strength effectively to drive the Axis out of Libya.

Owing to the British sea control, the only means of reinforcing now available to the Axis is the very uncertain method of air transport. Furious entrapped German armored units have taken the offensive.

British fliers are operating far behind the German lines, doing damage to their communications and supply lines. Hundreds of planes are ceaselessly in battle vying for air supremacy.

Big Battle Expected

The Germans have rushed up reinforcements to Rezegn, ten miles south of Tobruk, and a heavy battle is expected there momentarily, the British High Command announced today. Expects Revival . . .

General Charles DeGaulle has made the position of the Free French very clear. He expects that following the terrible crisis through which France is passing a tremendous revival will emerge for the French nation. Outlining the war aims recently he stated them briefly as follows:

1. "Make war . . . give the greatest possible exten- well as in French. His accent with respect to any public ques- a provincial election and chalsion and the greatest possible power to the French effort in the conflict;

2. "Let the people speak for themselves as soon as events once more allow them to make known freely what they want;

3. "Bring about conditions in the postwar France which will permit every Frenchman to live, think, work farm at St. Eloi, Temiscouata many years prime minister of and act in dignity and security."

Since the war started it has been bombed fifty times but not once has it been put out of business, distinguished himself among the spokesmen for the Liberal party the hero of the victory. In the although repairs have proved necessary and are still being carried out. It is just a big ditch, two hundred feet wide and being less than 500 miles from Crete should prove very vulnerable yet all kinds of ships continue to make it a highway. Obstacles have had to be removed by-election Oct. 27, 1919, in Que- ed a working majority in the house Mr. Lapointe's only son, Hugues, to allow free passage of the larger craft but any delays bec East and held the seat in six and Mr. King was without a seat was elected to sit with his father have been very slight.

The canal is owned by a private company representing French, British, Egyptian and the Dutch. For years Turkey acted as guarantor for the company but of late Britain has seen that the canal has been open to all countries on equal terms.

The canal is vital as a commercial lane, and no matter how the war ends, will continue to be a very busy road, for Europe will keep on trading with Asia. Boats from Norway. Sweden, Germany, the Netherlands. England, France, Italy and Greece will continue to stream through this ditch, making an onlooker think of a caravan of stage ships moving through a desert.

Politically, control of the Suez Canal is of extreme importance for the way in which men and women will live in the future, says a writer in the Christian Science Monitor. If Great Britain maintains its hold upon it. it will be able to preserve its empire and a sort of balanced security will continue in the world. If Britain loses it, the empire might decline to an inferior position, much or all of Africa might pass into Nazi hands and serve the Reich as a base for striking eastward and westward. Seizure of the canal along with Egypt, Arabia, and the rest of the Middle East would create a completely new world situation for America.

During the 72 years that have elapsed since the canal was opened, the world has changed greatly. It has made an unprecedented advance toward freedom, democracy, and international co-operation. During this period, practically all adult men of the western world won the franchise, and most women also. Japan was modernized. China became a republic; and the machine age moved to its apogee.

During most of that time most of the world lived in peace, imperial denomination gave way to international understanding, pirating was superseded by freedom of the seas, and all nations began to co-operate at Geneva. The ships of all nations, passing unhindered from all lands through Suez to all lands, were heralds of a new way of living. The continuation of that way depends on future control of the Suez and of its sister canal at Panama.

MINISTER PASSES

on Canada's entry into the Secon. Great War. Leaving to the prim minister and others the task of discussing issues at stake in the war, he set out to show two things—that Canada could not remain neutral, and could not have conscription.

Rather than see conscription in Canada he declared that he and all the Quebec ministers would leave the cabinet. Neutrality would mean civil war because Canadians would not stand for the obligations of neutrality, obligations to intern British soldiers, to stop enlistment in British forces, Mr. Lapointe said.

He ended by quoting Queen Elizabeth's words as she left Canada after the royal tour of 1939: 'Que Dieu Benisse Canada." That! was a sentimental touch that brought tears to the eyes of veteran parliamentarians who had just listen to what might have? been a coldly logical oration.

"Yes, God bless Canada," he said. "God save Canada. God save Canada's honor, Canada's soul, Canada's dignity, Canada's conscience. God give Canadians he light which will indicate to them where their duty lies in this! hour of trial so that our children and our children's children may inherit a land where freedom and peace shall prevail, where our social, political and religious institutions may be secure and from which the tyrannical doctrines of naziism and communism are forever banished. You know how it goes in the! movies. Well, that's exactly what happened. Coach Wallace Wade looked over his substitutes. There was Bob with that "put-me-in coach" determination written all over his pan. Wade walked over to him, whispered something in his ear, and slapped him on the ample seat of his trousers. If Barnett was scared, he didn't show it. He spit on his hands and took his place backing up the line. Almost single-handed he halted the Tech running game. Then he put the contest on ice for the Blue Devils by coming in to intercept a pass which looked like a sure touchdown.

When Bob left the dressing froom after the game his name was in the headlines of the sports extras. It's been there ever since. He's one of those tanks who like it best when the going is tough. He's as quick as a scatback at passes, and the way he backs up the line is positively brutal. WHAT THE WELL-DRESSED WAR-DOG WILL WEAR

Latest innovation in dogwear made its debut with the opening of the Los Angeles Kennel Club Dog Show. This new apparel for defence dogs consists of a harness-pack, housing radio receiving equipment and head-phones. Invented by Carl Spitz, trainer of dogs, the equipment with its companion short wave broadcasting unit, enables remote control of war-dogs under fire. "Seiners were compensated by soaring prices as canners and freezers bid against each other! for scant supplies and there was also competition from two Canadian buyers, most active of whom was Nelson Bros, cannery at Prince Rupert," says Canadian Fisherman in reviewing the Alaska fall fishing season. "The prices were the highest ever paid for chums in Alaska. How much fish was obtained by the Canadians is unknown but it is believed to have been a very substantial part of the catch and their activities in Alaska aroused some resentment among local canners. Large quantities of troll fish were taken from
