German Government United States Aggression By Destroyers Greer and Kearney

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—The German government in an extraordinary statement issued from Hitler's headquarters today, charged the United States destroyers Greer and Kearney with aggression against German naval units and admitted officially for the first time that Germany's U-boats fired at the Kearney.
The statement did not intimate any change in relations with the United States and contained neither threats nor hints as to future policy.

ATTACK ON RUSSIA IS BLUNDER

Famous Writer Suggests Why Various War Moves Were Made by Hitler.
TORONTO, Nov. 1.—"The Nazi attack on Russia proved the costliest psychological blunder of the war. It failed because Churchill and Roosevelt wouldn't be fooled," states Pierre van Paassen, well known author and foreign correspondent, in an article in the current Liberty magazine.
Van Paassen, who spent his first several years as a newspaperman here in Canada, states in the article that Hitler's one goal in every important military and political offensive that he has launched since September, 1940, has been to force England to her knees without having to risk an invasion.
Hitler has one supreme "peace offensive" attempt left to make, believes van Paassen, and his article lists seven attempts made in the past thirteen months:
1. Tokyo-Berlin Axis, announced September 27, 1940, designed as a threat against the British Empire in Asia.
2. The Russia-Germany new friendship pact, January 10, 1941.
3. Taking over of Bulgaria on March 1, 1941, as a warning to Turkey against military co-operation with Britain.
4. Hitler's five months' delay in taking action against Jugoslavia, whereby he let Italy be defeated in Greece and Libya to show Britain his willingness to sacrifice Italy.
5. The unnecessary and costly air invasion of Crete in May, 1941, to convince England of the feasibility of invasion of the British Isles.
6. The flight of Hess to England on May 10, 1941, carrying peace proposals.
7. The invasion of Russia on June 22, 1941, as an appeal to British appeasement groups over the head of the government and as an attempt to stop American aid on the grounds that Germany was dissipating the threat to the world of Communism.

Dover Is Shelled by Big German Guns STALIN TELLS H. HOPKINS OF DEFENCES

The German forts, the guns of which have been pointing at Dover and vicinity, and which unloosed their big shells this afternoon in reply to the big air bombardment by the British, but the amount of damage, if any, was not disclosed.
Hitler will never take Moscow, in spite of the terrific power of the Nazi drive, and the battle line will remain west of the Soviet capital, in the opinion of Premier Joseph V. Stalin. The Soviet leader's flat prediction, made personally to United States Lease-Lend Administrator Harry Hopkins, is revealed for the first time by Hopkins in a signed article in The American Magazine.
Hopkins, who flew to Moscow to confer with Stalin as President Roosevelt's personal representative, quotes the Russian Premier as follows:
"We Russians shall win this war. The battle front will remain west of Moscow. Russia will not fail. Russia is huge, Russia is inexorable. Russia is fighting—for Russia. She will not again be enslaved."
Stalin concluded his prediction with the sentence, "Once we trusted this man," and Hopkins reports that as the Russian dictator referred to Hitler his manner was more eloquent than his words.
"It was only when he mentioned Hitler," Hopkins writes, "that he discarded his suave assurance. Then his body grew tense. He did not raise his voice; rather it went as cold as his eyes and the mellow harshness of it became grating. Of Hitler he spoke slowly, not measuring his words nor considering his phrasing, but as if he wanted the interpreter he had assigned to me to convey to me every syllable in its implication and direct meaning."
"For Hitler he had more than the anger he would necessarily have for a man who had double-crossed him; it was a personal hatred that I have seldom heard expressed by anyone in authority. The cold, implacable hatred he has for the German was clearly evident. Stalin's huge hands half clenched. I think that Joseph Stalin would have liked nothing better at that moment than to have had Hitler sitting where I sat. His hands seemed to feel for something. Germany would have needed a new chancellor."
Hopkins' description of Moscow's air raid defences would seem to bear out Stalin's view that the city is impregnable. Explaining that everyone is forced to go to shelter during a raid, or face arrest, he writes:
"Moscow's ring of anti-aircraft defences and guns make London's puny. Even if they'd let you, you wouldn't watch a raid on Moscow from the roof—not more than once. The downpour of shrapnel from Moscow's 'ack-acks' would mince you."
Summing up the aid Stalin expects to get from the United States, Hopkins emphasized that it was material and not men.
"Stalin doesn't want our Army or our Navy," he states. "Russia wants to fight her war herself. Her manpower reserves are huge. But Stalin also told me frankly what Russia needs, that her men and women may give all their strength to the cause which is ours as well as hers."
"Stalin asked for tanks, for planes, for big guns, anti-aircraft guns, anti-tank guns, for ammunition, and for the superb high-octane gasoline that America produces and is shipping to England. Stalin asked for huge quantities of barbed wire, too."
"You're wondering, perhaps, why I should want her great oil fields should want gasoline of us. That's easily explained. High octane gas

Nationalization of the profession has already been introduced, by recent Commonwealth regulation which renders every dollar under 60 liable for military service in Australia and which ushered in the change over from private practice to state medical service, he said, although the doctors had not yet realized this.

Source of Magnesium and Epsom Salts in Leigh Creek Coal-Field District.
ADELAIDE, Australia, Nov. 1:—A deposit of magnesite, which extended for 14 miles in a northerly direction near Copley, was probably the largest deposit of this mineral in the world, the premier (Mr. Playford) said in describing his visit to the far north to inspect the Leigh Creek coalfield.
"The magnesite is high grade, and is to be found there in almost unlimited quantities," said the premier. "It could easily form the basis of a large and important industry, being used for making magnesium, a metal lighter and stronger than aluminum, for which there is an ever-increasing demand. International Pressure . . .

Japan's Premier General Tojo has served notice on the world in general that his country intends to follow an unswerving course of "ever-expanding progression" and he added that "no international pressure can disturb me." Not only did he thus breathe defiance to all and sundry in these sweeping terms; he particularized with the following statement to 20 public officials in Osaka yesterday with whom he pleaded for internal solidarity:

"World environment is changing so quickly we cannot tell what lies in store for Japan, but . . . we must go on and develop in ever-expanding progression. Naturally difficulties will arise. But if Japan's 100,000,000 merge and go forward, nothing can stop us. If this state of preparedness is completed, diplomacy becomes an easy matter; wars can be fought with ease . . . Unity! Unity! That is what makes people one and whole, solving all problems."

It will be recalled, says the Victoria Times, that United States Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox declared a few days ago that a collision in the Pacific was inevitable if Japan persisted in her course of expansion. He let the statement stand for the Tokyo government to make what it would of it; he did not elaborate. It is nevertheless presumed that he spoke with the full authority and knowledge of President Roosevelt. General Tojo's rejoinder likewise must have followed consultation with Emperor Hirohito; it, too, may mean much or little. It was composed of brave words and high-sounding phrases.

It is patent, however, that a polemical exchange of this character cannot continue indefinitely without further threats whose meaning will be unmistakable. Either Japan thinks she can finish the "incident" in China and take on the United States, Soviet Russia, the British Empire and the Netherlands East Indies, or she is merely indulging in verbal shadow-boxing to keep up domestic morale and fray the nerves of her potential adversaries. "Wars can be fought with ease," however, will be noted by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek—not forgetting Premier Tojo's "ifs."

WASHED 40 FEET THEN GRABBED

Victoria Sailor Had Interesting
Time Aboard Canadian Ship
In Atlantic

VICTORIA, Nov. 1.—Midnight, September 23. I won't forget that in a long while.

At that hour Chief Petty Officer Tommy Gibbons of Victoria was coming off watch on a Royal Canadian Navy destroyer on convoy duty in the Atlantic.

A heavy sea was rolling and as he made his way below along the slippery deck, a wave "bigger than a house" crashed against the ship. It washed over her sleek bow and a wall of water four feet high came rushing down her deck.

"I saw it coming and braced myself," Gibbons related. "I guess it was too much for me. It washed me loose from two handles I was gripping and I went shooting down the deck. The next thing I remember was being carried below.

A Close Shave
"It was a close shave, I guess. The boys said they grabbed me just in time before I went overboard. I had travelled about 40 feet along the deck."

Gibbons, a quiet-spoken chap, grinned as he told of his experience as he sat in the living room of his home at 931 Green Street, where he is spending a month's leave with his wife and two children, Bobby, 10 years, and Donna, five.

"It's all in the game," he said, and his wife added: "Yes, but you spent a week in sick bay over it spent a week in sick bay getting over it. He didn't tell you he injured his shoulder and one of his ears. He's still under doctor's care."

This is Gibbons' fourteenth year in the navy and the last two years he has been in service in hostile waters.

"It's pretty nerve-wracking," he said. "You are never out of your clothes and you wear a lifebelt at all times. Incidentally, my lifebelt was torn right off me when that wave hit me. I lost my identification bracelet in the scuffle, too."

Petty Officer Gibbons' ship took part in the history-making chase of the Bismarck and in the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting. "We've picked up two lots of survivors from sunken ships," he continued. "One boatload had 12 men, white and Chinese, and one woman. She was in the best spirits of any of them, too. They had been drifting a week and were in terrible condition."

They also picked up three men found huddled on an overturned lifeboat. The boat had been riddled with machine gun bullets and "the boys were sure glad seeing us."

Caught in Blitz
On leave in England, Petty Officer Gibbons was caught in a "blitz" on Greenock, Scotland, last May and another in Belfast last April.

"It was the residential sections that seemed to get the worst of the bombs," he remarked. "In Greenock we helped to take the injured to hospital after digging them out of their shattered homes. I never saw such a horrible mess. There were hundreds of fires, too."

"In Belfast there were also dozens and dozens of fires. Even with the trouble between the north and south of Ireland, the Dublin fire brigade came and helped."

Gibbons was high in his praise for the many organizations in Canada which supply comforts to men of the Royal Canadian Navy.

"I guess we'll be getting clothing gifts from the I. O. D. E. soon," he said. "We get quite a few cigarettes, too. They certainly treat us well."

NEW COATS THIS FALL

Observer Finds Things Really Exciting In The Coat Shops This Year

By HELEN FORRIST HALL
Associated Press Fashion Writer
NEW YORK, Nov. 1:—What no fur trims? Is it possible the woman who for years has longed for a really good coat minus adornment can get it?

There's something very exciting about what the coat shops are showing. It actually looks as though, at a time when fashions are haywire in general, a woman may be able to buy in good taste.

Designers, it seems, have really discovered that a woman's type and size are important in her coat selection. That a woman who either cannot carry much fur, or can't afford the becoming style with the fur that's right with her hair and eyes can do without it to advantage.

Drama In Coats
These new coats, looking very important, and with their own measure of drama, are cut and draped to sculptural advantage. They may depend on silhouette interest—such as capelets (single or tiered), belted tunics or peplums. Skirts may be a little, have front fullness or be very trim. Velvet trims, frog, petit point or other embroidery or braid may aid their important look.

Newest of all are the coats which depend entirely upon the fold of their own beautiful fabric, and fine detail, for individuality. Petite women will love them. So will larger women who tire of living up to lavishness. These dress-maker models which have tried for so long to edge from the custom tailor to the ready-made department seem to be here at last.

Cowl and Yoke
A cowl drape to a neckline, an intricately cut yoke which ends in a scarf—and, coming up—a side closing. These, along with the dropped shoulderline, and nice little seams which do things for the figure but are not too apparent, are features to watch for in the better coat. Intended to be worn as is, they may carry your fur scarf, stole or tippet.

Other unfurred coats, beautifully molded to the figure, beg for the usual accessories the shops afford—one more suggesting jet, a crocheted and fringe fixings. These more basic coats, which may be

Where Wild Life Is Exactly That

Central West Border Country Offers Real Adventure This Season.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 1: (P)—The Canadian border country of Minnesota is having its final fling before winter's icy fingers close over the lake-studded country and drive out all but the hardy denizens.

In one week-end, news reports chronicled that: Richard James, 25, hunting grouse on the American side of the border was attacked by a large buck deer. James stooped to pick up a bird he had just shot. He whirled in time to see the buck charge out but too late to defend himself. James grabbed the beast's horns and screamed for help. His brother, Frank, trying to end the death struggle, fired at the deer, killing it, but the charge sprayed James. He was badly gored and wounded by shot in the head and hand.

Lynx in Attack
In the same general vicinity, Leonard Dickenson was walking through dense woods at night with Lloyd Dawley when a lynx leaped upon Dickenson. Dickenson, who was unarmed, instinctively hurled himself to the ground, turning a somersault and dislodging the cat which scampered away. His heavy clothing spared his body from the cat's long claws.

Another pop-eyed person was 19-year-old Richard Koehler, Chicago Boy Scoutmaster and laboratory technician. Koehler, on an incredible 12-week, 500-mile solo canoe trip in the wilderness areas, related how he saw a wildlife tragedy of the first magnitude. His canoe slid silently along a narrow connecting river when a huge timber wolf raced up to a deer and killed it by seizing its throat.

A settler crowded into this amazing series of frontier incidents with a story about picking up a wriggling black bass from a field. It was dropped there by an eagle or a large hawk after the fish, taken from a shallow lake, had become too heavy for the bird's flight.

dressed up or down for the occasion are the long looked for items which always used to be just a little reefer or a box coat. While the latter are both all right at the moment, its fun to have a choice and be able to select the coat that's meant for you.

Children Enjoy All Hallows Eve

Apples, Nuts and Candies Donated to Youthful Callers During Evening.

Hallowe'en passed off quite pleasantly in most parts of the city. The police reported that, speaking generally, the conduct of the young people was exemplary. There are one or two little incidents to be investigated but no report on this will be made until later.

It seems that hundreds of boys and girls were out calling on their friends and some who perhaps were not quite so friendly. Apples, candies and nuts were collected and some children are in need of medicine as a result. Most of the youngsters were disguised as old men or women.

"I hope with all my heart for a great warm-hearted response to your appeal to the Canadian people for blankets for bombed victims in Britain," declares Miss Dorothy Thompson, world-famous columnist, in a message to Canadian Red Cross endorsing the society's appeal for new or as good-as-new blankets and quilts for Britain. "Only someone who has been in England knows the urgency for warm clothing and warm coverings," Miss Thompson says. "The pluckiest people in the world have seen their homes and possessions destroyed without wavering, but they are touchingly grateful for every indication that the outside world is thinking of them. We must never forget that the fate of people, plain people, is what gives sense and meaning to this struggle and that brotherhood among men and women is its goal. Let us cover these people who are so close to us with the blankets of our love and very tangible wool to warm both their bodies and their hearts."

Mrs. J. M. Brough, Vancouver, Nursing Auxiliary, and Miss V. Sallis, Vancouver, clerical. A leader for the Food Administration section has not yet been appointed.

Dance Held At Armouries

A very enjoyable dance was held in the Armouries last evening by the 2nd Battalion Scottish Pipes and Drums Band, a large crowd being in attendance.

With Pipe Major Ian Duncan as master of ceremonies, the dance started at 9 o'clock and continued until one, music being furnished by Bob Townsend's Orchestra.

The hall was decorated appropriately to the occasion with black and orange streamers and balloons. The popular event of the evening was the series of Scotch dances with music by the pipe band.

At midnight delicious refreshments were served.

CENSORS WARY
LONDON, Nov. 1: ©—The censors stopped a picture of dog, standing on hind legs and begging for a morsel, from being sent to Ireland, because, they explained, "a series might be sent spelling out a message in semaphore with arms and legs."

Waterfront Whiffs

Two Undertakings Attracting Attention On Local Waterfront Just Now - Dog Fish Centre of Waterfront Discussion Now.

Two undertakings at present attracting attention on the local waterfront are an imposing new ship-building shed being built at the Matsumoto yard in Cow Bay and a further addition to the cold storage plant of the Northern Fishermen's Cold Storage.

The new big shed for Matsumoto has been found necessary to take care of new contracts for larger fishing vessels which are being worked on.

Local fishermen have become somewhat excited over what they are doing in the south. It seems that the schooner Viking of Seattle, Captain Adolph Stenland, went out and caught five tons of Soup Fin Shark which was sold for $6000.

Possibly this fishing will keep the boats busy until herring fishing commences. Just now there are three firms buying livers, the J. H. Carson Company, Atlin Fisheries and Canadian Fish and Cold Storage Co.

The part of the waterfront in the neighborhood of the shipyard is becoming somewhat changed recently. The yard has been pushed over as part of a process of enlarging the dry dock yard space while the Imperial Oil siding has been diverted to the other side of the main railway track.

Steamer Camosun is expected to arrive from the Islands early in the week. Steamer Cardena arrived here during the night and left early this morning for the Skeena River where she had to discharge 50,000 feet of lumber and after that will take on a full cargo of canned salmon.

Steamer Princess Norah is replacing the Princess Louise for the winter months and is expected to arrive here Monday morning, continuing on the Skagway service during the winter months.

CROWD AT HOE-DOWN

Exhibition Hall Well Filled For Annual Event by Gyro Club Last Evening.

Last evening a large crowd of about 500 people was in attendance at the Gyro Hoe-Down which was held in the Exhibition building between the hours of 10 and 2.

Bill Stone acted as master of ceremonies and music was furnished by Jean De Carlo and her Hill Billies.

The hall, with its barnyard scenes, live fowl, pigs and hay, gave a rustic effect which was very appropriate for the occasion, and added to the originality of the dance.

The committees in charge were: Refreshments—Bill Watts, L. Lambly, Arnold Flaten and Dr. Brocklesby.

Door—Bill Meadows, Frank Dibb and Frank Skinner. Hall decorations—Joe Scott and Bob Sutherland. Advertising—Joe Scott, Bill Stone and Alex Hunter. Check room—Mrs. Bill Stone.
