CAIRO, Feb. 4: (CP)—Further advances have been made by the British forces on all the African fronts. The latest successful exploit of the Royal Air Force in the Libyan campaign was a smashing attack on the important Italian air base at Castro Benito, ten miles south of Tripoli. Seven enemy planes were destroyed and extensive damage was done to the airfield including hangar and administration building. The British planes attacked in waves. A motor transport west of Castro Benito was also successfully attacked. The British planes covered a distance of 1200 miles and all returned safely to their bases.

Former Vice-Premier and Nazi Sympathizer Will be Power Henceforth at Vichy, It Seems Likely

VICHY, February 4: (CP)—Admiral Jean Darlan arrived here from Paris tonight and immediately saw Marshal Petaín, chief of state, presumably with a message from Former Vice-Premier Pierre Laval. Although Laval was not with Darlan it was understood negotiations with him were well advanced and needed only Petaín's approval for Laval's return to the cabinet under an arrangement dictated by Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany whereby Laval will have complete control although Petaín will still be the titular head of the government. Complete co-operation with Germany is believed to be provided for.

Twenty-One Year Old Men Will Be Called Up Under New Scheme

Four Month Compulsory Training Period to Replace Thirty-day System—Will Be More Efficient

OTTAWA, February 4: (CP)—A four-month compulsory military training period has been substituted for the present thirty-day period, Prime Minister William Lyon Mackenzie King announced last night. It will be effective March 15.

In another departure from the original program only those of twenty-one years of age will receive compulsory training unless circumstances change or the numbers in the age group prove unexpectedly small.

The program calls for 6,000 to 8,000 men in March and the same number at the fifteenth of each ensuing month or about 72,000 yearly. The young men will be called out as they reach the age of twenty-one. Under the new plan it is expected to regularly produce much better men.

Men who have already undergone thirty-day training are unlikely to be called to serve further time, the Canadian Press learns authoritatively.

LETTERS FROM ENGLAND; WAR TIME DESCRIBED; CONFIDENCE AND HOPE

London Family Not Worried by Blitz — Former Local Nurse in London — Young Businessman Officer in Royal Navy

Several interesting letters from various parts of wartime England and one from a well known Prince Rupert business man who is serving as a naval officer in one of the destroyers which was turned over by the United States to Great Britain have reached the news desk of the Prince Rupert Daily News from various sources. They describe various phases of life as it is lived in the Old Country under stress of siege, convey some interesting impressions of how the people are taking it and describe quite vividly some of the existing conditions. All are replete with hope and confidence in the final outcome although some tragic episodes are mentioned.

Mrs. N. A. Blackaby, who lives at Enfield, Middlesex, just fifteen miles from the heart of London, writes to her brother-in-law, G. R. S. Blackaby, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, saying "you would be surprised to find how little we are affected by the blitz. We do not go out in the evening much. We spend more time in the home and are more intent on keeping worth while things going. Recently some blasts took away a lot of the windows around here and the people patched them up with all sorts of things—odd pieces of wood, roofing felts, bits of linoleum, etc. New glass or new wood would be unpatriotic at the moment. Some hung Union Jacks over very bad gaps.

"All preserve the spirit which is our secret weapon—the will to win. "In the town, which is our shopping centre the shops lost all their plate glass but exhibited notices such as 'Hitler has broken our windows but he cannot break our spirits.' Plenty of stocks on show inside. Please come in.' More open than ever.' Excuse our yawn. 'Come in and See Our Blasted Bargains.' Such slogans were chalked up and the stocks reorganized even before the council could remove the broken glass. I mention these things because I have a feeling that over there you hear of the serious side of our conflict and not the little human things that show how Britain is facing her problems. "In the suburbs where we live the windows all look in need of a good cleaning as they are treated with some anti-blast paste or gum. We call the evening warning 'Moaning Minnie' and, if it does not sound by 7 p.m., we say 'Adolf's late.' We go to bed whether 'Cheerful Charlie,' the all clear, has sounded or not. Most people have brought their beds downstairs but there are too many in this house for that. There is a raid going on now. We hear guns firing and think 'We'll soon chase 'em off.' "I have not heard any talk of panic or anything approaching it. "My brother, who is working in town and sees and hears a lot, told of a dog fight being on with the defences all barking when a tiny baby in a pram, too small to speak, clapped its little hands and laughed at each bang. "A friend of mine was in her house when Jerry dropped some calling cards before the sirens sounded. One landed in the road outside the house but she and the maid got out unharmed. Later the house collapsed and she lost her home but she never complained, soon reorganizing her life. Another friend had a similar experience but managed to save all her furniture and moved into the house of a friend who was leaving the neighborhood. Another friend lost all the windows through blast and, as pipes snapped, there was no proper sanitation for week. "All these people in days gone by would have been overwhelmed if a

A Great Speech . . .

The Prime Minister of Canada made a great speech. It was a moving appeal for a free people in a free country to keep their freedom by supplying money for the first line of defence. Canada would send airplanes and men but these had to be outfitted and kept and he said he was looking to the people of the country to supply the money. So far Prince Rupert has not done very much in the purchase of war securities. She will have to do more, much more, in the near future as was suggested by Mackenzie King.

Landlords and Tenants . . .

The relations of landlord and tenant as provided for by the government makes it impossible for the landlord to increase the rent except as allowed by the local rent court presided over by Judge Fisher. Also the tenant cannot be driven out because he refuses to pay any increased rent. He can, however, be ordered to vacate for any reason such as sale of the premises, building or extension of operations or if the landlord needs the premises to live in himself. Any person purchasing a rented place can take possession in the ordinary way by giving the tenant the regularly required legal notice. He must not, however, after taking possession, rent the place to some other person at an increased rental.

Churches Are Lost . . .

The fate of London's destroyed churches is disturbing many people, especially in the Old Country. Discussing this the Spectator says:

"What is to be done about the historic, artistic or ecclesiastical buildings which the London fires destroyed? Guildhall will, of course, be rebuilt; so, probably, will the halls of City companies. The sites of the perished Wren churches present a different problem. From the religious point of view many of them had long ceased to justify their maintenance. In 1926 a proposal went forward under the auspices of Dr. Wmington Ingram, then Bishop of London, for pulling down 19 of them, which could be held redundant and selling their valuable sites to provide new churches and clergy for the mushroom suburbs and housing estates. In a few cases this has since been done. But in the main the policy was vetoed out of consideration for the extraordinary artistic interest of Wren's work. Now, however, where that work has actually perished, the question of site-selling will inevitably come up. It ought, we think, to be carefully examined on the merits of each case. No restoration can give us back Wren; but where an important part of his work has survived, there is much to be said for making it again part of a whole. At St. Bride's, for instance, the fire has spared the famous spire—one of the most beautiful in the world. It would be an outrage to pull it down, yet absurd to let it stand there churchless. In any case the 'church of the journalists' has considerable claims to retention upon religious grounds."

If you have something to sell, a classified advertisement in this paper will soon let you know if there is a buyer in the city.

IMPROVING KITWANGA

Uttern Poles Repaired and Relocated—Better Housing Conditions

By JOSEPH RENE DANIELS

During the last few years, the natives of the village of Kitwanga have made a great effort to improve conditions in the village. The things that were merely spoken of have gradually turned from plans into realities. The housing conditions have been greatly improved. While old buildings are being torn down new ones are being built and yards are being turned into beautiful flower gardens, giving a greater feeling of comfort and satisfaction. The ancient wooden poles, symbols that carry and protect the traditions of our, which had slightly curved, were some time ago taken down and repaired. Parts of the images on the poles that were damaged by the weather were restored practically to their original state. They were all repainted with suitable brilliant colors. Having been repaired and painted they were removed to a new and better location where they now stand with all the glory of the past but far from the community hall. Their original location was on the bank of the river where they were seen by the river boats that used to pass up and down the Skeena River before the trains came. The new location is very near the road leading through the village, being placed there for the benefit and observation of the tourists that stop off and pass through the village during the summer months. Many pictures and snap-shots that have been taken by the tourists of the uttern poles have been published in various Canadian and American publications.

An added improvement is the erection of a sidewalk not long ago. It was constructed by the boys of the village. It was suggested by the elders and immediately the boys gathered and went to work. They only pay the boys received were parties given by the elders and various organizations of the village besides better walking for themselves. The material used in the construction is of fine sifted gravel. The walk is five and a half feet wide and runs through the village from end to end.

The most recent improvement is a new hockey rink situated in front of the village directly in front of the community hall. A water pipe line runs from the river three hundred feet up to the hockey rink and a four horse power engine is used to force the water up to cover 185 feet by 90 feet of surface area. The rink, with its considerable size, will provide ample room for many skaters. There will be night hockey and

With thirty-four enrolments at the opening class last night, increased interest was shown last night in the resumption of a new course of first aid instruction for men under the local branch of the St. Andrew's Ambulance Association in connection with the local Air Raid Precaution organization. Tomorrow night a similar series of classes for women will open.

Angus Macdonald is acting as instructor and, in opening the classes last night, expressed gratification at the size of the attendance which he hoped would be maintained as the lectures proceeded. There were quite a number of vacancies in the A.R.P. posts which it was hoped to fill with first aiders. One of the lectures, Mr. Macdonald said, would be given by Dr. Neal Carter and would be devoted to gas.

In the opening lecture Mr. Macdonald dealt with the principles of first aid, named the bones of the body, and gave instruction and demonstrations in the binding of various types of bone fractures.

PITCH AND PUTT GOLF

Plans Going Right Ahead for New Course Says Promoter J. J. Little

Asked as to the present position of the new Golf Club, J. J. Little, who has been promoting the club, says it has secured the certificate of incorporation but will not be allowed to sell stock until the company had been certified as a sound proposition to insure that there is no attempt being made to fleece the public in connection with its promotion. This meant another fee and a slight delay. As soon as this was done the company would lay its plans officially before the railway company and ask for a lease of the land. It was not anticipated that there would be any delay in getting to work and preparing the course.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce commented informally on the fact, as announced by the Daily News, that a charter had been secured.

Several Japanese Among Those Who Have Taken Certificates

One of the city banks reports that yesterday people who came to buy war savings certificates included one Scotsman, two Scandinavians, one Irishman and one English Canadian. Several Japanese have recently bought them. The tendency is on the part of a number of people to promise to buy certificates regularly.

GOOD WORK AT DRYDOCK

Committee Finds Most of Reports in Regard to Work There Unfounded; Chamber of Commerce Routine

Speaking for the committee appointed by the former president, S. E. Parker, told the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce last evening that it had investigated complaints made in regard to the dry dock operations. It was found that many of the rumors in regard to work there were unfounded and reports unjustified. However, the inquiry which had been instituted, he felt, should result in greater efficiency at the dry dock and there was a possibility of securing more work there.

The meeting of the Chamber was the regular monthly dinner presided over by W. R. McAfee at which mostly routine business was conducted.

Mr. Parker reported for the housing committee. One member of that committee had felt that nothing further could be done but the other two, of which he was one, had felt that even yet something might be done. The committee was continuing inquiries.

The radio committee reported progress. A letter was read by the secretary from the Department of Transport which gave little hope of any present action. This letter pointed out that, while the radio operation was in the hands of the Canadian Broadcasting Company, the radio inspection came under the Department of Transport and was paid for by a separate vote of Parliament. This was in reply to a suggestion from the local committee that it would pay the Broadcasting Corporation to place an inspector at Prince Rupert because it was thought he might collect a couple of thousand of the two and a-half dollar fees which would much more than pay his salary. D. C. McRae, chairman of the radio committee, outlined what had been done so far and the letter was handed to him with the suggestion that he should carry on the campaign.

G. R. S. Blackaby drew attention to the desirability of the governments being able to use the radio for propaganda purposes during the war in order to keep people informed of the progress of events. This was impossible here under present conditions.

The Hamilton Junior Chamber of Commerce wrote asking what if anything was being done at Prince Rupert in regard to a salvaging campaign as it was anxious to get information in regard to such movements.

A letter from the war time prices and Trade Board explained to the members that, in making up their sale prices of goods, on profit must be computed on the tax. The tax was to be passed on to the purchaser.

In regard to the highway to Seal Cove, the attention of Commissioner Bracewell was drawn to the problem and the matter was discussed at some length with the possibility of an alternative route by way of Eighth Avenue being adopted.

Commissioner B. C. Bracewell discussed municipal matters generally and asked for the co-operation of the Chamber in his work. He was gathering information just now. He said that there would be nothing spectacular in his work but he would do his best.

picture had fallen or a tea cup upset but now they lose their whole home and merely say: 'Well we dodged him. Thankful it was no worse.'

"You will see how small is the effect upon the people immediately concerned. Although we say only 'calling cards,' it might have literally been tons of explosives.

"Since September most people in London shelter at night and so the casualties have not been large. In the suburbs, although a good deal of property has been demolished, the number of casualties has been very small. For that I think we can be very thankful for, if we keep the people alive, we can build new and better places.

"The children, happily, take it all for granted and have all been taught what to do in the various emergencies that may arise. The first sentence a friends baby, learning to talk, was: 'Don't like guns.'

"Wendy was coming home from school one day when an alert was an and she kept walking as there was no bus in sight. A plane flew low but she could not recognize markings so she took off her school hat and carried it upside down with the ribbon and badge concealed because, she says, 'they always machine gun school children.'

"The food is much better than in the last war as the rationing scheme was put into force sooner and is worked better. I do not find any difficulty in getting sufficient and managing to produce a variety in the fare. We have an allotment and I still get greens from that. I made a lot of jam and bottled fruit, which is lasting well. Prices have not risen to such an extent as you might think. Root vegetables are about the same as usual although we used to import nearly all.

"Everybody in this country looks to the New Year with hope and confidence. We are already planning to rebuild some of the vandalized churches in time for the Thanksgiving for Victory services.

Coming to Rupert
"Wendy," referred to in her mother's letter, also writes to her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs.
Blackaby, and mentions pleasurable anticipation at the prospect of being 'sevacuated' to Canada this year and coming to live here in Prince Rupert. She is a High School girl and expects to matriculate next year. She tells of having been given a bicycle as a Christmas present but does not use it owing to the treacherous condition of the roads due to 'Christmas card weather.'

"My dog, Scamp, does not mind the blitzkrieg," writes Wendy. "We let him in at night but he invariably runs out at the first chance and barks defiance at the planes overhead. He has the spirit."

Owing to the air raids school studies are disturbed and the work is not up to standard. School children work in shelters but the system is rather crude and lighting is poor.
Christmas parties were held as usual, ending early on account of the alarms, however.

Former Local Nurse
Miss Phyllis M. Mooney R.N., former local nurse, who is now on the staff of an emergency hospital in the city of London, has been heard from again. Miss Mooney has hopes of joining the nursing service in connection with the accompanying of overseas evacuee children from England to Australia, New Zealand or South Africa this year. She tells of having gone through one of the public shelters although she, herself, hardly ever takes shelter even when down during an air raid. "I'd rather be bombed than go into the shelters," she says. She has seen many a dog fight in the sky from Piccadilly Circus.

Miss Mooney wrote previously of her hospital being bombed and in her latest letter tells of the hospital having been hit again with fatal results. "Another bomb (a land mine, they say)," she writes "fell on Friern hospital cottages and shattered them badly with quite a lot of casualties. Three or five nurses were killed and one patient.
The explosion awakened me at 3:30 a.m. Quite a few wards and windows were smashed and houses all along the road had windows shattered.
The land mines do damage for a mile or so, particularly windows.
The same night East Finchley got it badly too. Lots of shops and houses were completely destroyed.

Miss Mooney tells of going out to friends of dinner and having roast lamb, red currant jelly, roast potatoes, stewed cabbage, canned pineapple and cream cake. "After an outing," she continues "we came back and had coffee, cake and biscuits."

Evidently, judging from Miss

Canadian Executive on Bermuda Honeymoon

On their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Bennett J. Roberts of Canada, are shown embarking for Bermuda. Mr. Roberts is in the department of finance of the Canadian government.

Mooney's letter, the cinemas are operating as usual for she tells of seeing some of the latest pictures such as "Convoy." Shopping also goes on as usual although some things are not as abundant as they used to be.
The nurses' living quarters in the hospital being bombed out Miss Mooney is batching out and says she manages very nicely. "I cook chops and steaks for myself when I feel like it, also bacon and eggs."

Under the Guns
Mrs. Alex McRae hears from a friend living at Crowley, Sussex.
Describing the dropping of a Molot-off bread basket of incendiary bombs this letter says: "The whole place was lit up like fairyland. Every one turned out of their houses and they were out in no time.

"There is a raid on now. The sirens went before six o'clock but I have heard only three Nazi planes so far. I do not hear the guns over London so we shall probably soon get the 'All Clear.'

"We have lots of food really. The only things that are rationed are butter (two ounces), margarine (four ounces), cooking fats (two ounces), bacon (four ounces), tea (two ounces), sugar (four ounces) and 1s. 10d. meat per week. We manage very well and there seems to be heaps of food in the shops.
Good, there goes the 'All Clear.' (After an hour and a half.)"

In Lancashire
From another part of England, Oldham, Lancashire, comes a letter saying: "So far the war has not affected us in our town as far as the bombing is concerned although there is seldom a day without the sirens going. It is worst in the night when guns fire over the houses and German planes come back and forwards. We stay home as shrapnell falls all around. We had quite a lot fall on our premises the other night and the bombs dropped only a mile away.

"It is marvelous how few foods are rationed. We have been able to have all the best foods so far within reasonable limits and no one has gone short. Indeed to look in the shop windows you would not think there was any shortage. Of course, we are asked not to buy so called luxury goods as we want to send them overseas to help pay for the war.

"We are all determined to fight on to the bitter end. We have plenty of Canadian soldiers and everybody appreciates what both Canada and the United States are doing to help us.

Sheffield Tragedy
From Sheffield, England, comes word of tragedy in which a cousin of Mrs. John McRae, formerly of this city and now of Toronto, lost her life in the bombing of her home, the husband being badly injured. The house was first bombed in the fall but was patched up. The night of the blitz on December 12-13 they got it again and "Jennie" was killed, "Arnold" being taken to hospital badly injured. Next night Sheffield got it even worse.

"Sheffield and Manchester got the most savage blitz of all. Sixtyone churches were flattened and twenty well known streets wiped out. All the shopping district was also flattened and some of the works." (This refers to Sheffield.)

Lieut. Orme Stuart Lieut. Orme Stuart writes of spending Christmas quietly at sea aboard one of the turned-over American destroyers which he came back to Canada last September to commission. "We have a fine crowd on board and, although the work is hard and rather trying at times, it is a happy ship.

"Things over here are not as bad as they probably sound," writes Lieut. Stuart. "The morale is very high. It is really astonishing what some of these people have gone through and kept their chins up. As long as the civilian population retains that spirit I don't think we have anything to worry about."

Man in the Moon

The way to get rich is to buy a war savings certificate every week.
Doing so will help to keep Hitler and poverty away.

A German bomb had defaced the front of a shop in Chartsey, England. However, one or two panes of glass were recovered from the wreckage and the next day appeared this notice:

"Owing to Hitler
"Our windows are littler."

One reason given the present world troubles is that in 1918 Foch signed the armistice with his left hand. Authority of a kind says that from birth an angel stands at a man's right shoulder and the devil at his left. Salt thrown over the

"Is your mother in, Jimmy?"
"Of course she's in. D'ye think I'd be standing here cleaning windows on a Saturday afternoon if she was out!"
