WORKERS' RENTALS Editor, Daily News:

With reference to the high rentals being paid to the Wartime Housing Limited for workers' houses, may I express the belief that excuses given show faulty and illogical reasoning to a marked degree. Since when has a landlord based his rentals on the earnings of a tenant? As to the workers being paid more money here than in Vancouver or Victoria, this is a misstatement that can be proved by simple arithmetic. To give a cost of living bonus with one hand and raise the cost of living with the other appears to be an inconsistency. An immediate cut in rent should be given to compensate for the high cost of living, for the lack of sidewalks,, playgrounds for our children, community halls, teleand phone facilities, etc., also lack of Mrs. J. by WALLACE REYBURN

Wallace Reyburn, war correspondent for the Montreal Standard, spent six and a half hours ashore with Canadian troops at Dieppe. The Regiment he went in with was the first to land and last to leave. Today's war correspondents aren't satisfied to write their despatches from behind lines. They get right in there with the fighting men and share their hazards. Reyburn, who was injured by shrapnel, had to swim out with men to the landing-craft under a barrage of fire which the Germans were concentrating on the shore line. The first barge he clambered onto sank. He swam to another only to find when he got into it that it was overloaded. A ship eventually took them off and out to a destroyer lying a mile or so off shore.

should be remedied now!

LES VIPOND.

London, Eng. (By Cable) - It was one o'clock in the morning and I'd just come back from Dieppe!

You've heard people describe to you "the most wonderful drive I ever had in my life". Maybe it was across Rockies or through Grand Canyon or just along Lakeshore Boulevard with a gale pounding huge waves up on to the roadway. But now I know definitely what is the most wonderful drive I ever had. There wasn't any beautiful scenery on this trip. It was through grimy docks of a South of England port!

My swim out from the beach with the Canadians had left me clad only in a pair of underpants, army boots and blanket which the ship's steward had wrapped round me. The press liason officer met me at the gangplank as I came off and said "I've got a room for you at the hotel, the car's once more, and was I glad to be there!

ready". We climbed into the press car and joined a huge convoy of army trucks taking Canadian troops out to their billets. I remember stretching back in my seat, lighting up a cigarette and feeling a surge of relief at being back on solid ground again.

I'd ridden in this Chev. many times before on interminable jaunts among troops in England, collecting material for articles on their training that led up to their grand showing at Dieppe.

Out there on the beaches and in the streets of Dieppe there had been moments when you wondered whether you would ever come through it alive and be back among old familiar things again.

But here I was on "Old Faithful" as we call her,

This personal despatch from Wallace Reyburn inspires General Motors to pay its humble tribute to the fighting men of the Dominion who gave their utmost at Dieppe! Such service as theirs cannot be emulated except in the very battle-smoke. But they were, and must be, supported, and General Motors of Canada-proud that the war equipment from its factories is to be found on every fighting front-pledges itself to produce that equipment to the last resource of its men and machines.
