BRITISH FALLING BACK

SINGAPORE-The British defenders of Malay Peninsula have suffered grave new reverses on both east and west coasts and have yielded more ground to the Japanese in their drive against the stronghold of Singapore: A retreat from Kuantan, 190 miles north of Singapore on the coast, is announced and also been falling back on the west coast. So far, the British have yielded 200 miles of coastline to the enemy. Singapore las been attacked again by Japanese aircraft but little damage was done. British Far Eastern headquarters announced officially today that hard pressed British and Imperial troops had yielded ground at both ends of the Malayan front under Japanese attack by land and sea. In addition to the retreat of British forces from Kuantan on the eastern side of the peninsula, the British troops on the west coast had made the second withdrawal within three days in order to meet a threat to the left bank. London military quarters said the Japanese capture of Kuantan airdrome would permit the invaders to send fighter escorts with bombers for more effective raids on Singapore.

Bruce Hutchinson is an able writer and is paid for what he writes. But now and then we steal something because we can't afford to pay for it, so here are the stolen goods:

"The year 1941, I suppose, has been one of the most remarkable in the whole history of the human species, not only for the events of arms, but for the re-grouping of the world's powers. That, after all, is the thing which lasts long after military campaigns have ended. The emergence of Russia and the United States into the full isolation, has utterly altered all the old balances that we HELP FOR have known since the last war; has, as it were, restored two missing limbs to the body of civilization and at last presented some hope of saving a civilization which assur-Regular Monthly Meeting of Canaedly has been in a process of decay for more than a generation. In 1941 we have scrapped the economic system meeting, the election off officers which has existed here without serious interruption since was postponed until the first Champlain planted the first seeds in his garden at Quebec. In place of the private initiative and private judgment which planted those seeds, which settled our country and built our cities, we have substituted this year the overpowering direction of the state. We are building a totalitarian economy. The task is not complete yet. The price ceiling was a historic change, of course, but is only part of the whole process. Much more must be done by rationing, by compulsory savings, by compulsory labor until the unthinking man may well say to himself that our system differs little from the system we are fighting to destroy. In its mechanics, this is true. There will be very little difference, before we are finished, in the actual blueprint and method; but all the world of difference between the pur- 2 babies' patchwork quilts pose, the result. Our state is under the control of the government, yes; but the government is under the control of the people still and can be changed or removed at any moment. So long as parliament exists, we can liquidate the war system entirely or change it in any way we please. It can never be fastened firmly upon us against our will. That is the difference.

During their visit to Boston, while on an extended tour of the United States, members of the R.C.A.F. visited a British warship which was, at that time, in port. They are shown aboard the vessel as sailors explain some of the intricacies of life aboard a man-o'-war.

"The results of our progress so far are quite beyond calculation at present, but we may note some trends. The important one, of course, is the growing realization by the public that the state, in a pinch, can mobilize itself to produce amazing quantities of unusable war materials --and, next, the public assumption that if the state can socks do that it can also produce amazing quantities of other materials when the war is over.

"At the risk of repeating something said here often before, I suggest that herein lies the great basic political fact of the future. After the war the people are going and wash cloth, 1 package cotton to insist that the state produce prosperity as efficiently wool. as it produced weapons. It is significant that over 80% of all life insurance is owned by the people in the world's democracies -where men and women have the freedom to unite for their mutual protection That is why one out of every three Canadians is a policy owner-why Canada, with 12 million people, owns nearly as much life insurance as all the 80 millions in Germany Life insurance is an outstanding example of democracy at work - guarding the freedom and independence of a million Canadian homes And today, 170 million dollars of life insurance savings, invested in war loans, are helping to finance our fight for victory.

"Up to now, however, we have seen only the easy side of the process. The hard side only begins as this year ends. The hard side involves such sacrifices of our liberties, of our customary ways of life, of our converi- the first ten-weeks period. Presence, of our living standards as we have never seen before. And before all this is over we may well witness the supplies of rye and wheat. another key fact to set against the first, as noted above. We may well find before the war is over that the people will be so tired of regimentation, so sick of being told what they must do and what they cannot do, that they will revolt against the whole theory of control and clamor for a return to something like old-fashioned liberty. That now point with pride to dress modprospect also is buried in the mysterious human stuff of els in synthetic erepes and enif-1941.

And another thing also: In 1941 Canada began to feel a new sense of its power, its place in the world. It began, under the pressure of a huge war effort, to lose modore J. B.
