CLAIMS OF WORKLESS

Employment Insurance Commission Gives Advice To Those Seeking Benefits

The importance of registering at the employment and claims office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission immediately after becoming unemployed is emphasized. It is said that some misunderstanding has arisen in connection with the nine-day waiting period which is provided in the Unemployment Insurance Act when benefits are claimed. Some applicants have been under the impression that persons wishing to claim unemployment insurance benefit had to wait nine days after becoming unemployed before they were able to make a claim. This is not the case, it is explained. All applicants for benefit should register at the employment and claims office immediately on becoming unemployed because the nine-day waiting period only commences from the date a claim for benefit is made.

If the claim is not made for nine days after a worker becomes unemployed it means there is just that much delay in his obtaining benefit. It has been found in a number of cases that applicants have been disappointed when they found that the waiting period started only from the date of their application. Another misunderstanding among some insured persons has been that they must wait two years from July 1, 1941, when contributions started, before they are eligible to receive benefit. This is based upon an incorrect interpretation of the Unemployment Insurance Act. The Act said that contributions must be made for not less than 180 days during the two years preceding the date on which a claim for benefit is made. The important thing is to have made the 180 contributions during this period. It is not necessary to wait for two years before being eligible to receive benefit.

Linen Industry Slackens In Shortage of Flax But General Employment Better

OTTAWA, June 18.—Northern Ireland industries in 1941 were increasingly utilized for war work, says a report to the Dominion trade and commerce department by E. L. McColl, Canadian trade commissioner for Northern Ireland and Eire. The report says "despite difficult conditions and enemy air attacks in the spring, production, particularly in the shipbuilding and engineering industries, was well maintained. "It was a difficult year for the linen industry in consequence of the shortage of flax—nevertheless during the year unemployment figures dropped from 69,643 to 28,164."

SCHOOL ON WAR FIRE

Fire Chief H. T. Lock Describes Course In California

"The chemical school of warfare which I attended at the Stanford University was one ninth to be conducted there and was composed of two students from the state of Nevada, three from Canada and 38 Californians, 43 in all," says Fire Chief H. T. Lock, who returned to the city yesterday. "The class had five women students all instructors in some branch of civilian defense. The school was completely under army control headed by a soldier and a gentleman, Col. Billeke, with Major Thompson second in command. "Major Thompson came north with three Canadians to establish a similar school at the University of Washington at Seattle. The class was housed in a student residence called Sequoia Hall and various auditoriums of the University Campus were used. The class itself was very mixed comprising army officers, technical men of various American utilities, police officials and housewives who had been selected for their executive abilities. Our relations with the school staff and the class personnel were of the friendliest and every endeavour was made to help and advise. The teaching staff of the chemical school was augmented by lecturers of the University faculty. Class room lectures and chemistry demonstrations led up to actual field tests for gas recognition and every student passed through a gas chamber to demonstrate confidence in gas mask protection. Class room lectures and demonstrations of explosives and incendiaries led up to field exercises in which the students themselves extinguished or controlled oil, thermite, magnesium and white phosphorous bombs. This was followed by a night demonstration within the campus area in which a small village was built up complete with the various auxiliary services. Bombs were fixed and controlled in attic spaces, the attic space being open at the end. A magnesium bomb was controlled in another building by the sprinkler system. A gas bomb brought the decontamination squad into action, while a high explosive demolished another residence from which a rescue squad rescued the injured. Parachute flares illuminated the whole scene and this was followed by high explosives which rocked the surrounding area. A section of a 4 storey building was shown to have been hit on the top floor with a thermite bomb and the flow of molten fiery liquid which burned its way through floor to floor was very spectacular. The resultant fire was controlled by the Palo Alto Fire Department with hose streams. To this night demonstration, the people of Palo Alto and surrounding districts had been invited and they came in their hundreds. The police auxiliary of Palo Alto controlled all traffic to and from the area and they did a very good job of it. "Class room lecture on civilian defence in all its phases led up to a control room exercise and this was a most informative and interesting event, some phases of which we would do well to adopt. "In this exercise I was given control of the fire service of a city of 200,000 people. On the control board, I had 30 pieces of standard equipment, 40 squads of fire auxiliary and 20 rescue squads at my disposal. I never expect to issue orders on such a magnificent scale again. After each incident had been taken care of by the six services—fire, police, medical, war-dens, public works and utilities, a "critique" was held in which the school staff and the class itself criticized the actions of all concerned. Often this was not very complimentary but it was at least enlightening, for every angle which

AXIS FAILS IN EFFORT

Great Attempt To Knock British Out of Mediterranean Fails Short—London Makes Statement

LONDON, June 18.—Germany and Italy, it is declared in a statement issued here, threw all possible aircraft into the recent attack on British naval convoys in the Mediterranean. The entire Italian fleet also went into action in the effort to knock the British out of the Mediterranean but the effort was a failure. The Italian navy was out for a showdown in Mare Nostrum but it was sent scurrying back to port. One Italian cruiser and two destroyers were sunk and two battleships and two light cruisers badly damaged. The Italians claim to have sunk four British warships but no statement has yet been made by the British other than that nothing larger than a destroyer was lost. Four British merchant ships are believed to have been sunk. The Axis planes used a new type of high explosive rocket bomb.

Russians Have Gone Into Offensive Again In Kharkov Area

MOSCOW, June 18.—After thirteen days of intensive siege, the Russians are still beating off assaults on the Black Sea key port of Sebastopol and are swinging into the offensive around Kharkov. United States Liberator bombers have arrived at Sebastopol to be used in assistance of the Russians. The Germans, fearing an uprising behind their lines, have ordered complete evacuation of Kharkov which was once a city of 750,000 people. Post-War Cooling Off Is Advocated

IN DEFENCE OF TOBRUK

Position Is Improved Although Outlook In Libya Gloomiest In Year According To London Force Encircled

British Are Now Falling Back On Egyptian Frontier, It Is Announced

LONDON, June 18.—British forces are lining up around Tobruk for a final defence of the North African stronghold, the position of which is believed to be improved by the recent arrival of reinforcements although London military quarters say "the outlook in Libya is the gloomiest in a year." The British forces fell back to fortified positions near the Egyptian frontier today, leaving the famous Tobruk fortress all but surrounded by Axis divisions. Only the coastal road remains open to link Tobruk with the Egyptian border eighty miles eastward. Apparently, the British Eighth Army is split into two forces, one remaining to man Tobruk against imminent onslaught or a siege like that endured for eight months in 1941. Air Force Active
The Royal Air Force is smashing hard again at German tanks and armored forces which are approaching Tobruk. The Allied air squadrons are said to have broken all records for bombing and strafing as the British pulled out of El Aden and Sidi Rezegh and desert trails were littered with wrecked or burned Axis vehicles.

CANADA IS IN ACTION

Lieut. General Stuart Discloses Co-operation With United States In Defence Of Alaska

VICTORIA, June 18.—The Canadian government attaches considerable significance to Japanese landings on the Aleutian Islands, declared Lieut. General Kenneth Stuart, chief of Canadian Army staff, now temporarily in command on the Pacific Coast, in a radio broadcast last night. General Stuart disclosed that squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force were already operating along with United States Army and Navy aircraft in Alaska and that Canadian anti-aircraft guns were being set up. The general revealed that the Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons and Canadian anti-aircraft units had been operating for some days with the United States forces in Alaska. He did not reveal details but said that the disclosure was authorized by Hon. J. L. Ralston, minister of national defence. Declaring that he attached "considerable significance to the latest Japanese move," General Stuart said it was obviously an attempt to neutralize, destroy or occupy such air bases in the Aleutians as can be used for jumping off points for raids on Japan by short-based aircraft. It was also true that, if Japan can hold her gains in the Aleutians, she will be much closer to Canadian objectives than she was before.

Nipponese Forces In Pacific Now Broken Up, States Stimson

Only Very Small Landings So Far On Aleutians Although Developments Are Obscured By Unfavorable Weather

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 18 (CP)—Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson said today that losses inflicted on the Japanese in the Pacific had temporarily but substantially reduced the threat of attack on the Pacific coast which he has repeatedly said might be expected. War and Navy Department information, he said, is that the Japanese have thus far made only very small landings in the Aleutians but he stressed that fog and unfavorable weather obscured developments in the North Pacific. He said that American and Japanese forces in the Aleutians thus far had had only fleeting glimpses of each other through the eyes of airmen. Information was still incomplete on the Midway battle "but, after three days of fighting, the enemy fleet was scattered all over the Pacific Ocean, hustling away as fast as it could in opposite directions without air protection."

NEWS FROM EDMONTON

Under sunny skies and greatly improved moisture conditions, crops of northern and central Alberta have entered mid-June with a fine recovery after a backward, uneven spring. The wheat crop ranges from three to ten inches in height for an average of five inches in the territory from Red Deer north.

The Alberta government has passed an order dismissing the provincial cancer commission which was appointed last November and which had authority to under provincial legislation to investigate and report upon claimed remedies for the treatment of cancer. YOUTHFUL EXTRAVAGANCE

Editor, Daily News:
The Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce has been recently the subject of sneering remarks.

It is true its members are of the salaried class earning above the average but they don't apologize for this but are proud of it. Most of them started at the bottom rung and, by diligence and thrift, succeeded in rising above the average. They will still continue to pay their annual dues to the Chamber and work without reward and apparently without thanks in the community interest.

They make mistakes as they are human and sometimes are guilty of misplaced zeal but by and large their work produces for the common good.

Their recent suggestion about compulsory savings was not aimed at married men with dependents but to control the extravagance of the young single men who are now earning more than is good for them and some of whom are wasting it in beer parlors, gambling dens and other vice.

Incidentally you and I in civilian clothes enjoying safety and comfort are not sending our young men in uniform anywhere. They volunteered, I emphasize, volunteered to fight for us anywhere and it is for their protection and to equip them with the best of fighting material that the extravagance of these young men, not in uniform, must be curbed.

led up to action—right or wrong—was placed in the spotlight. Examinations were held on each of the three foremost subjects—war gases, incendiaries and civilian defence, and "critiques" were held on each. Our tutors were not spared in this "critique" for many of the students proved very adept questioners.

Lecturer From London

"The final lecture given immediately before the class closing exercises, and perhaps the most impressive, was by auxiliary fireman, Paul Haybrook of the London Fire Department, artist by profession. He and a fellow fireman are touring the United States in charge of an exhibition of paintings and movies on the Blitz of London, of which Mr. Hargood painted many of the pictures. A very fine speaker, his lecture was short but impressive, and when he asked for questions he found a very interested and sympathetic audience. He must have found the ovation he received compensation and the large number of interesting questions complimentary.

"Each student was given a mass of printed matter which covers every conceivable angle of civil defence and since all of it seems to have been based on British experience, and all lecturers constantly referred to that fact, much of it should be helpful.

"On the return home I stopped off at Portland which has a high record for civilian defences and was shown the chart by which 67 thousand civilian defence workers

On Duty With Royal Navy

Lieut. Ted LePage, On Service With Admiralty In North Sea, Heard From

Word has been received from Lieut. T. N. LePage, formerly manager of the Northern British Columbia division of the Home Oil Distributors at Prince Rupert, who has been in the naval service overseas for nearly two years now and who is now on loan to the Royal Navy as an Admiralty salvage officer in the North Sea. Prior to going on this duty, Ted was commanding officer on one of the fleet tugs. He has hopes of having Canadian leave this fall when he may make a trip to Prince Rupert. Mrs. LePage and son are in Vancouver.

are controlled.

"I was also shown the Jay Stevens disaster truck which embodies just about every tool and device known which can be used in disaster and emergency. That one unit alone cost over $25,000. Then, being interested in fire boats, I was taken to a riverside fire station, one of three where a fire boat was moored ready for instant use. After a detailed inspection, the captain ordered her into action and in an incredibly short time we were heading up river with hose streams of 250 pounds pressure at a three-inch nozzle. The cost of such a fire boat was $125,000. All in all, I hope to have an instructive report to offer the Civilian Protection Executive."
