SELECTIVE SERVICE IN DOMINION

Federal Government's New Plan For Use Of Manpower Is Announced

MONTREAL, Dec. 15:-A system of national selective service is to be adopted by the government of Canada, Hon. C. G. Power, minister of national defence for air, announced in addressing a dinner of the Commercial Travellers' Association Saturday night. By authority which the government already has, every man and woman in the Dominion will be placed in the most valuable and useful place in this war. Men will be placed on service in defence of the country's shores. Women will work in arsenals, shops and factories. In the face of imminent danger, there was nothing to do but mobilize al. man and woman power to the besi advantage.

The danger lying in the assurance of easy victory was now passed, Major Power declared. The future must be faced with grim determination and resolve. Lates: developments in the international situation gave no ground for exultation-no ground for despair.

The national selective service plan is experted to be set in motion about the time Parliament reconvenes late next month.

The Pacific coast was now on the front line. The people there faced a new and ruthless enemy. Great Britain was today a thousand times stronger than it was a year ago. With the entry of the United States into the war, 130,000,000 people with all their resources were now full partners in the war.

There was a united hemisphere from Alaska to the Straits of Magellan, from the North Pole to the South Pole.

The war would be long, the minister said, and would take "all we can give in valor, fortitude and perseverence."

A year from today there would be three times as many graduates as there were today from the Empire Training School in Canada.

Vancouver cars are to be registered for use in case of evacuation.

Plight of Germans . . .

Beverley Baxter, writing from England on Novem- Holbrook, retired, who, as an arthe military advisor to President ber 22 for Maclean's Magazine, spoke of strange stories reaching London about the plight of the German army in Russia. The Napoleonic parallel comes irresistibly to mind. It was the largest army the world had ever seen but only a remnant escaped from the cold, the Cossacks and the wolves.

The Germans are not clothed for a winter campaign such as they are facing in Russia. The Russians have left no houses or buildings standing. Behind them are hundreds of miles of territory devastated by their own warfare and the Russian policy of a scorched earth—an earth whose embers are now covered by snow. The German army is so huge that it has drained the nation of its land, 150 miles north of Manila It is reported that General Macmanpower. Slave labor has had to be sent from occu- on the west coast, is a country Arthur has under his command pied territories to take the place of men who have gone from the factories to the forces.

The military plight of the Russians is a serious one but at least they are falling back on villages and towns which can be easily defended, which have buildings and houses to give them shelter. In addition, the Russians are equipped for winter war- he continued, with precipitous fare. "Never in his maddest moment would Hitler have attacked last June if he had thought his army would be storming Moscow in November.

"The question which now arises and which events this winter may determine is whether an army trained only for swift victory can change its psychology to meet adversity."

Counting Chickens . . .

When Adolf Hitler appointed Dr. Alfred Rosenberg any progress so costly, that the as Reich minister for occupied Russian territory he probably believed what he said in Berlin's famous Sportspalast on October 3-that Stalin's armies were so badly beaten that they would never rise again. He had not committed on the retreat from Rostov; Germany strategy and south. Any force along the is based only on victory, according to The Victoria Times. narrow roads in these valleys, he Nevertheless, exploitation of captured areas is going pointed out, would be vulnerable apace; all last week the regimented press of the Reich let itself go in long articles describing the potential resources of a region three times the size of Germany and with a population of approximately 75,000,000. And, paradoxically, when compared with propaganda published during the time when Moscow and Berlin were on presumably friendly terms-more as a species of allies-the campaign insists that this vast area is essential to the Reich's plans to make continental Europe completely self-sufficient.

However, what has attracted the special attention of a little group of Americans still remaining in Berlin is that the important newspaper, Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, asserts bluntly that 'lasting tension with the United States is essential if this scheme to build a tight European economy based on an eastern hinterland is to hold together."

Nazi leaders in Berlin are working feverishly to set up bureaus to handle each branch of the new economy, and German engineers are already busy behind the eastern front taking stock of all industrial property in the occupied area and making plans for the resumption of work in mines and factories. And because all Russian industry is owned by the government of the Soviet Union, Hitler and his gang regard captured mines and factories as legitimate booty which can be taken over without any formalities with owners and managers. So far, so good: but the Battle of Rostov already has disturbed the plan to take over and operate the Caucasian oil wells. The "annihilated" Russian armies may put other smudges on Dr. Rosenberg's blueprint before 1942 dawns.
