New Defence Line

Evacuation Seems Probable—22 Nazi Planes Downed at Athens

ATHENS, April 22: (CP)—Australians and New Zealanders are fighting a brilliant covering manoeuvre as the Greeks and British forces withdraw to new defence positions. Immense losses are being sustained upon the Germans.

The Greek and British forces have now moved back to their third defence line but there is reason to believe that an evacuation of the British Expeditionary Force may be attempted.

German sources claimed to have seen some of the Australians and New Zealanders from escape but such reports are not confirmed.

New Line Adjusted British forces in Greece have completed adjustment of the line against serious interference from the enemy who has been roughly handled wherever he was met.

A British communiqué announced today that the evacuation of the island of Crete is being considered.

Meanwhile the British command announced that Imperial forces had recaptured a shortened line of the Isonzo river on lower side of the C'hrvs Mountains on the northern edge of a narrow plain.

Possibility Of Germany Essaying Drive Through Spain Towards Gibraltar Is Seen

MADRID, April 22:—Spain is seething with rumors of the possibility of war in the Iberian Peninsula with the Germans possibly essaying a siege of Gibraltar in the effort to gain control of the Western Mediterranean.

To obtain permission from General Francisco Franco for the moving of 50,000 to 90,000 German troops through Spain for an assault on Gibraltar is said to be the purpose of a current visit of Rudolf Hess, deputy leader of the Nazi party, to Spain. General Francisco Franco is said to be not in accord with collaboration with the Nazis but Raymond Sunear, his foreign minister, is.

Rumors of British and United States designs on Portugal are typical Nazi propaganda. There are said to be fresh overtures to Franco and Spain to join actively with the Axis.

LONDON, April 22 (Canadian Press)—Nazi planes strafed Plymouth for hours last night and struck again at England today through a thick mist which hung over Dover Strait. In the attack on Plymouth, the Nazi raiders swept through an anti-aircraft barrage which was visible forty miles away and dumped loads of fire and explosive bombs. Casualties are feared to be heavy although possibly not as heavy as in a previous raid.

Another south coast town was also attacked by bombers last night but the raid was not as severe as that on Plymouth. London had a night alarm but no enemy planes came over and no bombs were dropped. Elsewhere on the British Isles it was a quiet night.

Churchill Is Silent On Greek-Africa Situation In Speech

Tells Parliament of Heavy Bombardment of Tripoli But Admits That Strategic Island Near Dardanelles Has Probably Been Occupied by Nazis

LONDON, April 22: (CP)—Silent on the progress of critical military operations in Greece and North Africa, Prime Minister Winston Churchill had good news and bad for the House of Commons today. He declined to discuss the great military position nor would he say what was going on in Libya. Cheers, however, greeted the announcement that the Mediterranean fleet had bombed Tripoli at dawn Monday, heavily damaging the harbor. He added that the fleet air arm had shot down four or five Nazi troop-carrying planes.

Mr. Churchill spoke gravely when he said he thought it not unlikely that the Germans had occupied Samothrake Island near the Dardanelles, the gateway to the Black Sea.

The President would stay, Premier King said, at Government House, probably for two or three days, as the personal guest of the Governor General and Princess Alice.

A conference between representatives of the canneries and the Native Brotherhood of British Columbia, which was to have been held here April 30 to discuss salmon prices for the year, has been postponed, it was announced today. The reason is that the canners have so far been unable to obtain information from the United Kingdom regarding 1941 pack. Officials of the Native Brotherhood are in the city today in the persons of Ambrose Reid, business agent; Paul Price, second vice-president, and Alfred Wesley, corresponding secretary, all of Port Simpson. They arrived in the city this morning on the boat Anna W. and will be returning this evening.

OFFENSIVE POSSIBLE

General Wavell May Endeavour to Thrust Axis Forces Back Into Libya

CAIRO, April 22.—A new offensive from Salum and Tobruk under General Sir Archibald Wavell is seen as a possibility. If the campaign in Greece goes badly, as now seems probable, there appears to be little doubt that a strong effort would be made to hold the Axis forces back from Egypt and the Suez Canal by such a new offensive. Successful evacuation of Greece would make considerable British forces available for service in North Africa.

Meanwhile, the Axis campaign appears to be still definitely bogged down at Tobruk and Salum.

DOCTORS REQUIRED

HYDE PARK, April 22.—President Franklin D. Roosevelt has issued an appeal for one thousand young American doctors to volunteer services in Great Britain where there is a serious shortage of medical men at a time when need of their emergency services is very great.

WASHINGTON, April 22: (CP)—The Washington Senators' infield cost exactly $455. That represents what owner Clark Griffith paid to get First Baseman Jimmy Vernon, Second Baseman Jimmy Bloodworth, Shortstop Cecil Travis and Third Baseman Buddy Lewis.

As they say around here, when better bargains are made, Griff will make them. His whole team cost less than some clubs pay for a flashy, unproved rookie.

A Planned Retreat . . .

Many people wonder why the British and Greek troops are steadily retreating. Evidently it is a planned retreat. It was forecast more than a week ago. They might hold firm but, being hopelessly outnumbered, there would be grave danger that they might be surrounded and attacked by flank movements. By dropping back steadily they avoid any danger of being cut off while at the same time they are taking heavy toll of the enemy.

It is very evident that things are not going well with our forces in Greece and that they are retiring from the country or about to retire. It is the work of the German army and air force to try to make it a rout but so far they have been able to do little except damage one hospital ship and sink another. While retreating the British and Greek forces have been able to take tremendous toll of the enemy. The German propaganda machine has taken advantage of the situation to exaggerate beyond recognition the German successes and to try to impress upon the world that the British are beaten.

Within a day or two we shall know the worst and, in the meantime, it is well to await reliable news of the fight. At any rate we know already that the failure of the campaign, if it was a failure, was not due to the lack of courage or skill of our men. They were tremendously outnumbered and outmechanized.

Decorating The King . . .

"There is nothing novel in the pinning of a decoration on a King's uniform; most monarchs of the past must have found it difficult at times to find room for all their insignia," says the Victoria Times in a recent editorial article. "But King George VI. recently received a little gold emblem which differs considerably from anything in his large collection; no king has ever owned one like it before. It was the medal of the Trades Union Congress, Britain's influential body that has fought long and hard for its privileges and rights—which has foregone a large percentage of them for the duration of the war because its membership of nearly 6,000,000 realizes that until totalitarianism is removed from the earth no contract can be sure of its permanence.

"In the simple ceremony which marked the bestowal of this T.U.C. medal on King George at Buckingham Palace, however people everywhere will detect the close bond of fellowship which exists between the monarch and an organized body of workers whose main object is to get on with the job on which so much depends. Not that these loyal subjects have any idea of permanent surrender of gains made in the betterment of their lot before and during the first Great War; but when they formally inducted the monarch into their great brotherhood, presented him with full authority to attend any meeting of their Congress, they wittingly or unwittingly, drew a new sign of the times and put the initial strokes on a blueprint of some of the things to come. Many a Labor leader, of course, has received a knighthood or a peerage from a British monarch; but this is the first time in all history Buckingham Palace has witnessed the ceremony of a king's 'admission' to the citadel of British Trades Unionism's closed corporation."

Man in the Moon

Hitler thinks we're beaten but he will have to do a lot more wishful thinking yet. Matter of fact the idea of being beaten has not yet occurred to the British people. Just a temporary setback is all they have received so far.

There is more water surface than land surface to the old earth and Britain still rules the seas in spite of the u-boat campaign on the Atlantic.

Hitler is wishing That he could blast Britain to Hades And do it right fast.

Hitler is the dragon that Saint George would have slain if he had lived today.

A little man dashed into a public house and said to the landlord:

"I just got home to find a strange man kissing my wife."

"And what did you do?"

"I picked up his umbrella, smashed it across my knee and said: 'There, I hope it rains.'"

WHILE LONDON SLEEPS

Throughout the night, while Nazi bombers roar overhead, tin-hatted Canadian Press editors work behind blackout curtains in their Fleet Street office so Canadians may read of the latest air raid, a new British naval victory in their morning papers.

Maintaining a 24-hour service, sheltering only in the heaviest raids, they scan reports of The Associated Press, Reuters, the Press Association and government announcements to meet Canadian newspaper deadlines around the clock.

But this is only part of the work of The CP's eight-man London staff. They cover Westminster and Downing Street, report bombing raids whether they are in Liverpool, Plymouth or in London's East End, give Canadians a true picture of Britain at war. Here you meet three of them.

HAROLD FAIR.

CP Parliamentary Correspondent, crossed the Atlantic a week after war broke out to join London Bureau after experience in three Provincial Legislatures and the House of Commons at Westminster. Fair is the only Dominion newspaperman regularly reporting the British House of Commons from a Press Gallery seat.

PAT USSHER.

Member of the London staff since the Bureau's establishment in 1936, interrupted his coverage of the bomb blitz only once—to get married in a "quiet" wedding, while two bombs dropped in the neighborhood. Ussher, 32, has been with CP since 1931, was cable editor at New York before his London appointment.

FOSTER BARCLAY.

Newcomer to the London staff, who crossed to England on a troop transport last December and was greeted with the great bombing that sent fire sweeping through the City section. A native of Ottawa, Barclay, like other members of the CP staff, spends his spare time atop his apartment house ready to quench Nazi incendiaries.

Daily, Canadian Press member newspapers demonstrate the value of CP's London coverage by wide use of the bylined stories of these staff men and Ross Munro, War Correspondent with the Canadian Corps; Sam Robertson, London Superintendent; D. E. Burritt, Louis Hunter and Doug Amaron. All young Canadians, all unmarried but two, they sought their London appointments eagerly. They will be followed in time by others as eager to take their places, as well-equipped to do their jobs, so that the unequalled service Canadian Press is providing its 90 members in Canada shall continue.

MANITOBA IS VOTING

Liberal-Progressive, Conservative and C. C. F. Objectives in Election Today Outlined

WINNIPEG, Man., April 22: (CP)—Liberal-Progressive and Conservative leaders, seeking return of a coalition government in the Manitoba election today announced four major aims of the non-partisan government.

The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, also favoring coalition announced support for these four aims and, in addition, campaigned on the C. C. F. platform adopted at the last provincial convention.

The announced aims of all three groups are:

1. Implementation of the Sturis report on Dominion-provincial relations.
2. A maximum war effort.
3. A higher basic price for wheat.
4. Planning for post-war readjustment.

In campaign speeches, Premier John Bracken, Liberal-Progressive leader, said the coalition government was formed "to make possible a more united province and more co-operative approach to the problems that lie ahead."

All issues are secondary to a maximum war effort and most other issues are for the time being secondary in importance to the agricultural problem and the problem of federal-provincial readjustment, he said. Hon. Erick Willis, Conservative leader and minister of public works said his group supported coalition so that political warfare should cease until we have beaten our common enemy" and to give a "maximum war effort in the province and the whole of Canada."

Agriculture First
The C. C. F. platform, making agriculture the subject of its first plank, urged social ownership of processing industries to eliminate "exploitation" of farmers and consumers and recommended promotion of co-operatives, development of home markets by increasing purchasing power and security of farm tenure through protection for debtors.

It urged betterment of labor conditions through hours reduction without income reduction; "desert maintenance of the unemployed" and payment of "union or fair wage rates on all government work;" development of natural resources; abolition of Manitoba's one percent wage tax and increased tax on higher incomes; a health insurance system; and "adequate salary scheduling for school teachers."

The platform also pledged extension of research by the Manitoba Economic Survey Board to investigate distribution of wealth produced in the province, an inquiry into the best means of utilizing natural resources and extension of existing social services.

SPORT CHAT

Two of the British Empire's greatest milers, Sydney Wooderson and Jack Lovelock, believe that a four-minute mile will some day be run. Wooderson, whose 4:06.4 minutes outdoor record has been beaten only by Glen Cunningham's 4:04 indoor mark, thinks it will take from 30 to 50 years to knock off the four seconds.

"I think the record will go down slowly, just as it has during these last few years," he said. "I see no reason why it should not come down even further, though there must come a time when the limit will be reached." A soldier now, Wooderson hopes to go after his record this summer. Given perfect conditions he believes he could run the mile in close to 4:04 minutes but thinks that is his limit.

Lovelock, former record holder and Olympic champion at 1,500 metres, also believes the perfect mile is a possibility. "I have been

April 22, 1916.—Floods impeded British attempts to advance on the River Tigris toward Kut-el-Amara. In northern France, British troops made successful raid on enemy trenches near Thiepval. French repulsed German attacks near Bethincourt in Verdun area.

On three successive nights in March raiders rained down high explosive and incendiary bombs on business and residential sections of Swansea. Blocks of houses and stores were wipped out and, although damage was not as extensive as in Coventry or London, it will be many years before the scars are erased.

Observers Found Swansea Chins Up After One of the Worst Air Raids Strafings of the War

SWANSEA, April 22: (CP)—Give a Welshman his sons and his market-place and he is almost sure to be happy.

DOUGLAS AMARON

That old saying of the people of Wales, quoted by Mayor Thomas James of Swansea, never held more true than in this Bristol Channel port which German bombers singled out for some of the most violent air attacks of the war.

On three successive nights in March raiders rained down high explosive and incendiary bombs on business and residential sections of Swansea. Blocks of houses and stores were wipped out and, although damage was not as extensive as in Coventry or London, it will be many years before the scars are erased.

The town's market-place was destroyed but, said Mayor James, "the Germans couldn't knock the 'smaz' from the lips of my people." Within a few days a new market place was opened and with its establishment, enabling people to come together and talk over events of the day, rehabilitation was well under way.

I visited Swansea after its fiercest raids and for two days inspected damage and talked with people. Small sections of the town which bore the brunt of the attack were wiped out altogether, but elsewhere Swansea looked like any other city raided intermittently, with occasional tangled ruins marking the spot where a bomb fell.

No Defeatism
The people, from the mayor to a retired sailor bombed from two homes on successive nights, displayed no defeatism, only a burning hatred of Germany and determination to see this war through to its end.

The women, whose husbands work on ships or at the docks, in munitions factories or in transport, looked worn; their faces were drawn and the eyes of some were red, not from weeping but from lack of sleep. But like their men folk they were resolved not to concede a victory to the Germans by showing weakness in their grimdest hour of the war.

Mrs. J. C. Rees, head of Swansea's Women's Voluntary Services which cared for thousands of bomb-out men, women and children, said there were few sobs or tears. Death touched many people, came close to others, but they accepted it with almost Spartan courage. "But pity help the German parachutists who try to land in Wales," she said. "If the men don't finish them off first, the women of Swansea will get them."

First of the three big raids came on a Wednesday night. Flames spread through the shopping district, leaping from store to store. Firemen fought the blazes as best they could and their courageous work kept the flames in check. The fires were almost under con-

When the Germans returned and scattered oil bombs over the burning debris. When morning came some of Swansea's finest stores and office buildings were burned-out hulks.

"We were hard hit," Mayor James said. "He (Hitler) knocked us to the floor Wednesday; sent us through the ropes Thursday and followed us out of the ring Friday. But Saturday morning we got up again, and he wasn't here."

Mayor's Firm Hand

The situation was one that called for a firm hand and the Lord Mayor a big man, handled his job in a big way. He established what amounted to a dictatorship over his town, cancelled by-laws that might interfere with relief organization and advised his council he would call them only when he needed them. Then he centralized all the services around him in the Guildhall, which bombs spared from serious damage, although windows were shattered and fine lawns torn up.

Ruling with an iron hand, Mayor James brought order out of chaos within a few days. Rooms were allotted to the services and placards in the marble corridors of the Guildhall told people where to go. Food, clothing, money, ration books, water, light, gas, billeting, education, construction — every detail was arranged, with a sympathetic official in charge to give personal attention to each bomb victim's need.

One placard said "burial certificates" and a half dozen grim-faced men and women waited by the door leading to the saddest of all rooms. A poster at the entrance to the Guildhall called for 2,000 volunteer blood donors.

Courage All Through

The stories the men and women told as they passed from one room to another were a record of tragedy and courage. I spoke with many of these people as they waited their turn to ask for aid in one way or another. Their experiences were all different, yet in many ways the same. Some were more poignant than others in the sheer simplicity of their telling.

A woman dressed in black sought clothes for her little boy. "I've been here before," she said, "asking help for my four children. I won't have to do that again. I buried three last week."

The old sailor came for a donation from the Lord Mayor's fund. His clothes were dirty and worn, but he carried an almost new walking cane, a gift from his daughter. Welsh to the core, he spoke English hesitantly as he told how he always knew he would get into trouble by staying on land.

Indian Department's cruiser Naskaena, with Indian Agent James Gillett and Dominion Constable A. J. Watkinson on board, left shortly before noon today for Port Eslington and will be back this evening, the agent and constable being on official business.

Johnny Moser, manager of Edward Lipsett's store, received his initiation to north coast waters over the week-end. Some of the boys went to Buller Cove for a little fishing and Johnny hooked and landed a 38-pound spring using a Sunbeam 7-spoon and 38-pound test cuttyhunk. At least this is one instance of some one on a fishing trip catching a fish. He's going to have it stuffed.

A hall porter, who spent three years in hospital in the last war and would be fighting now but for his old wounds, told proudly how the spirit of Swansea's people was not broken.

"No, it's not broken," the sailor remarked, "but mine's a bit bent." He found consolation in the fact that his son, in the merchant navy is bringing munitions to England to help defeat the enemy.

"I only wish I were not so old," he said. "I would like to be out there with him. Land is no place for a sailor in times like these."
