BATTLE IN TUNISIA

Major Engagement May Be Under Way There Soon

LOST MANY TANKS

CAIRO, Nov. 18 (CP)—General Sir Harold Alexander, commander-in-chief of British forces in the Middle East, said today that only fifteen of the 500 Axis tanks in Egypt escaped destruction or capture by the British Eighth Army but he predicted that Marshal Erwin Rommel's shattered forces would make a stand near El Agheila, Libya. As General Alexander spoke the Eighth Army was within seventy miles of Bengasi and pursuing Rommel on a wide front. He warned that there may be further heavy fighting in North Africa and said "the enemy is groggy but not knocked out."

LONDON, Nov. 18—A commencement of major fighting in Tunisia is expected at any moment. British and American parachute troops are reported to be landing deep within the French protectorate with land forces marching on from Algeria. Beze and Tunis are under air attack. To what extent the French resistance may be still appears uncertain. The tempo of fighting appears to be on the increase.

Marshal Erwin Rommel, Nazi commander-in-chief in North Africa, is reported to have arrived in Tunisia to direct Axis resistance from there.

Meanwhile the Allied forces are continuing their drive across Libya beyond Bengasi. The Afrika Korps, such as remains of it, may make a last stand at El Agheila, 150 miles from Bengasi.

All rear guard action of the Afrika Korps in Tunisia has been broken off.

TO BOOST OIL WELLS

Lack of New Development and Other Factors Cause of Present Decrease

EDMONTON, Nov. 18 (CP)—A decrease in Turner Valley production in the last few weeks has caused considerable concern in the Alberta oil industry. At present Turner Valley production is 1,000 barrels a day less than at this time a year ago and about 2,000 barrels daily below the 1942 peak reached in June. Valley production in late October was about 26,000 barrels daily.

Major causes of the decreased production are the gradually lowering flows from older wells and the lack of new development. Also relevant, are the conservation plan, the field price for crude and the new federal royalty taxes. Oil men give various reasons for a lack of new development. They say the disappointing results of drilling in the extreme north end of the field dried up eastern financial support for new wells.

According to an oil industry publication ('The Daily Oil Bulletin') there are good sites for from 75 to 90 new wells in the proven limits of the valley. Of these only between 35 and 40 are held by companies other than Imperial Oil, its associated companies and the Home Oil Company.

The Alberta Petroleum Association has asked G. R. Cottrell, Dominion Oil Controller, to increase the field price of crude oil to help offset declining production. Herbert Greensfield, A.P.A. president, has declined to comment on the submission until a reply is received. However, oil men argue a higher price would enable companies to drill on good locations in the absolutely proven area of Turner Valley and also permit continued operation of small producers in the south end of the valley.

Field Prices

The prevailing price in the valley, these oil officials say, hardly justifies operation of these small wells; their suspension would be serious, however, because in the aggregate they produce a considerable quantity of crude. The present field price for Turner Valley crude is $1.43 a barrel from 37.0 to 37.9 points gravity increasing two cents for each point of gravity until $1.97 a barrel is paid for 64.0 and up gravity oil.

It is impossible to get oil association officials to comment on the new royalty tax. It is known they are hoping to get some relief on the tax and they do not want to prejudice their case by any public statements now. The new tax which went into effect July 1 means that royalty companies for the first time are taxed as corporations are. The new tax, defined roughly, is a levy on the trustee or his equivalent of a maximum of 40 per cent on the net taxable income from the well.

This is the first time such a tax was levied in Canada and an authority on Turner Valley said it definitely affects new production because it has made investors more hesitant to supply money for drilling.

The conservation plan, calculated to lengthen the life of the field, was put into effect for the whole valley in September for the first time. The plan, briefly, limits production to 25 barrels of reservoir fluid—mixed oil and gas in the formation—for each acre daily. The plan was devised by Dr. Granger Brown of the University of Michigan.

However this plan has a rather minor effect on production. Wells are given individual quotas, eliminating the blanket quota for the field previously in effect, and production from individual wells may fluctuate week by week depending

USE MADE OF DARLAN

President Roosevelt Makes Statement in Regard to Negotiations In North Africa

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 18—President Franklin D. Roosevelt made a statement last night in regard to the position of Admiral Jean Darlan in North Africa and the future government of France.

He said that the arrangement with Darlan was strictly temporary and due to military expediency. It had given important advantages which otherwise could not have been enjoyed. Lives had been saved in landing and mopping up operations, achieving ends which otherwise would have taken months to accomplish, during which time the Axis would have been able to reinforce its strength. There had been no other of competent authority to deal with Darlan.

Roosevelt admitted that "we and the British are using Darlan for our own selfish purposes."

GIVING TO RED CROSS

upon the rise and fall of gas oil ratios.

Present Experiments

At present an experiment is being carried on among large wells in the north end of the valley which require a quite low quantity of natural gas to raise the crude oil.

It is possible these experiments may show that production can be raised in the aggregate to 1,000 to 2,000 barrels a day without injuring the field.

The possibility of stepping up oil production in Alberta is being studied by G. B. Webster of Ottawa, assistant oil controller, now on a tour of Turner Valley, the Vermillion oil field east of Edmonton and the McMurray tar sands area northwest of Edmonton.

Mr. Webster is making his survey because of the need for greater quantities of oil, especially in the wartime developments north of Edmonton. Federal officials are concerned about this greater need in the face of lower production in Turner Valley, failure to discover new fields in the province and the failure of Vermillion and other secondary areas to increase production.

In Hospital Bed Plans Security For Boys' Smokes

Veteran Flier of First Great War Has Plan to Ensure Overseas Men Getting All Their Cigarettes

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
HALIFAX, Nov. 18 (CP)—From the hospital bed he hasn't left in 12 years, Walter Callow outlined a plan that he thinks would hurry more cigarettes to Canadian service men overseas.

This, he said, would be his contribution to Canada's war effort. In the First Great War he did more, being a test pilot with the embryonic flying corps. A crash injured his spine, and for more than a decade he had been confined to bed, both blind and crippled.

But that can't stop him from helping the young men who are doing the job this time. As a veteran, Mr. Callow knows how a smoke can cheer up a service man, and his idea is to get as many cigarettes to the boys in uniform as possible.

Cigarettes à la Carte
So far he has been carrying on a one man campaign from his cubicle in an army hospital here.

With money raised by raffling his radio—his one means of communication with the world outside—a victory bond he bought and contributions from friends, he has managed to send some 500,000 smokes to men in the services.

However, he believes more can be done. His plan is to establish a bonded warehouse in England and when people in this Dominion want to send cigarettes to friends or relatives overseas, they would merely buy a card at a post office and send it to the soldier. The soldier in turn would send it to the warehouse, where he would get his cigarettes and outfit the U-boats and land submarines."

These efforts are appreciated. Hundreds of letters have come to the hospital for the indomitable veteran, expressing thanks for his gifts. One, from a Chinese seaman, is the most pointed. After a long note written in his native script, the oriental painfully writes in English, "Very much thanks cigarettes."

JAPANESE VERSION

NEW YORK, Nov. 18 (CP)—Japanese headquarters today admitted the loss on one Japanese battleship, the damaging of another, the loss one one cruiser and three destroyers and the damaging of seven Japanese transports in the third naval battle of the Solomons Islands. It also said that the Japanese lost thirty-two planes which dived into the enemy and nine others which did not return. The United States Navy already had announced that American naval forces sank a battleship and damaged another and sank three heavy and two light cruisers, five destroyers and eight transports with numerous other ships damaged. The Japanese claimed the sinking of eight United States cruisers and four or five destroyers and heavy damage to other American ships including two battleships but the United States have announced the loss of two light cruisers and six destroyers.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 18—There has been a great deal of good news from the southern Pacific and North Africa during the last two weeks and the turning point of the war may have been reached, said President Franklin D. Roosevelt in an address last night. "We have still, however, to face an uphill fight," declared the chief executive. "This is no time for exultation but it is a time for fighting and working to win."

Mr. Roosevelt cautioned against loose talk and disclosure of war information. He explained how it was often inadvisable to give out full information in regard to the progress of the war immediately.

Vancouver Business Men Acquiring Aveling Coal Property Near Telkwa

To assist in meeting the increased demands for fuel in the area from Prince Rupert to Prince George, the Aveling Collieries at Telkwa are being taken over by a group of Vancouver businessmen. They expect to increase the output of the mine considerably in the near future.

He was for some years with the Provincial Department of Mines in various parts of the province and also served as assistant to the provincial mineralogist. Latterly he has been a consulting engineer with headquarters in Vancouver.

Good War News . . .

These last few days have been as replete with good war news as any we have had since the commencement of the conflict now over three years old. Possibly it is just a little difficult for us to keep our feet on the ground and our minds on realities after hearing of such things as our quick victories in North Africa and the smashing naval win off the Solomon Islands. There seems to be general agreement now that the turning point has been reached but still we are only beginning a great deal of winning which must be done before the issue can be considered in any wise settled in our favor. As President Roosevelt says: "This is no time for exultation. It is time for fighting and working to win."

We may have turned the corner but there is a long road ahead.

Local Radio . . .

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has decided upon taking over the local radio station and the bringing of the Canadian network into Prince Rupert as the specific means of improving local radio service, an improvement for which we have long clamored. Local radions will, no doubt, be gratified that something has been done to relieve the exasperating situation which has existed for so long as far as outside reception is concerned. After the change is made we will be able to tune in for twelve and possibly sixteen hours a day and get the national programs. To those interested in the technical end, it is going to be interesting to find out just how successful the short wave relay experiment will be.

To possibly not a few people of city and district there will be some regret at losing some of the features of our old local service which, limited although it might have been in scope, was familiar and friendly. Possibly some of these little homelike features which have become almost an institution will be really missed.

Incidentally, the new arrangement here will automatically rule out the Daily News broadcasts which noon and night have gone on the air so regularly these quite a few years.

It does seem unfortunate that progress must be accompanied by the loss of some of the old friendly things.

ACTIVITIES OF Y.M.C.A. AND Y.W.C.A.

By DOROTHY GARBUTT,
Hostess

As a mark of respect I would like to say here and now what a good friend of the "Y" the late Mr. Pullen has always been. When we first opened up and were his closest neighbors he never failed to keep our rooms supplied with fresh flowers from his very lovely garden. His kindness leaves a fragrant memory with us.

We are sorry to say good-bye to Alex Hall who for the past four or five months has been Y.M.C.A. supervisor at Alford Bay. He leaves to enlist in the Air Force in Vancouver. Taking his place, until a permanent supervisor arrives, is Arnold Ducklin, Y.M.C.A. senior supervisor at Terrace.

One more on the welcome list is Mrs. Mallett of Camrose, Alberta, who has come to visit her husband, Ivan (Navy man) Mallett. Mrs. Mallett will be staying until Christmas when they both will return to Camrose to have Christmas together with their little girl and boy.

I wonder how many who saw the recent film "The King's Visit" showing at the various units and the "Y" but noticed the brief appearance of Paul Berthelet on the screen? He was at the time one of the crew of one of the destroyers which escorted the Empress of Australia and he was shown in a line of sailors as they saluted the Royal Yacht. Paul is Chief Bos'n's mate at H.M.C.S. Chatham and is father to the four Berthelet boys, a grand family.

The first of the Christmas parcels to be wrapped turned up today. Don't forget boys, help the shopkeepers by having your parcels wrapped here instead of the shops where they are very short-handed this year. Try to bring your own wrapping paper and string if possible.

We came all over childlike Saturday afternoon and had the time of our lives being hosts to Bob Gibson's primary class from the United Church Sunday School. Strains of "London Bridge," "Farmer in the Dell," "The Ship Went Up the Alley-Alley-Alley-OH!" (a new one on me) sounded strange in the high childish treble above the men's voices. We had movies, and cookies 'n ice cream. It was fun.

ESSEX MEN IN AFRICA

Laurels Gained by Regiment To Which Canadian Essex Scottish is Affiliated

By CLAUD GOLDING

LONDON, Nov. 18 (P)—Old British soldiers speak of the great fighting qualities of the men of the Essex Regiment. Then they speak of what they call the "vanity" of the Essex, their desire to be presentable.

They tell about the Essex battling for El Duda in North Africa in the present war and holding the point against tanks despite not having any tank guns and fighting so well that El Duda was held and Tobruk was relieved in the early fighting of the Western Desert. One sentence describes the Essex—"Having polished off the Germans, the Essex polished themselves."

One senior officer who saw them immediately after the El Duda battle in 1941 wrote: "When many others had beards of well over a week's growth all the Essex men had managed to shave and when I visited the platoon many men had even polished their boots."

Canadian Affiliate

Their fighting is of the same stripe as that of the Essex Scottish (Highlanders) of Windsor, Ontario an affiliated Canadian regiment whose men fought and died in the storming of the German's Dieppé defences August 19, 1942.

In the retreat from El Duda in 1940 the men of the Essex (English) Regiment fought night and day until they reached the Dunkirk beaches. But as they returned to England in whatever craft there was to carry them, the men made every possible attempt to spruce themselves up for their landings on home soil.

Once 44th Foot

The regiment was formed as the 44th Foot in 1740 and fought at Quebec under Wolfe. In Malta in 1803 they caused a sensation, the officers wearing large cocked hats, leather breeches and long boots like dragoons. They were powdered and had long pigtail, the curl generally containing the hair of a favorite lady. Men of the flank companies had their hair turned up behind as "stiff as a ramrod" according to old records.

A second battalion, the "Pompadours" was formed in 1803, and got their name because they wore the favorite purple of Madame Pompadour. They fought in the Afghan Revolt in 1841-42 in which they died almost to a man, in the Crimea, in the South African War and in the First Great War both in France, Gallipoli and Palestine.

"The War—and Your Underwear"

While we are doing our best to provide good underwear for our retailers and consumers in every city, town and village in Canada we would like to remind our patrons that good underwear is more precious than ever. This, of course, is because the needs of Canada's gallant fighting forces must come FIRST. Furthermore it must be remembered that our allotments of wool, cotton and practically everything entering into the making of good underwear are limited by government restrictions.

For this reason we ask STANFIELD'S distributors, retailers and consumers not to buy any more underwear than they actually need; and to consumers particularly we suggest that they take good care of the underwear they now have on hand. In order to help you do this please write for our new folder: "How To Make Your Underwear Last Longer." The folder covers instructions for the underwear worn by men, women, children and infants.

After three weeks discussion by the city council, a tentative proposition has been made for the filling in of Cow Bay. Many of the local merchants are alarmed by this movement as over four hundred fishing craft make Cow Bay their home port and it is feared that, by allowing the railroad to take over the property for a proposed waterfront and public dock, the fishermen would have to move their home harbor to Ketchikan or some other place.

SMUGGLING

Ancient Pastime of Erin Easier
And More Profitable With the World in Conflict

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer
SOMEWHERE IN SOUTHERN ARMAGH, Northern Ireland, Nov. 18 (P)—These are strange, exciting days and nights on the Eire-Northern Ireland border where the war has virtually brought respectability to smuggling.

It is a two-way trade. There are things in neutral Eire that are short in the hard-at-war north. There are things in the north that fetch a good price in the south. It is a trade that flourished since the border was established and the war, with its rationing, has made more important than ever. Not everybody living on this border smuggles but most of them do and they admit it.

The thing is not to get caught and many a border farmer who before the war scraped a bare living from his small craggy farm in the Armagh hills is well-to-do today because he knows the paths and by-ways that go over the border through the bogs and hills.

This has always been a country of legend and stories. For instance St. Patrick himself is said to have planted a yew tree near here and the things that have happened in these hills are tales without end. Today's stories of border dashes with contraband are just as legion.

They are stories of running cattle and poultry and butter and sugar and clothes into Northern Ireland; of running tea and coal and pepper and bicycle supplies and all sorts of things into Eire.

Cattle and poultry come into the north by the thousands. You can hear cattle running through the night if you stay in a hillside border farm. They come from the south and they must hurry over the "border mile."

On Market Days

Within sight of Slieve Gullion—they say if you can see this hill it is going to rain; but if you can't it's raining already—one of these border runners listened to the pounding hooves and said, "tomorrow they'll be at market."

It would be wrong to give his real name. He said, "just call me Jimmy." He works for himself and his wife and his pretty 10-year-old daughter Kathy, but nevertheless is a link in a ramified trade that stretches through the north and south like a giant network. He was born on the border and admits to thorough enjoyment of smuggling for the excitement alone if nothing else. You could go to no better person than Jimmy to learn of the trade.

Tea is to be had in Northern Ireland but not in Eire to any extent. It is prime stuff for the smuggling trade, good for 100 per cent profit sometimes. Every day in the week coal goes from Ulster to Eire. A ton of coal bought for $18 in the north will bring better than $250 in the south where there have been no legitimate coal imports for a year or so, where few coal fires burn just for the pleasure of a bright sitting room blaze.

A good average smuggler can clear about $45 a week, plus the fun of outwitting border constables. Also, says Jimmy, a bit of smuggling broadens a man who is born in these hills. He has to pick up considerable knowledge of business to be a success. He explained it this way: There was a market in Eire for bicycle supplies so Jimmy ordered a large quantity of cement for repairing tires. Then he found he had it in such large lots it was not readily marketable. "You see you're not only got to get what they want but get it in the size and quality they want it," said Jimmy.

A smuggler has to watch, too, that somebody doesn't take advantage. Once Jimmy bought a bunch of razor blades in Eire and found later there were only eight instead of 12 in each package.

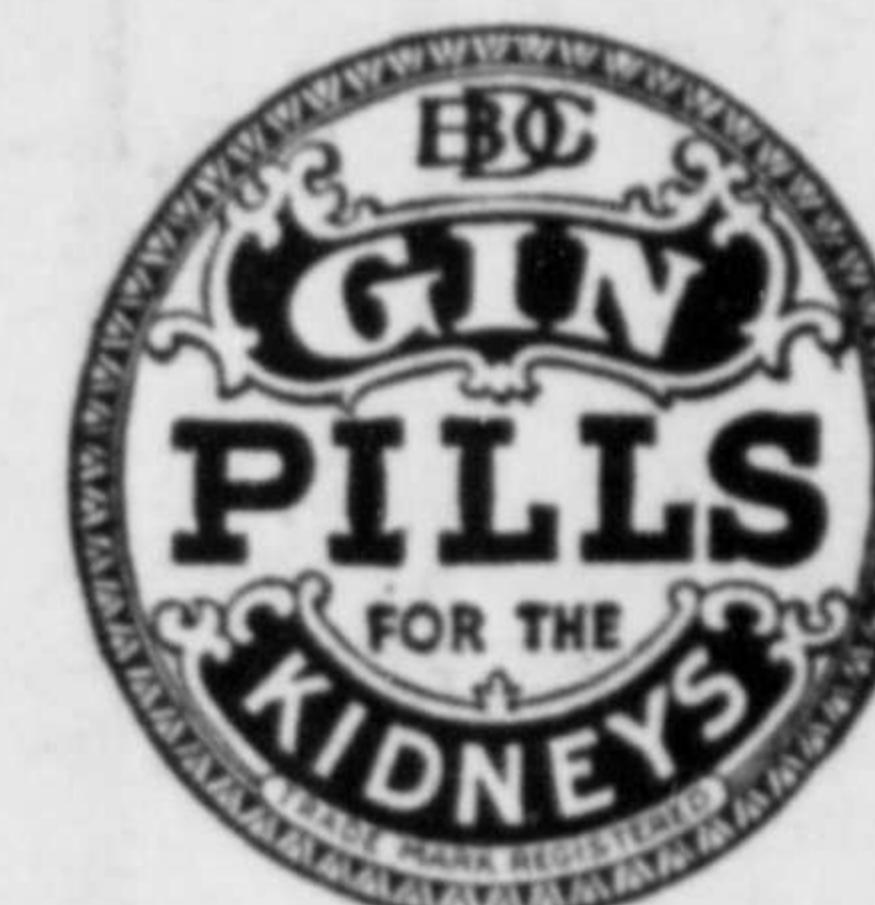

Night and Day

There was a time when most of the smuggling was done at night, so much that the police started working only at night, too. "Now," said Jimmy, "we work any time it looks good and the (police) don't know when we're coming or where."

Best places of supply are small stores in the country villages. Much of this border business is on a barter basis but such things as cattle, poultry and eggs are cash transactions. A ton and a quarter of coal from the north would fetch 200 pounds of sugar though the order might take as long as three months to fill. Few people have 200 pounds of sugar at one time.

With sugar scarce you find occasions when somebody from Eire slips into Northern Ireland and buys back sugar which already has been smuggled into the north. A man like Jimmy would not attempt to get a ton and a quarter of coal into Eire himself. Three miles of bog and rough country separate his 16 acres of not-to-rich soil from the border and he'd probably be caught. So a friend of his, a farmer living right smack on the frontier, would drive it over in two or three trips. From then on it is up to the man in Eire who ordered the coal.

Many a smuggler walks across the border. Others, like big Jimmy, a hearty hospitable Irishman of 39 years, do a lot of their work on bicycles. If you're strong, and you know how, you can carry 200 pounds on a bike and still travel 20 miles an hour over the "border mile"—half of it in Eire, half in Northern Ireland—he says.

PROUD OF

Alberta Boys in R.A.F. Brave
Fighters Over Europe and Middle East

GLEICHEN, Alta., Nov. 18 (P)—Mrs. G. H. Walker, a widow, who manages a farm seven miles north of here, is one of Canada's proudest mothers. Her two sons, Sqdn.-Ldr. James Arthur Walker, 24, and Flt.-Lt. George Edward Walker, 26, members of the Royal Air Force, both have won the Distinguished Flying Cross.

George, now a prisoner of war, was pilot of a bomber which burst into flames over enemy territory. He remained at the controls until his men bailed out. The plane capsized but after several attempts the young officer managed to clear the ship and parachuted to safety. The crew of six landed without injury but were immediately taken prisoner.

Sqdn.-Ldr. James Walker is at present stationed somewhere in the Middle East. This young man has 500 fighting hours behind him and is credited with having shot down seven enemy planes. He was at Dunkerque.

she knows, neither of her sons has been wounded, but she thinks that James may have had some sort of accident, for he now walks with a slight limp. "They wouldn't tell me anything that would worry me," she said.

Both boys received their early schooling at this town 50 miles east of Calgary, later taking their high school grades at Calgary. They were keenly interested in aeronautics and earned their private pilot's licence and commercial pilot's licence. They went to England in 1937 and joined the R.A.F.
