BRITISH BOMBERS SCORE HITS ON BERLIN

LOOK FOR INVASION

Observers All Agree That Hitler Must Attempt It Soon—Maybe Tomorrow?

LONDON, Sept. 12: (CP)—Britons are reading warnings in the newspapers to expect an invasion soon as the certain climax of the recent intensified raiding of London which is accepted as an effort on the part of the enemy to detract attention from the major undertaking.

H. R. Knickerbocker, American correspondent, whose predictions in certain cases have been of considerable accuracy, gave the "tip" today that the invasion would be attempted tomorrow. Instead of aiming direct at London, he says that the landing will be attempted at Dover, the narrowest Channel point. Concentration of the enemy's invading force on the French side of the Channel has, Knickerbocker says, reached the saturation point. Barges are ready to carry tanks, men, artillery and supplies.

Military authorities are convinced that Hitler must make his invasion attempt within the next week or ten days if he is to make it at all before next spring. Weather was unfavorable yesterday for an attempted invasion, the Channel being quite choppy, but it appeared better again today.

Whereas three months ago an invasion attempt might have had a reasonable chance of success, Britons are now convinced that it is doomed for utter failure and are even welcoming the prospect as giving them the opportunity to deal a deadly blow to the Nazi forces.

Meantime the Royal Air Force, from the air, the Royal Navy, from the sea, and heavy batteries, from the Dover shore, have been pounding away steadily with strong action against the invasion transport barge and naval concentrations and have been damaging them considerably, this being another reason why Hitler will be forced to move soon.

Two German convoys were attacked by British bombers off the French coast yesterday while other squadrons attacked barge concentrations, docks and shipping. Planes of the coastal command sank a supply ship off Dunkerque and hit another. A third was seriously damaged off Cap Griz Nez.

Russian reports that Germans had already landed in Ulster were officially denied last night.

First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander, speaking yesterday, promised that, if the Germans attempted to come across in surface craft, they would get "something to go on with."

New Technique Of Barrage Baffles London Air Raids; Berlin Again Heavily Hit

Hitler Given Something to Think About as Preparations For His Attempted Invasion of England Reach Zero Hour

BACK AS USUAL TODAY

LONDON, September 12: (CP)—After a lull of almost twelve hours, a reconnaissance raid by German scouting planes shattered a quiet day in London. The air raid warning was the first London had had for the day, commencing at 4:39 p.m. (7:39 a.m. Pacific Standard Time) with the all clear sounding at 5:41 p.m. It was the usual time—between 4:30 and 6 p.m.—for the war planes to buzz over the city. No bombs were dropped and there was no anti-aircraft fire. The only sound was the drone of the visiting aircraft. Authorities believed that the planes were sent over to photograph damage done and reconnoitre targets. German aircraft were reported tonight over northeast, northwest and midlands of England and also over Scotland. Sirens sounded at 9:11 p.m. in the London area for the second alarm of the day.

LONDON, September 12: (CP)—The past twenty-four hours have been very much in favor of Great Britain as the battle between London and Berlin continued with unabated fury. Britain not only found the answer to the Nazi night attacks by air but beat the enemy to the draw in a great duel of artillery across the Straits of Dover, where Nazi preparations for an invasion have reached the zero hour, and hurled an even more vigorous onslaught upon Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen and other important centres. In Berlin Potsdam and Anhalter railway stations and Tempelhof airfield were heavily hit.

With an air raid alarm period of exactly nine hours ending at 5:30 this morning, the night was the noisiest London has had since the intensified air raids on the capital city began but for Londoners it was the joyful roar of the largest and most effective anti-aircraft barrage to date rather than the dull jangling thud of falling Nazi bombs. Germany's fifth nightly raid was almost entirely scattered by a change of technique in the barrage. The enemy was completely baffled in his attempt to find his targets and no more than twenty bombs fell on the central city during the entire night, doing much less damage and causing considerably fewer casualties than on the preceding four nights.

In the air fighting yesterday over England the score was 89 German planes brought down to twenty-four British with seven pilots saved. During last night two hospitals, many houses and two small factories were hit in the southern part of the city. A joint communique issued by the air and information ministries announced that casualties for Tuesday night's raid were eighteen killed and 280 injured. Last night the toll was even less.

In Heart of Berlin
In bombing the Anhalter railway station, the Royal Air Force struck again at the heart of Berlin last night. The Tempelhof airfield is one of the Nazi capital's principal air centres.

The British fliers reached Berlin shortly after midnight and soon were dropping their bombs.

A large railway yard south of Potsdam station was straddled by heavy calibre explosives and incendiary bombs.

Anhalter station was attacked by a raider who evaded searchlights and anti-aircraft barrage, hitting the station building and tracks.

Numerous fires flared in Berlin following a ninety-two minute bombing attack, an official German statement said. The raid started at 11:30 p.m. An unknown number were killed and wounded.

In this wing the former Kaiser was a guest before the First Great War and he declared it a non-military objective during that conflict, ordering that it should not be bombed.

HELP BY PROVIDING ROOM OR FLAT

People who are living in a large house only part of which they are using, might help out the situation just now by renting a room or so to soldiers living in the city who wish to bring their wives to Prince Rupert. A number of people have made small alterations in order to convert their homes or other buildings into flats. If one hundred people would make room for only one couple or small family the present shortage of houses would not be felt as acutely as it is today. A few are building houses but most people are unable to do that. It is too much of an effort.

In Britain the people are taking strange children into their homes and caring for those injured or deprived of homes by the air raids. Here we have no such troubles. The soldiers are fighting this war for us and we can make life a lot more pleasant for some of them if we try to house their wives here instead of compelling them to remain in the south. The men are ready to pay but just now there are no rooms available.

INVASION COMING

It is evident that Prime Minister Churchill believes an attempt will be made to invade Britain soon. It is also evident that he is prepared to resist any such invasion. A large part of the country is under arms and the country is aroused as never before. Every old blunderbus in the country is being polished up against possibility of an invasion.

In the case of Britain the war will be carried on not only by soldiers but by every man, woman and child in the country. Lads just out from school will be ready. Women are armed in many communities and it will be a difficult job for a parachutist to land in any part of the country, even on the moors or the fields of the farmers. This is an all-in war, a real war for freedom.

A GREAT IDEAL

The British now look upon themselves as the liberators of the world. Everything depends upon them. They are fighting not only for Canada, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand but also for the United States and for conquered Europe. Never before has there been such a war, never such an ideal. Fighting in such a cause lends steel to the muscles, determination to the mind, spirit to the whole being. Many in this country would esteem it a great privilege to be in such company.

A NEW WEAPON

While Hitler and his arch-liar friend, Dr. Goebbels, have been talking about using a new weapon in their attacks upon Britain, the British people have been saying little but working hard and have evolved a new and effective form of attack. At this time of year many of the German forests are dry and ignite easily. The new weapon is effective in setting these ablaze and exposing many previously hidden supply stations and ammunition dumps as well as destroying some of these. This is something of which the Hitlerites had not dreamed.

Canada's War Chiefs

BRIGADIER KENNETH STUART Deputy Chief of the General Staff

By KEN CLARK, Canadian Press Staff Writer
(Copyright, 1940, by The Canadian Press)

In a wide, bare office at National Defence Headquarters in Ottawa, Brigadier Kenneth Stuart holds down one of the biggest jobs in Canada's expanding army. He's Deputy Chief of the General Staff. That means that, if for any reason the Chief of Staff Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, is unable to discharge his duties on the spot, then Brig. Stuart would be in command. To put it mildly it is a most important job.

On anything other than business the brigadier is a very difficult man to see. But every day he is at his desk, much of the time in his khaki shirt sleeves. He wears a pair of light, horn-rimmed spectacles. He has a neat, graying military moustache. Sometimes he smokes, his cigarette package lying precisely on his cleared desk. Sometimes he writes in a round vertical hand and he numbers each paragraph 1, 2, 3.

The deputy chief of staff is a lean, spare kind of a man with a pleasant voice and an easy manner, an engineer, a professional soldier, now middle-aged, who was born at Three Rivers, Quebec. In 1917 the then Colonel Stuart was operating with the 7th Battalion, Royal Canadian Engineers, around Vimy Ridge and at Passchendaele. The next year at a place called Hangard Wood the Canadians were advancing under what the official records delicately call "heavy shellfire" and Colonel Stuart's outfit had to put a bridge across the River Luce.

In The Record

The commanding officer personally supervised this operation, the official record says, and the fact that field guns were able to cross the bridge five hours after zero (the time they gave the word to go) "largely contributed to the success" of the operation. For this sort of thing over a period of years the Brigadier got the Distinguished Service Order and the Military Cross. A couple of times he was mentioned in despatches "for consistent good work and devotion to duty." "Personally reconnoitred the route for artillery under heavy shellfire" the record reads but, if you were to ask the brigadier about it, he would be embarrassed. Everthing about the office where he works now is nice and precise and military. The military do not like civilian hero worship or hysteria and it is really, as the brigadier explained, a little out of line even to see the press.

On the other hand the brigadier has a sort of journalistic vice. He says he is more proud of his work with words than anything else. In 1929 he became editor of the Canadian Defence Quarterly and did that on the side until the current war broke out.

Otherwise he was commandant at the Royal Military College at Kingston, Ontario. With him it's a business-war. It runs in the family. Last December the Brigadier's son, V. C. Stuart, graduated from R. M. C., as did the brigadier, and recently the son got his wings as a pilot officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

These particular Stuarts were mostly in the wars except for the Brigadier's father who was in the Church of England at Three Rivers. Before that the family lived in England for 300 years and the grandfathers and great-grandfathers were army men.

Before attending R. M. C., the brigadier went to Bishop's College School at Lennoxville, Quebec. He was commissioned in the Royal Canadian Engineers in June, 1911, and proceeded to the school of Military Engineering at Chatham, England.

He remained there for two years and served about nine months with the 1st Division (British) at Aldershot. He went overseas in command of the 1st Army Troop Company, Royal Canadian Engineers. Then he commanded the 7th Field Company and then was second in command of the 7th Battalion.

After the war he was stationed as a permanent force officer at Winnipeg, Calgary and Quebec until in 1925 he went to the staff college at Camberley, England.

On his return he was stationed in Victoria as District Engineer-in-Chief and went to Ottawa as Assistant Director of Military Intelligence in 1929. He stayed four years at Defence Headquarters.

Then the Brigadier went to R. M. C. as second in command, remained in that job for five years and came back to Defence Headquarters in the General Staff as Director of Military Operation and Intelligence. He held this office when war broke out and on October 15 he was sent back to R. M. C. as commandant.

Last July 6 he was appointed Deputy Chief of the General Staff. But there is nothing Colonel Blimp about the brigadier. Rather it is reassuring to visit headquarters and observe the professional attitude of this professional soldier who has sufficient humor and pliability to understand it might be advantageous if the general public learns indirectly something about who is conducting operations.

British Air Ministry Thinks Germans Will Repeat on False News Mongering

By D. E. BURRITT
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON, Sept. 12: (CP)—For the benefit of relatives of Canadians serving in the Royal Air Force, an official of the Air Ministry branded as "false and malicious" a German broadcast purporting to record the death of four Canadian airmen.

The broadcast, made to America August 22, was believed by officials to have been a "vile" attempt to impress youths now enrolled under the Empire Air Training Scheme.

"But," said a ministry spokesman, "if there still is anyone who does not realize the depths of foulness to which the Nazi propaganda machine is descending this example may convince him."

Picturing Canadians as flying an antiquated machine and paid a "premium to fight without parachutes and other essential equipment," the Nazi report told of the "death of four Canadians" which a "German announcer said had been brought down in a Bristol Blenheim by German anti-aircraft guns in France.

Ordinarily, the ministry would have ignored the broadcast as routine propaganda but a spokesman said officials had taken into consideration the feelings of parents of Canadian fliers and wanted to assure them that the entire broadcast was false.

"Now, first of all," said the spokesman, "it is quite definite that the whole story is imaginary. No Blenheim manned by Canadians has crashed in France. In fact, Canadians in Britain do not use Blenheim planes at all."

No Names Given

Failure of the Germans to name the Canadians was described by the spokesman as another weakness of the report. He said it would have been "The easiest thing in the world to do if the story had been genuine."

The spokesman added:

"There are too very striking points about the story. First, an attempt is made to suggest that Britain is careless of the lives of her sons from the Dominions and sends them out in antiquated machines without protective equipment. This is a vile libel, as hundreds of Canadians can testify; soon it will be thousands.

"No aircraft could even take off from a British airbase without parachutes, and no one is prouder of his aircraft than the Canadian pilot. But no doubt the idea that the British staff might be afraid of the Dominion airmen going home to tell how badly he is equipped is one which occurs naturally to the Nazi mind."

The broadcast was expected by the spokesman to be the prelude to a similar series in an effort to sabotage the Empire scheme.

Old Lefty Grove pitched the Boston Red Sox to a 6 to 5 thirteen-inning victory over Detroit Tigers Tuesday and the Tigers dropped back into second place in the hectic American pennant race one percentage point below the Cleveland Indians who, with the New York Yankees, had an idle day. Washington Senators defeated Chicago White Sox and replaced them in fifth position. Pittsburgh Pirates won a double-header from the Phillies and rain caused postponement of all other National League games Tuesday.

Even in wartime it takes a lot to upset a cricket match in England. Probably for the first time in history an air-raid stopped play at Lord's cricket ground in London. The Times tells it: "As the umpires and the teams left the field at the sound of the siren, many spectators remained in their seats; others took cover beneath the stands and a few went to public shelters in the neighborhood."

"But one spectator remained calm and imperturbable—a Chelsea pensioner who stood alone in the middle of the arena, a vivid figure in his red coat—satisfying himself apparently that the wicket would not crumble before it became the turn of the Scots Guards to bat."

Spectators at a Tottenham Hotspur football club practice match made up their mind they did not want play interfered with and their cheering drowned the wail of the siren. Play continued for several minutes the police approached the referee and asked him to suspend the game. Their action was greeted with booing. A cricket match in another district went on until the raider was seen overhead. Then the match was delayed for only a few minutes while the plane passed over. Some of the players stood under trees, others went to the pavilion.

MORALE IS VERY HIGH IN BRITAIN

Canadian Impressed With Enlivened Spirit Of Sacrifice And Unity In War Effort Of Old Land

By GLADYS ARNOLD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Sept. 12. (CP)—No matter how long it takes to deliver Europe from the shackles of Hitlerism the battle already has been won in Britain's own soul.

That is the impression I brought with me from England after watching the nation emerge from that feeling of security which marked the progress of the war—until the capitulation of France. The seven weeks that separated that unhappy event from the beginning of Germany's massed air attacks on Britain brought a transformation in England.

There was an overnight strengthening of defences, a quickening rhythm in factories and furnaces with a swift rise in production of armaments and planes.

But most important of all—the change came in a moral and spiritual awakening throughout the whole land, which is still going on—a tremendous upsurge of sentiment and determination to build not only a material rampart but an impenetrable spiritual wall behind it.

As if by magic the open fields big enough for landing grounds became studded with obstacles—farm machinery, old cars, cement blocks. Villagers voluntarily made barricades at the entrances of their towns. Golf courses joined other lands already ploughed up for food production.

It was a comfort to see the growing alertness of the rural population. Even in London to inquire for direction was to receive a suspicious glance and invite advice to ask the right source—a policeman. Road and ordinary maps and plans of England and its cities disappeared from news stands and book shops—to be bought only with police authorization.

Blackout's hours of application are published every day and practiced with exactitude. Gas masks are worn obediently. Each day new services spring into being. Men and women volunteers from widely different walks of life give factory workers a weekly day of rest—class differences forgotten. Church steeples and castle turrets have their volunteer observers while men and women have increased their vigilance by constant patrolling of roads on foot and horseback.

Confidence Of Leaders
The mushroom growth of these and many more organizations and local defence units, the increasing seriousness of those taking part justifies Prime Minister Churchill's confident prediction that should land invasion come—Britain's will "stay put"—that Labor Secretary Bevin's "people" are loyal and sound in reawakened spiritual and moral unity.

In the six or seven weeks we watched it, more impressive than the mobilizing of physical forces was the mobilizing of moral forces without which Britain could not win. It has been a deeply moving sight—calling up one's admiration and respect.

From the pocket money of thousands of small English "Dorothys" collected to buy bombers, to the resolution of the King and Queen "to keep their daughters in England and share the anxiety of other British parents" the spirit of sacrifice is uniting the whole people.

WOMEN IN PLANS FOR WAR WORK AFTER WAR

Survey Of First Year Shows Activity In Many Fields Experts Discuss Product Problem Loss Of Markets

By LEO MCGILLIVRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer
TORONTO, Sept. 12: (CP)—

Outbreak of war a year ago was accompanied by a spontaneous upsurge of patriotic enthusiasm among Canadian women that has increased in tempo until now there are literally millions of women contributing directly or indirectly to the nation's war effort.

The women's war effort has been spread over a wide range of activities—nearly everything from making comforts for soldiers on active service to active service itself—and there are indications after the first anniversary of the outbreak of war that women will play an increasingly important part.

The Canadian Red Cross Society has been the focal point of women's war activity since a year ago. As soon as Great Britain declared war on Germany the society was besieged by offers of aid of all sorts and an efficient national organization quickly took advantage of all efforts and set up a smoothly operating machinery to co-ordinate all efforts.

Many Groups
The members of more than 3,000 women's groups throughout Canada now are contributing to the work of the Red Cross in preparation of medical supplies, hospital equipment and such personal comforts for soldiers as knitted sweaters, socks and scarves.

The voluntary registration of Canadian women was established during the year and there now is a registration of 250,000 women with another 50,000 expected from the Maritimes. The registration, done on a voluntary basis, apart from the National Registration, shows in great detail what women can do in such matters as the care of evacuees, first aid and actual war work. At the present time about 125,000 of them are registered with the National War Services Department as available for a variety of tasks.

The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, although working with the Red Cross and other organizations, has 28,000 members who are active in women's war work and who have contributed not only a bomber to the war effort but tons of books, magazines and other field comforts for soldiers, clothing for evacuees and have staffed a number of canteens.

Train For Defence
In many parts of Canada groups of women have formed themselves into voluntary defence groups and have been holding regular shooting practices for "amazon" service if required.

Then there are the thousands of women who have been taking courses privately and under Red Cross auspices in ambulance driving and the care of motor vehicles. The Women's Voluntary Service Corps was organized under the Red Cross and now a corps of khaki-uniformed qualified women drivers, serving without salary and trained to handle "anything on four wheels" is being established throughout Canada.

Finally there are the hundreds of Canadian nurses who enlisted in the army medical corps soon after the outbreak of war. Two units of 20 each are on active service in military hospitals in England and others are serving in military hospitals across Canada.

DANCE AND SONG FILM

Teaming for the first time Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell, "Broadway Melody of 1940" shows at the Capitol Theatre here tonight and tomorrow. With story and music designed especially for the two stars, it is a sprightly, human yarn of two male dancers in a ballroom who attract the attention of a Broadway producer. Through a series of mistakes in identity and mishaps, honors fall to the wrong member of the team until he himself straightens out the tangle and permits his superior partner to dance to fame and romance with Broadway's most famous girl dancing star.

The cast, in addition to Miss Powell and Astaire, includes George Murphy, Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter, Florence Rice and Lynn Carver.

With spectacular backgrounds, the most pretentious number is "Begin the Beguine," other hit numbers including "Please Don't Monkey with Broadway," "Between You and Me," "I've Got My Eyes on You," "I Happen to be in Love" and "I Concentrate on You."

Of Boy Scouts

British Headquarters Report Variety Throughout Areas Of Empire

LONDON, Sept. 12: (CP)—Boy Scouts throughout the Empire are being organized in different ways to help Britain win the war. Here are some of the "good deeds" reported to national headquarters:

Canada—A Dominion-wide good deed consists of doing household jobs, gardening and other chores in the homes of those who have joined the services. In many districts Scouts have "adopted" a family for whom they do odd jobs.

Kenya—Native Scouts have undertaken A. R. P. work, many tramping long distances over difficult country to help to volunteer for duty. Twelve from Limuru walked 18 miles into Nairobi to volunteer, were told their services could best be used locally, and trudged back to report for duty.

Australia—Bush fire fighting services have been taken over to release men for other duties.

Western Australia—Local authorities asked Scouts to bring maps up to date, and they immediately undertook to survey the district.

Bombay—Duties as hospital orderlies, ward - maids, stretcher-bearers have been taken over.

Trinidad—Anti-rumor patrols to deal with "chatterbugs" have been formed.

Watch Duchess

New York Sees Chatelaine Of

A Style Leader

NEW YORK, Sept. 11: (CP)—The Duchess of Windsor, whom, as consort of the Duke of Windsor, Governor-General of the Bahamas, many people are watching for style tips, sounded two interesting notes in the costume she chose for her first Bermuda interview.

She wore a trig suit tailored lines of which repeat a theme the fashion world is watching for fall.

Second, she displayed on its lapel a new jeweled gadget—a big flamingo pin set with diamonds and rubies.

Her suit was of crisp white rayon suiting, bound with navy blue braid on jacket and skirt. Her blouse was navy blue and her shoes were blue and white. Diamond and ruby earrings and ruby and sapphire ring were also worn.

The Duchess wore no nail polish. Her fairly short-cut nails simply were buffed.

Whifflets
From The Waterfront

Gill netting for cohoes and seining for chums continue in parts of Prince Rupert district but the runs are light and catches comparatively small. The gill netting is going on in the Naas and Skeena River and Gardner Canal, Rivers Inlet and Bella Coola areas and the seining around Butedale, Lowe Inlet, Rivers Inlet and south Queen Charlotte Islands. All salmon canneries on the Naas River are now closed but five are still operating in the Skeena River area—Prince Rupert, Inverness, Carlisle, Claxton, Inverness and Cassiar. Down the coast Taltheo, Butedale, Klemtu and Namu are still running. On the Queen Charlotte Islands Shannon Bay is now closed but Pacofi and Lagoon Bay are still operating. Trollers in the district are getting a few cohoes these days but the run is rather spotty.

Owing to many of the larger vessels still being engaged in naval service with the Fishermen's Reserve while others having been engaged in fish packing and other activities, halibut landings at Prince Rupert from Area No. 3 continue to be predominantly American. Today, for instance, there were six American vessels in with a total of 192,000 pounds while not a single Canadian boat was in.

Canada's Lesson In Fruit Juices

Advertising Has Boosted Juice
Drinking Habits Here, Antipodes
Are Told

SYDNEY, Australia, Sept. 12: (CP)—Because of the difficulties ahead to Australian apple and pear growers caused by the lack of shipping to take their product to Britain, orchardists are giving attention now to convincing Canada's example in converting considerable quantities of her fruit into juices.

It has been pointed out by the Apple and Pear Board, the government body acquiring and marketing the whole production of the growers, that in Canada the consumption of apple juice has jumped spectacularly.

"In Canada," says the Board, "advertising has been largely responsible for this result and it is important to note that the increased fruit juice consumption has been accompanied by a largely increased demand for fresh apples."

New Zealand, like Canada and Australia, normally is also a large exporter of apples to Britain. A New Zealand specialist, who recently toured the United States and Canada to study fruit marketing, has pointed out that, through advertising, together with the high recommendation by medical and dietetic bodies, the fruit juice drinking habit in North America was widespread.

Senator Wilson One Of Montreal's
Most Prominent Citizens

MONTREAL, Sept. 12: (CP)—Long outstanding in financial, industrial and social circles in Montreal and the Province of Quebec, Senator Joseph Marcelin Wilson, whose death has just occurred here, engaged in business and politics a very prominent position over a long period of years. He sat on many derectorates and was president of the Banque Canadienne Nationale, the highest financial position in the gift of his compatriots. He resigned this office in November, 1933, owing to ill-health.

Mr. Wilson began the commercial life which was to broaden out in so many directions at the age of 17 when he entered the employment of the wholesale grocery, wine and spirits house of Dufresne and Mongenais, afterwards Mongenais, Boivin and Company. Later, when he became a partner, the firm's name was changed to Boivin and Wilson. It was this company which established at Berthierville the first distillery in Canada manufacturing Holland's gin. Mr. Wilson ultimately bought out all other interests in the concern to become its sole proprietor. When the Quebec government set up its Liquor Commission the firm abandoned its charter and Senator Wilson turned his activities to other business fields.

Mr. Wilson was called to the Senate in 1911 by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Directorates Senator Wilson served on included those of the Banque d'Hochelega which was afterwards merged with the Banque Nationale, Montreal Tramways, Detroit United Railways, George A. Fuller Company of Canada, Limited, Montreal Light, Heat and Power Company Consolidated, Title Guarantee and Trust Company of Canada, and Confederation Investments. He was president of the Windsor Company and the General Trust Company of Canada at one time.

Scotch and French

Senator Wilson came of mixed Scottish and French blood. His paternal grandfather came out to Canada from Scotland and settled in Quebec, marrying into a French-Canadian family, hence the Anglicized name of his children and grandchildren. Joseph Marcelin Wilson was born on his father's farm near Le Bizard, near Montreal December 26, 1880, and educated at the old Plateau Academy in the Metropolis.

Keenly interested in educational movements, Senator Wilson was one of the leading donors to the Universite de Montreal, giving $100,000 towards the new building fund of that institution. He also took a prominent part in giving a subscription in 1928 for building a hostel for Canadian students in Paris. This subscription was accepted by the French government, the sum of 1,500 francs ($600,000 at the time) being raised. Senator Wilson was in Paris in connection with the building of the hostel and was on occasion made a commander of the Legion of Honor by the government of France.

Senator Wilson devoted a large deal of his time to and was a generous supporter of the many charitable and social welfare schemes in which he was interested. He was recognized as one of the stalwarts of the Liberal party for many years and played an important role in the industrial organization of the party.

On January 11, 1887, he married Miss Alexina Geoffrion. Five children were born to them.

Peoples Many Suffer Low Blood
Count—And Don't Know It

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as ever did—even look healthy and strong—but you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, doped, tired and penniless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their job to carry life-giving oxygen from the lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your engine and make the power to turn the wheels, you must have plenty of oxygen to expand the energy in your body and give you great power.

Get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills today.
