds outside the iron gates near Queen Victoria's monument. Damage to the Palace was slight. The King and Queen took to shelter and escaped injury. Later, when "all clear" sounded, they were able to tour the grounds and examine the damage. Three members of the staff—plumbers—sustained slight injuries.

Incendiary bombs were also hurtled down Downing Street, where Prime Minister Winston Churchill has his official office and residence, and adjacent points but caused no damage. Somerset House, Grosvenor Hotel and eight churches were among places listed officially today by the Press Association as having been affected by recent raids.

A number of fires speckled the central London area during the main raid today. British fighters harried the Nazi bombers and hot anti-aircraft fire often seemed to singe their tails.

Longest Daylight Raid
The raid in which Buckingham Palace was attacked occurred during today in daylight and was of four hours and nine minutes duration—the longest daylight raid the Nazis have made on the capital. It was the second raid of the day on the central area of the city. High explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped. Later there was a 15-minute alarm.

The daylight raids, the first of which was at 7:03 a.m., an unusual time, today followed a night raid of eight hours and thirty-two minutes which ended early this morning.

Against the new technique of British anti-aircraft barrage, with elimination of searchlights and new detection and predictor apparatus, was successful in turning away the enemy and, unable to strike effectively in the heart of the city, he dumped his bombs on the outskirts. Time and time again during the night mass formations were turned away by the barrage. The Nazis then resorted to coming in singly and in small formations. The anti-aircraft barrage was more intensive than on any previous night. Damage and casualties were again lighter than on previous nights.

The enemy also conducted raids during the night on other parts of the British Isles but they were not heavy and casualties and damage are reported to have been light. Only a few were killed and injured. Lancashire was among the districts raided.

Tendency of the attacking German planes appears to be the increasing use of deferred action bombs.

For the twenty-four hours of Wednesday 165 are officially listed as having been killed and 420 injured in air raids on London, bringing the total since the intensive air attacks began at the end of last week to 1175 killed and 4700 seriously injured. A high percentage of these are women and children. In raids yesterday the Church of St. John the Baptist was damaged and Regent Street between Oxford Street and Piccadilly Circus was closed off owing to dangerous condition.

Although some bombs fell in the capital during the night, the raid-

LONDON, Sept. 13.—"German bombs may break our monuments and our treasured possessions but they will never break the ancient spirit of Britain" declared Rt. Hon. Our faith in ultimate triumph has now been strengthened into firm conviction. Our war production is on the upgrade despite attempts to impede the war effort. We are successfully standing up to the ordeal and are vigorously carrying the attack to the enemy. The outlook, though grim, is not disquieting. SABOTAGE POSSIBLE IN BLAST

New Jersey Powder Plant Explosion Recalls Explosion Of First Great War Days

DOVER, New Jersey, Sept. 13: (CP)—Twenty-nine persons were officially listed as dead and 125 listed as dead and 125 injured, many of the latter being in the Dover General Hospital, as a result of an explosion yesterday in the Hercules powder plant, five miles away. It was the worst arms manufacturing plant explosion in the United States since the Blackton blast just before the United States entered the first world war.

Every building in the plant was wrecked and, as flames leaped from powder house to powder house, the resultant fire continued into the night. Ground fire fighting forces having considerable difficulty in coping with the conflagration, airplanes were pressed into service to drop fire extinguishing liquids.

Damage is estimated at upwards of $1,000,000. Working on $17,000,000 of orders for munitions for both United States and Great Britain, the working force had recently been increased from 300 to 1200 men.

The fact that the first explosion occurred during the change of shifts accounts for fewer casualties than might otherwise have been the case.

There are various theories as to the cause of the blast. One is that it might have been caused by a can of dry powder being detonated by spontaneous combustion. The flames leaped from building to building and magazine to magazine.

An official of the company said that it was either vapor or sabotage that caused the disaster.

Federal Bureau of Investigation operatives have already arrived here to conduct an investigation. The force of the blast caused considerable damage in the village of Kenville, where the plant is located, and children as far as two miles away sustained injuries. President Franklin D. Roosevelt, on being advised of the disaster, ordered the war department to assist the American Red Cross in relief measures.

In connection with the theory of sabotage, it is recalled that ten days ago the New York tabloid newspaper "P. M." suggested that this plant was listed for an attack by German Nazi saboteurs and sympathizers.

CANADA'S FIRST CALL

Canada's first call for military training comes at last and, as a result forty thousand young men will enter camp this fall to fit themselves to take part in defence services. They will drill and learn various kinds of war strategy so that, if Canada should be attacked, they will know what to do.

It is quite probable that this training, if it is properly carried out, will become a part of the education of every young man. The physical set-up of the soldier is excellent and the lads will learn to be real soldiers.

MUST MOVE QUICKLY

If the Germans really intend to invade Britain they must move quickly because already the Royal Air Force is busy bombing them every night and the guns at Dover are giving them trouble. Every day the German forces remain in that vicinity they will be in imminent danger from the air. That is the great reason why they cannot afford to wait.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBING

Yesterday the Prince Rupert Rotary Club heard from Captain Roy Rufford, padre of the garrison at Prince Rupert, the story of how he and a few companions climbed about eight thousand feet up a mountain. It is a wonderful thing to tell about. The man up there has the advantage of feeling that he is well above the ordinary mortal and can look down from the heights and is privileged to say anything he likes. He evidently feels akin to the trout fisherman, only trout fishing is the last word in laziness whereas mountain climbing seems to be the very extreme of action and possibly of irresponsibility. At any rate mountain climbing must be real exercise with real thrills occasionally to give the climber something to talk about.

ON THE HEIGHTS

Some few privileged people go through life always on the heights, enjoying the bracing air of the high lands, keen, bright, inspired, forever trying to get to higher places. It is a great way to be. Now and again they catch the sight of the beautiful pure peak of the mountain above and they once more set about trying to reach it. Of course they never get to a realization of their aspirations but they live in that rarified atmosphere of the mountain peaks and seem to enjoy themselves all the time, even when an occasional fog comes up and envelops them.

Most of us look with envy on the mountain climbers but, when the opportunity comes to join them and share in that greater perspective, getting an occasional vision of the unattainable, we turn again to the easy, luxurious lowland paths and forget that there is a higher and greater and better life offering.

These are thoughts that come to some of us as we listen to the racy tales of high adventure as the higher life of the mountain tops is pictured—the glorious glaciers, the glimpses of the mountain peaks and life as it is led by the climbers, the men of vision.

Canada's War Chiefs

HON. ANGUS L. MACDONALD
Minister of National Defence for Naval Affairs

By C. R. BLACKBURN, Canadian Press Staff Writer
(Copyright, 1940, by The Canadian Press)

Hon. Angus Lewis Macdonald, a studious son of Nova Scotia's Inverness highlands, is not a naval man but few appointments in recent years have met such widespread acclaim as his selection as Minister of National Defence for Naval Affairs. Like most maritimers he has a love for the sea and the men who sail. This, coupled with his administrative experience made him a "natural" for the job of heading the naval ministry.

His appointment was announced in the House of Commons last July 8 and he got down to business almost immediately. Premier of Nova Scotia at 43 and leader of that government until his appointment to the federal portfolio, "Angus L." had often been mentioned as a certainty for a high place in the Dominion's life.

He had no seat in the House of Commons during the last parliamentary session but on August 12 received an acclamation in Kingston City, the constituency represented by the late Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, who died last June in an airplane crash.

Angus L. brought to his new post the dry wit of his Scotch forbears. He brought too the keen mind of a successful lawyer and the hard-won experience of a soldier in the First Great War.

He likes to tell a joke on himself. And for the time when he can forget official duties this quiet spoken representative of the long "mac" and small "d" Macdonalds has a fund of amusing and pointed stories.

Angus L. is a smoker. With the thrift natural to a Scot there was a time when he rolled his own smokes. Lately he has turned to ready-made cigarettes.

Macdonald's hair is graying in a distinguished way. He is slender almost to the extent of being thin. But his piercing blue eyes and eloquence as an orator give the lie to his almost shy manner.

The navy minister is a good listener. But he is also a good cross-examiner and questioning newspapermen more often than not have found themselves subject to a good deal of inquiry rather than being on the receiving end of all answers. When he can do so conveniently Angus L. snatches an hour to appear at some necessary function or to meet with comrades of the last

Cape Breton Scot

The navy minister was born in Dunvegan, Inverness County, in the heart of the Cape Breton Highlands 50 years ago. His father, Lewis, was a Scot. His mother, Veronica Perry, was French.

Angus L. went overseas in the First Great War with the 26th Nova Scotia battalion as a lieutenant and returned a captain with the 185th battalion of the Nova Scotia Highland Brigade. The Scotch burr in on his tongue and he speaks the Gaelic with fluency.

The minister's legal training at Dalhousie Law School in Halifax, where he became a law professor, followed preliminary education in the common schools of his native county.

He attended Port Hood Academy and the University of St. Francis Xavier in Antigonish, N.S., and then took post-graduate courses at Columbia and Harvard Universities.

Politics interested him. In 1930 Macdonald tried for Dominion political honors in his native county but was defeated. At that time he was practising law in Halifax.

A short time later he was invited to attend a Liberal party convention called to choose a new provincial leader. To Angus L.'s astonishment he found himself the convention's almost unanimous choice.

He led the party to victory in the provincial elections of 1933 and 1937 and was premier and provincial secretary.

The minister married Agnes, daughter of John Foley of Halifax, in 1924. They have two daughters and a son.

Man in the Moon

Every dollar subscribed to the war loan fund gives an extra kick to Hitler's pants.

Jake says he'd like ten thousand kicks if he only had the cash.

A certain judge, famed for his unruffled behavior in any crisis, once had the misfortune to fall down the stairs. He fell from the very top to the very bottom—bouncing on each stair, and finishing by rolling right across the corridor.

One of his servants, hearing the disaster, rushed up to help.

"I hope your honor isn't hurt?" asked the man anxiously.

"No," replied the judge, with a wry smile, "it's not my honor that is hurt."

Bertie: "There goes a man who can tell the fortune of almost anybody in this little town."

Pam: "Does he use a crystal or cards?"

Bertie: "Neither; he's the bank manager."

There once was an erudite ermine Who said: "This I cannot determine:

When my skin's on a coat I'm a creature of note,

But when I'm alive I'm—just vermin."

Friday, 13th—
And So What?
Why Worry? There's Nothing to Back Up its Reputation

Victor of a score of wartimes over several centuries, the old jitterbug Friday the 13th pops out of the calendar today to blitzkrieg superstitious souls who may be inclined to take him seriously.

Friday the 13th was around once previously since the war opened. It was Friday, October 13, 1939, and three German submarines were destroyed that day—certainly no lucky date for the enemy.

There will be another appearance of the proverbial unlucky combination of day and date this year—Friday December 13. Next year it will turn up only once—in June. In 1942 there will be reappearances in February, March and November.

As a matter of fact, historical or statistical, there is nothing to indicate that Friday the 13th is more unlucky, generally speaking, than any other day on the calendar.

But, nevertheless, thousands of people today refuse to set out on a journey by land, sea or air; start a new job or have a needed operation. The old superstition which may have had its roots in the beginning of the Christian era 1900 years ago dies hard.

Its Origin

Perhaps the most accepted origin of the Friday the 13th idea is in the fact that there were 13 at the Last Supper, including Judas Iscariot, who next day, traditionally a Friday, betrayed Jesus Christ for crucifixion.

The astrologers of ancient Babylon declared 13 unlucky. Mythologists of Scandinavia blacklisted the number because Balder, their sun-god had to die when 13 were found in the circle of Valhalla.

Annette's Show and Tea for Boys' Band is Huge Success—$130 Taken

Yesterday afternoon about three hundred ladies attended a unique fall fashion show by Annette at the Moose Hall. The hall was arranged in cabaret style with the models circulating among the tables displaying the latest in fall wearing apparel.

The Boys' Band played until the show started and an orchestra consisting of Mrs. J. S. Black, Robert Greenfield and Leo Poitras played for the show. The program was arranged with professional precision with acts interspersing at the display.

The climax of the show was a beautiful wedding featuring six bridesmaids, a flower girl and bride.

Those taking part in the vaudeville acts were Yvonne Riffou, singing "Alice Blue Gown" and "Love is All;" "Tea for Two," Lois Thompson, Ann Stevens, Lenora Raabe, Jean Murvold, Nina Youngman and Monica Holtby; "Ink Spots," Monica Holtby and Jean Murvold; tap novelty, Maresa Windle, and solo "ap. Marie Boulter.

The mannequins were Miss Bessie Raugh (bride), Miss Flo Obuchina, Miss Peggy Steen, Mrs. V. Alexander, Mrs. L. Owen, Mrs. G. Selig, Mrs. B. Windle, Mrs. P. Dickens, Miss Marie Boulter, Miss M. Silversides, Mrs. W. Stone, Miss Elsie Johansen, Miss Kay Nickerson and little Benita Windle as flower girl.

Ticket No. 92, held by Mrs. Hanford Perkins, won a novelty bolster. The affair was for the benefit of the Boys' Band and $130 was taken.

King Carol Is In Spain
Former Monarch Of Rumania Arrives In Barcelona On Way To Lisbon

On the bill of lading, they were listed merely as an express shipment of 13 horses, but a fortune of thoroughbreds arrived at the fabled King Ranch at Kingsville, Texas, recently. Heading the batch from the Kentucky blue grass was Bold Venture, 1936 Kentucky Derby winner for which the ranch interests reportedly handed over $40,000. Also included was Ciencia, bred on the King ranch, 1939 winner of the Santa Anita Derby and the only filly to turn the trick. A third big-time stakes winner was Dawn Play, another mare, which captured the American Oaks in Chicago three years ago. Split Second, which has won her share of first-class races for the King ranch, was in the consignment. Split Second and Ciencia are mated to War Admiral. Other arrivals were On Hand, bred to Man o' War; Synonym, bred to Johnstown; and the following, all mated to Bold Venture: Last Boat, Incandescent, Gulf Breeze, Otra Morena, Maravilla and Eye-to-Eye.

Looking back over a quarter-century of golf Walter Hagen singles out Harry Vardon of England as the most accurate player he ever saw. Hagen's career covers most of the years since golf has been an international sport. He has been all of the great shooters, and beaten most of them at one time or other. "Vardon should top any all-star list," Hagen said. "He had marvellous accuracy with both woods and irons. If he could have putted, few would ever have beaten him. You have to think about the others. There have been some fine players. For his length, and accuracy too, Sammy Snead must be chosen as the driver. Gosh, he hits 'em a mile, doesn't he? And Bob Jones for the brassie. He was a steady, and the greatest of the amateurs. No one has ever been able to handle a spoon any better than Paul Runyan. He's short off the tee, you know, and has to hit a lot of those spoons. No one could make a mashie behave like Vardon. I like Jock Hutchinson and Chick Evans among the older players for the short irons. Jock was particularly good with the snide and Chick with the nib'ick. Dick Metz and Jimmy Demaret of the youngsters are just about as good."

NAZI HEEL BEING FELT

Shortage of Food, Clothing And Other Necessities Of Life In France Already

LONDON, Sept. 13: (CP)—Numerous acts of sabotage, such as the cutting of telegraph and telephone wires, are reported by people arriving at Lisbon from France, says the correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph.

At Bordeaux the Germans have issued proclamations saying that if the sabotage continues, the entire population will be heavily punished, says the correspondent who adds:

"Much discontent has been caused among the French by the stopping of communications between occupied and unoccupied territory, except for persons on special missions.

"All British subjects in the Bordeaux region have been rounded up. Both men and women have been sent to concentration camps

"An increasing shortage of food-stuffs, clothing and almost all the necessities of life is reported. In non-occupied territory, fruit is about the only thing fairly plentiful. Bread is black and sour, eggs are very scarce; cheese and potatoes are scarce; sardines and jam are unobtainable; there is little meat, and rice and macaroni are rationed severely."

Captain Roy Durnford Explains How He Reached Point Nine Thousand Feet Up Mountain

The joys, trivial happenings and tribulations of mountain climbing were fully explained to the members of the Prince Rupert Rotary Club at its luncheon yesterday by Capt. (Rev.) R. C. H. Durnford who, with a party led by Dr. Neal Carter, climbed to within a thousand feet of the peak of one of the Seven Sisters at Cedarvale. The feature of the trip was spending the night on the mountain during rain and fog with nothing but a hard biscuit to chew.

Capt. Durnford said they climbed 2,300 feet the first day and, by that time, they were ready for a rest. They spent Sunday just wandering around admiring the scenery and incidentally climbing only about a thousand feet in their rambles. Next morning they were up early and by noon reached a point on the mountain side 6,000 feet above sea level or well over a mile up in the air. They climbed ed scree, crossed a huge glacier and got to within a thousand feet of the top of the mountain when they were enveloped by fog and decided to return. Some members of the party wished to proceed but better counsels prevailed and they started for the base. Rain came, the wind blew and altogether it became very uncomfortable. Finally they lost their way and had to sleep in a little overhanging crevice that gave them a little shelter. In the morning they had to retrace their steps until they discovered something familiar and then they proceeded toward camp.

Captain Durnford described in some detail his first experience in sliding down a glacier with only his ice pick to use as a brake. On the whole the climb was an outstanding experience and one he would not on any account have missed.

Communal Meals For Lonely Men

English Seacoast Towns, Bereft of Women, Plan Common Dining Halls

GERAT YARMOUTH, Eng., Sept. 13. (CP)—One of the problems of war—how to get on without your wife—is troubling civic officials of this coastal town.

Many wives have been evacuated. Many restaurants have been closed. Husbands have to cook their meals at home. The result is not entirely satisfactory in many cases.

To overcome this difficulty the mayor is trying to introduce a scheme of communal meals on a no-profit basis. The plan is in the preliminary stages but officials hope to obtain a communal dining room and provide meals for the wifeless husbands.

These "grass widowers," still enjoy their experiments with the can-opener, haven't yet shown much interest in the scheme. The organizers believe a few more weeks of burnt beans and undercooked hamburger will soon bring them around.

Insistent Demand in Britain for More Guardians of the Law

LONDON, Sept. 13. (CP)—Britain, involved in preparations for its greatest battle, still is about the most fertile place in the world for the growth of new organizations. They pop up overnight, usually without any warning or announcement.

For instance, one day you read a letter to one of the newspapers. It complains, say about the lack of policewomen. There are not enough of these women who patrol the streets and parks, dressed in their blue military-style uniform with its longer-than-average skirts, black stockings and shoes, white gloves and tropical-style blue helmet. So the writer insists there should be more.

Somebody else thinks so too and writes to the paper to say that police chiefs should be compelled to hire more women, who understand certain cases better than men and can handle certain situations better.

That is all that is needed. "The Women's Police Campaign Committee" suddenly is born. It lists Hon. Mrs. Home Peel as Chairman and claims support of "20 national organizations."

Some Opposition

Their reports are sent to the Home Secretary, Sir John Simon. He in turn asks police authorities to consider afresh whether further provisions should be made for employment of women in the respective police districts. The chiefs agree to consider the matter but an editorial in the Police Review indicates they don't like the idea of being compelled to add women to their forces.

"This," says the Review, "is indeed to introduce a new principle in police organization in this country, and the proposal is not likely to be adopted without challenge."

"It is true that a large number of chief constables are not in favor of employing policewomen but it must not be assumed that this is blind prejudice. The Police Federation are also opposed to the employment of policewomen."

"It is widely maintained in the police service that while women may render splendid social service as welfare workers, the ways in which they can usefully be employed in the police force are strictly limited because of their comparatively frail physique and because they are women."

Canada's Quilts Are Appreciated

Gifts From Dominion Will Bring
Comfort to Many Folk in Britain

LONDON, Sept. 13. (CP)—Cases of smart new clothes and of home-made quilts are arriving in Britain from Canada.

The clothes, most of them made by Canadian women, some of them bought, are being distributed to British refugees and any others who need them. Some were given to the Czech relief fund, some to Norwegians, some went to children evacuated from the Channel Islands, who had no time to bring their own clothes.

The quilts are arriving because many Canadians in Britain wrote home describing the record-breaking cold spell of last winter. Women of the Dominion want to be sure their kinfolk in the fighting forces are going to be warm enough next winter.

They're mostly squares of colored cloth, stitched onto a quilt of thick flannelette.
