Japanese Strategy Baffled

In view of the present rather tense situation in the Orient and the conversations going on between the special representative of the Japanese government and the United States administration it is interesting to note what Hallett Abend says in a recent number of "Look." He says that, when the Bismarck was intercepted, she was on her way with two cruisers to the Pacific to hunt down units of the British fleet and that when she arrived Japan was to enter the war.

The Bismarck, according to this authority on Asiatic affairs, was the mightiest war vessel ever launched. For four days and nights she withstood shattering fire from heavy British ships. German planes were driven from the sky and day after day British planes showered bombs and torpedoes on the mighty German battleship, which was running for her life at a speed of from 35 to 38 knots! -- a speed hitherto unknown for a big fighting ship.

"Finally the Bismarck's steering gear was hopelessly damaged and, after that, she could do nothing but plow the rough seas in a gigantic circle. Then the British gathered for the kill.

From the few surviving German officers and men the true size and might of the Bismarck were learned. She approximated 50,000 tons with a sustained speed of 35 knots. She was too wide to pass through the Panama Canal. Her side armor consisted of a bout 178 sealed bulkheads, layer after layer of them as heavily armored as the decks, which held a record for thickness.

The British and Japanese warships are said to be of pre-Bismarck type.

ACTIVE WAR PLANNED

Here is what Abend says in his article about the mission of the Bismarck: "The public here and elsewhere think that the giant battleship was sent into the Atlantic by Hitler to hunt down units of the British fleet and to prey on slow convoys carrying American supplies to England. That is not the truth. Hitler sent the Bismarck and her convoys of two speedy cruisers out by pre-arrangement with Japan. Those ships were bound for the Pacific by way of the Horn and, had they reach- fur spats reaching well up the calf ed there, Japan was ready to go to war against us. ### POSSIBLY ALONE

"Now Japan must run the hazards of war alone," says Hallett Abend. "Now she has made herself danger-dine are another idea for women ously vulnerable by occupying Indo-China. And now colors and piped with lizard skin. American shipments of war supplies to the Phillipines. the East Indies, and Singapore, growing greater from week to week, increase her vulnerability. When the clash! comes, the Japanese fleet will have to stay in home North waters to guard the islands of the Empire against navallinaking raids. Our own fleet will cruise somewhere west of las a component of road making. Some of our units will go north to protect our new Alaskan bases from Japanese ergency kitchen made of bricks cruisers or destroyers. Whether our Alaskan bases are from bombed houses and consufficiently prepared to conduct bombing raids on Japan is, at present, a military secret.

"Japan at most has 5,500 planes and not more than 3,500 are adequate fighters and bombers and she will IN THE SUPREME COURT OF BRITISH have a front about 3,500 miles long to guard with them. In the Matter of the Estate of John Hundreds of Japanese planes must be kept in China. Formosa, within easy round-trip flying distance of the Phillipines, will require still more hundreds. # STYLE TEST Individual Taste and Need Are Big

NEW SUITS

Factors and Satisfaction Well Worth While.

By HELEN FORREST HALL Associated Press Fashion Writer i NEW YORK, Nov. 21: (AP)-It's individuality that counts in the suit you wear today, whether its your "uniform" or a less integral part of your wardrobe.

Maybe our designers lost perstactive for a moment and created too many silhouettes for one season, but when it comes to suits they have produced a goodly number of fashions that are exciting and in good taste, too. And they made it easy for us to select what is really becoming - which merely means good dressing.

That suit individuality carries through in style, fabric, color and treatment of fabric or trim.

Even the classic suit likely has softness and easy body lines this season. The pencil-striped suit, for instance, usually severe in cut, may have gentle body softness and an inset belt. And a new color may give the classic suit a dressed-up air. The wearer, of course, handles the "make a little look like a lot" business by varied accessories and warmth giving gadgets of fur or of cloth contrast.

Vary the Cloth

For smartness try two surfaces of cloth, such as the season's favorite-wool and velvet teamed with one color; or two weights of the same cloth or two wools that contrast in texture but team well.

Those varied suit silhouettes include the cape—which is more than likely a custom-made affair in cloth tying in the suit fabric or the cape lining with the suit Alex. And you'll find that the length and manner in which a cape is cut is more likely to determine whether you can wear it than your own height or figure proportioning.

U.S. SUBMARINES KEEP A SHARP LOOKOUT

Sight of a submarine at sea these days is plenty of cause to view with alarm, but this one, photographed off the New England coast, is one of the United States' newest undersea boats, the U.S. S. Grampus. She is speeding along on the surface, all of her 299 et length above water, bottom. That gun is a three-inch anti-aircraft gun. Lieut.-Com. Edward S. Hutchinson, top left, is skipper of the Grampus. A submarine is not built for fighting on the surface. She is not intended to swap punches with surface ships, so she must be constantly on the alert when travelling on the surface, for a speedy destroyer could make short work of her. Hence there can be no let-up of vigilance when a sub comes up for air. This lookout, top right, is sweeping the sea with his binoculars from the conning tower of the U.S.S. Grampus. Note slenderness of the craft towards the bow.
