Situation At Stalingrad Serious

DIED AT HELM OF HIS SHIP

Capt. Edward Mabbs, Master of Steamer Prince George, Expires Suddenly

As the steamer Prince George was nearing port at 4 o'clock this morning, the master, Capt. Edward Mabbs, veteran British Columbia coast mariner, dropped dead on the bridge, the victim of a sudden heart attack. He had been called to watch and collapsed and expired as he reached his post. A doctor who was on board the vessel as a passenger was called and pronounced life extinct.

Capt. Mabbs, right up to his death, appeared to be in normal health. He had not complained of illness and seemed to be in his usual good spirits.

Deceased was a native of Ireland and sixty-two years of age. He was at one time with Union Steamships Limited but for upwards of a quarter of a century had been an officer of Canadian National Steamships, formerly Grand Trunk Pacific Steamship Co. Widely known from Puget Sound to Alaska, he had served as master of every one of the company's ships including the larger turbine vessels such as the Prince Robert. He is survived by his widow, one son, Howard, at Prince Rupert, and another son in Australia.

Capt. Douglas W. Graham, chief officer of the Prince George, has taken over command for the time being.

The body of Capt. Mabbs will be returned to Vancouver where the funeral will take place.

JAP SHIPS SENT DOWN

Loss of Another Five to American Submarines Brings Nipponese Total to 339

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 4.—The United States Department of the Navy yesterday announced the sinking of five more Japanese vessels including one cruiser. This brings up to 339 the total number of Japanese ships sunk since Pearl Harbor and the commencement of war between Japan and United States and Great Britain. This is five times the number of American ships lost.

In addition to the five latest Japanese ships to be sunk, three others were severely hit and one—a tanker—was probably sunk. The other two were freighters.

The latest sinkings of enemy vessels took place in the western Pacific Ocean and United States submarines were responsible. These sinkings were not in connection with the Battle of the Solomon Islands.

The United States has been responsible for the sinking of 65 Japanese ships since Pearl Harbor and probably 34 more. A Japanese tanker is among the recent sinkings.

Meanwhile reinforced German forces are pounding ceaselessly and further withdrawals are acknowledged by the Soviet.

The Nazis beat against Stalingrad today with twenty-five divisions in an effort to capitalize on wedges driven systematically into defences but the Red Army men were reported to have counter-attacked with a violence that regained some ground northwest of the city. Germans striking from the southwest again succeeded in making a slight advance at enormous cost, a Soviet mid-day war bulletin reported.

Three Years Of War ...

The war is now three years old as far as the participation of we Britons is concerned. True it was September 10 when Canada declared war but we were really at war on the day that Great Britain declared war on Germany following the invasion of Poland two days before.

We remember how we shuddered when they talked about the war possibly lasting three years. Now we have been at it the three years and, while some of us may wonder how it can possibly last that much longer without something cracking, others, looking at the picture realistically, find it difficult to see how less than another period equal to that which has already elapsed can possibly do the job.

No, the end is not yet and, with the tide hardly turned in our favor so far, it is difficult to see the end. Of one thing we are sure, however, long as the task may be, we have the courage, the fortitude, the ability to see the thing through.

If we have not started to win yet, we can at least think comfortably that the enemy has not yet even started to do the fighting that he must do if he is to defeat the great forces which are arrayed against him.

The war may bring to us many discomforts, many inconveniences that we in this blessed land have not yet been called upon to endure. But we know that the worst we can suffer will be as nothing to which some of our Allies have been subjected, yet continue to fight grimly on with the goal clearly before.

Yes, the record is none too comforting for any of us so far but we in our land have not yet had much of the toil, the sweat, the blood and the tears that more than two years ago the Imperial Prime Minister, in his historic words, warned us to anticipate.

We have been to a large extent on the defensive so far. We have done more retreating than we have done advancing. There is much lost ground to be regained and, to do that, we must do more than talk about the offensive, the second front, and such things. We must all of us do more than talk. We must be prepared to act, to pay, to conserve, to fight in some way or another.

If the first three years of war has at long last taught us that this, for our way of living, is a life and death struggle, that it is a war in which we all of us have a precious stake which we must strive in every way possible to protect and preserve, they will not have been entirely lost.

There are many ways in which Canadians can serve in furnishing the tools and doing the job. It is high time that we were all doing a little soul searching as to what each of us is doing to really help.

Three years of war have gone. The worst may be yet to come—but also, we know, so is the best.

A lot has happened these last three years. It is a brave and daring prophet who would predict with confidence what the next three may bring.

ARMY CHIEF WARRIOR OF MAGIC LAMP

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press War Correspondent)

Sir Alan Brooke Is Discussed Allied Commander For Europe

LONDON, September 4: —Top soldier in the British army, Gen. Sir Alan Brooke will have a powerful voice in the great decisions taken on the United Nations' offensive into Europe.

As Chief of the Imperial General Staff, Gen. Brooke directs British military strategy wherever British troops are serving and a second front in Europe may give him the opportunity for close-to-home execution of the offensive moves foremost in his mind.

There is a possibility a British general may be selected as commander-in-chief of the Allied armies in Europe, even though speculation has focused on MacArthur, Marshall and McNaughton. Gen. Brooke is the outstanding military figure on the British list.

Even if he remains at the War Office as C.I.G.S., his opinion will carry tremendous weight on second-front issues. "Don't dismiss him when you're speculating on the second front," a military authority said the other day. "He might be the surprise packet."

Ever since the British Expeditionary Forces came out of France, Britain has been planning to get back on the continent. As Commander-in-chief of the Home Forces from July, 1940, to November, 1941, and since then as C.I.G.S., Sir Alan, now 59, has been one of the leaders handling attack preparations. His work as chief of Home Forces, which includes the Canadian and American armies in Britain, is described by a high-ranking Canadian officer, who knows the whole story as a "magnificent job."

Order From Chaos
After Dunkerque, the situation regarding the forces in Britain was chaotic. Gen. Brooke was put in charge. The 1st Canadian Division was the only fully-equipped division in the United Kingdom. It shuttled about central and southern England, prepared to make a bold attempt to block German invasion thrusts from East Anglia to Dover and the Isle of Wight.

The British Expeditionary Force, broken up, exhausted and without weapons to speak of, was scattered all over south England. Never in British history has a chief of home forces been faced with such a seemingly impossible situation. Brooke took off his tunic, sat down in his gloomy Whitehall office and sorted out the mess. By the fall, the situation was a little brighter and during the winter of 1940-41 whole new armies were organized, trained and equipped.

The general went to work on his own headquarters, cleaned out the fumbler's, ousted slackers and gathered around him a staff of decisive-thinking officers. By plane, train and in his big, black sedan, Sir Alan travelled all over the United Kingdom, personally checking on the new army he was creating. He was the war office genii of the magic lamp, turning out division after division.

Gen. Brooke always had a particular liking for the Canadians and several times during busy months of day and night toil, he went to the Canadian camps and encouraged them. Those were the days when invasion was expected with every dawn.

No man for compromise, Gen. Brooke is tough about everything. He's spartan and a terror for work. He's no Wellington but he slugs away steadily. Ability to make decisions and stick to them is one of his strong points. This was demonstrated in June, 1940, in connection with the Canadians.

Canadians in France
At that time Gen. Brooke was commanding two British divisions to France, as the Germans thrust towards the channel ports. Every effort was being made to persuade the French generals to continue the fight. The 1st Canadian Brigade had landed at Brest and some of the units like the Army Service Corps, the 48th Highland-

Hints for wartime living from folk who ought to know

PICKLING—It's time to put up pickles out—and here is the catch—you aren't allowed extra sugar. Laura Pepper of the consumer section of the Department of Agriculture and her staff have been busy on this very problem. The result—a folder entitled "Wartime Pickles and Relishes" which may be obtained free of charge on request from the publicity and extension division of the Department of Agriculture.

COFFEE—Are you still worrying about making your coffee go turner? Here is a tip from New York way. Take the used coffee grounds and any left-over coffee and place them in a refrigerator—then when coffee-time comes around again, take them out and boil three times as long as you do fresh coffee. You'll be surprised how good it is.

CONVENTIONS—Many committees planning conventions are asking if they can have extra tea and coffee for their gatherings. "No," says Dr. George E. Shortt, director of industrial and institutional rationing for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Supplies of these imported commodities are very scarce, he says, adding "I am sure that no Canadians will want to risk men's lives for a cup of tea."

FATS—Marion Harlow, assistant director, Nutrition Services, tells us we can kill two birds with one stone by cutting down on fats. We'll be saving fat for war uses and giving a boost to our own health by cutting out fried foods and pastries, she says. However, she warns us not to omit such diet fats as butter, cream, eggs and meat from our menus. Did you know that we on the American continent eat more fats than those of any other area in the world?

MILK—Byrne Hope Sanders, "Mrs. Consumer" of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, says that consumption of fluid milk for the ers from Toronto and the 1st Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery were pushing towards Paris. The rest of the division was at port in southern England waiting to cross the channel.

Gen. Brooke was in a conference with the French. He broke it up when it became hopeless to argue further, and motored direct to tell the Canadians to withdraw. He turned back heads of columns and gave a withdrawal order personally to Lt.-Col. J. H. Kingston, Ontario, then commanding the 1st Field Regiment and now the major-general who commanded the British forces in the assault on Dieppe.

"Gen. Brooke saved the 1st Canadian Division by his promptness of decision," a Canadian general said speaking of the withdrawal from France in 1940.

Sir Allan's career started in 1902 when he joined the Royal Artillery. He was a senior artillery officer with the Canadian Corps in the First Great War, held the usual appointments in commands and at staff colleges in England during peacetime and jumped to the fore when he went to France with the "Second B.E.F." to try and prevent the collapse. His task as C.I.G.S. has been as unenviable as any military assignment in the Empire. Last fall he took over from Gen. Sir John Dill, who was retired at 60.

Far Flung Strategy
An indecisive and disappointing campaign in the western desert, Japanese sweeps through Malaya, the fall of Singapore and Burma and the continual fighting withdrawals features the record of trouble. Gen. Brooke's strategy in his Whitehall direction of these farflung campaigns against impossible odds necessarily had to be defensive, until equipment and men were ready.

These campaigns were staggering blows to the Allied peoples, but Gen. Brooke and his generals at the fronts—Wavell, Auchinleck, Alexander—salvaged much from the ruin of lost battles in the middle and far east. They slowed down a powerful foe.

Gen. Brooke handled bad situations but drained a measure of success from even the worst. There are many in Britain now who feel that if Sir Alan hadn't been C.I.G.S. during the past ten critical months, the Allies would be in a much tougher spot than they are.

first half of 1942 increased nearly 10 percent but production only increased four percent. If you are a farmer's wife, you can encourage your husband to build up his herds. You know we want to send you as many milk products as we can to Britain besides looking after ourselves.

RAYON—Here's good news for you—but the moths don't like it. Rayon actually requires no protection against these pests unless it is blended with wool—then the experts say the fabric should be treated as all wool and thoroughly de-mothed. But if you are storing away a suit or dress made of rayon or spun yarn, all you have to do is to make sure that it is clean.

SPORT CHAT

As the baseball season has come to an end before Labor Day two games have been arranged for Sunday and Monday between an Army All-Star team and a Prince Rupert All-Star team. These two games should provide real excitement for baseball fans as both teams are very evenly matched.

The softball finals are scheduled for Monday afternoon if both teams are able to turn out. So watch for the softball ad. in the local papers.

Punches exchanged by Fred Brocklehurst and Mitchell Oakes in a St. Regis-Canadiens senior across game at Montreal precipitated a riot three years ago this week. The fracas lasted two full periods and went on after the game despite police intervention. The Canadians won amid the tumult, 12-2.

Byron Nelson won the Professional Golfers' Association tournament at Hershey, Pa., two years ago this week. Starting three up on Sam Snead, he felt one behind at the 32nd hole, but recovered his lead on the 34th when Snead's 20-foot putt bounced out of the cup and clinched the title by placing his final tee shot just six feet from the pin.

NEWS FOR MIDLANDS

The town of Cobourg is effectively taking its part in the government's big rubber salvage drive which is now in progress. Rubber of all kinds is being received at the Post Office and at Allison's coal yard on Division Street.

Twenty-seven Cobourg students have been successful in their upper school examinations. They were students of the Cobourg Collegiate Institute.

Golfing fans from Cobourg, Port Hope, Peterborough, Oshawa, Toronto and other centres thronged to Cobourg a few days ago for a tournament at the course of the Cobourg Golf club. Four professionals took part and there was a smart exhibition by Toronto men. Among those in attendance was Bob Gray, the Canadian champion.

With the objective of providing necessities and comfort for sailors' ditty bags and soldiers' hampers, an old time garden party was held at the home of Mrs. George Barron, president of the Women's Institute at Baltimore. The handsome sum of $115 was realized. Among those present were visitors from Cobourg and many other neighboring points.

Mrs. E. Sandercock and Mrs. Charles Sandercock were hostesses when the United Church Women's Auxiliary of Roseneath had a meeting. There was a very acceptable program. Future work for the church was planned. The Auxiliary, in addition to other activities, is doing considerable Red Cross work.

DOINGS OF LOCAL 'Y'
 (By the Ghostwriters)

It was with considerable concern that we learned the other day that our sailor friend and entertainer, Bert Pownell, was in hospital. His pals were very upset about it, to say the least, and everyone who knows Bert will be looking forward to his quick recovery. Bert was that gorgeous creature referred to in these columns before who sang a duet with Vic Bannister on a couple of our Sunday evening programs.

And that gives us to think furiously: there must be lots and lots of other fellows up in the hospital that we can't pick out by name who feel just about as lonely as Bert does and who would appreciate a visit from someone now and then. Would it be possible that a few of the young ladies of this fair city could form themselves into a hospital committee for the boys of the services and maybe make the convalescent life of the lads up there a little less dull? How about it, gals? Of recent days the lads of the "Y" have been putting on a couple of shows a week up there and that helps but it doesn't have the personal touch that some of you people could give.

About a week ago we changed our "Y" Hut program a bit. In case you are interested, it goes like this:
 Monday night, old-time dance.
 Tuesday, movie.
 Wednesday, dance.
 Thursday, boxing.
 Friday, bingo.
 Saturday, movie.
 Sunday, Padre's concert.

Should the weather surprise us by being rainy and dull, then we shall try running a movie matinee Sunday afternoons. You are given fair warning that there is certain risk of repetition on the shows for this matinee business but we'll reduce it to a minimum. And remember, only in case of that unusual local phenomenon, rain!

Well, it seems that the battle of baseball has been concluded, and peace and quiet reign once more (for the moment) on Acropolis Hill.

There were two contests Wednesday night—a quite lively debate, public forum and general discussion group met and held forth for quite some time.

CANADA'S HUSKY WINGS OF PEACE ARE FLYING FOR WAR THESE DAYS

End of Third Year of Conflict Finds Nation's Commercial Aviation Linked to Victory Effort

(This is one of a Canadian Press Daily Series on Canada: Three Years at War)

By LORNE BRUCE
 (Canadian Press Staff Writer)

EDMONTON, Sept. 4 (CP) — War has taken over the romance of commercial aviation and this husky infant of Canada's industrial life now is being used almost entirely directly or indirectly in the war effort. Civil aviation probably has converted itself into a military medium more than any other industry operating before hostilities broke out in 1939. Ninety percent of the industry is devoted to war work and it is difficult to get freight or passenger space without a priority.

Most of the existing commercial services have been merged into one large organization. This has resulted in airlines being able to do more than twice the work they did in 1939 with slightly less personnel and approximately the same amount of equipment.

Search for new mining fields and the discovery areas expanded the industry in Canada until this country led the world in air freight—20,000,000 pounds in 1939. Mining traffic has declined somewhat since 1939 but this has been more than offset by the increase in military freight traffic.

Planes for War
 The chief obstacles to expansion now are the difficulty of procuring suitable commercial aircraft, especially freighters that can carry big loads, together with scarcity of experienced personnel. The industry would like to buy bigger and better planes but none are available. Every plane that could be put into service has been reconditioned. A new plane is allotted to civil aviation only on the rare occasions when the priority board decides the move is vital to the war effort.

In conversion to a wartime basis, the commercial aviation industry provided the framework without which the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan might not have risen to the success anticipated for it. The industry's fields, its personnel and the flying clubs were merged into the training scheme.

Twenty elementary flying training schools and nine air observer schools are being operated by civilians. A large part of the aircraft and engine overhaul work required by the Royal Canadian Air Force is done in government plants managed by private industry and the Trans-Canada Airlines instrument repair and testing bureau at Winnipeg is doing a large amount of work for the R.C.A.F.

Pilots for War
 In addition aviation industry made rapid progress between the inauguration of the first regular airmail, passenger and freight service in the Dominion June 1, 1924, between Halleybury, Ont., and Rouyn, Que. Now it has taken the war in its stride, having de-

NEWS FROM EDMONTON

In trim, khaki uniforms, twenty-one Edmonton girls, volunteers with the Canadian Women's Army Corps, arrived here last Saturday evening after graduating from the basic training centre at Vermilion. They formed part of a parade of no less than 350 recruits from the Canadian National Railways station to the Macdonald Hotel. The girls are now stationed at the Prince of Wales Armouries.

George H. Steer K.C., well known Edmonton barrister, has been appointed professor of law at the University of Alberta. Miss Mary Winspear Ph. D. has been appointed instructor in English succeeding Prof. J. T. Jones who has enlisted.

R. C. Vaughan, president of the Canadian National Railways, and party will be in Edmonton this Saturday in the course of a tour of western lines, being on their way east after visiting the coast.

Alberta Business College opened the session here on Tuesday of this week with a record attendance of 1490 students.

Six hundred deputy returning officers and clerks will be required to man the polls when the provincial by-election in Edmonton is held on September 22.

J. C. Macdonald has been elected president of the new veterans' branch of the Canadian Legion in Edmonton. S. Patterson is first vice-president; W. Dunnett, second vice-president, and D.
