Hitler's End Coming - - -

Hitler? Is he winning? His forces move as does a giant glacier, crushing and grinding all before it. But Hitler is doomed, was doomed before he flew a plane or fired a gun or drove a tank. Why dare we say this? Because all history testifies that no man has ever defied | $7.50; 14 spring-filled Mattresses the moral order of this unseen world and not been crushed before its inexorable reality.

The quotation is old, its' time-worn, but it's eternally true "The mills of God grind slowly but they grind exceeding small." Sooner or later between these grinding millstones of righteousness, justice, truth, the ruthless tyrant FOR SALE - Troller, 33 ft., good l must be caught. Triumphant Caesar fell that memorable day, the Ides of March. The seemingly invincible Napoleon, the would-be master of Europe, died a prisoner in exile on the guarded island of St. Helena.

It may not be today. It may not be tomorrow. Time alone tells the day, the year, the century when earth's real victorious hosts have won the battle they had seemed to lose.

The Indestructible - - -

Little time need be wasted in speculation as to what Hitler thinks he has accomplished by destroying considerable more than a thousand churches in Great Britain alone. Until the lull in the Luftwaffe's activities over the island fortress churches, schools and hospitals appeared almost daily in the list of air raid victims, says the Vancouver News Herald.

We need not be surprised. Naziism is the avowed enemy of the spiritual. "A thinking man," said Carlyle, is the worst enemy of the Prince of Darkness"; the school is the first institution to be enslaved wherever the Nazi goes. The hospital stands for that effete practice of mercy to the weak-so unworthy of the strong progressive Nazi. He does well to attack the school, the hospital, the church. If he does not destroy them, they will destroy him. In truth, however, they are beyond the reach of his bombs. The buildings may be destroyed but the spiritual realities of truth, mercy, freedom and faith are indestructible.
