CLOSE-UP OF THE VICTIM—ITALIAN TANKER

The cameraman in this attacking American B-25 Mitchell bomber, got a closeup view of the victim—an Italian tanker—as his plane dove to within 200 feet before letting go with the bombs which helped send it to the bottom of the Mediterranean. A flight of the Mitchell bombers, escorted by Lighting P-38's sighted the tanker and pair of escorting destroyers while on shipping shoot-up tour over the straits of Sicily. The tanker was hit, and left blazing fiercely after explosions aboard—a major victory in the battle of the supply lines.

NEW DESTROYER ESCORT LAUNCHED

This new fighting ship is the U.S. navy's answer to Axis submarines. Designated as a destroyer escort, the new class warship is smaller than a destroyer, but fast, heavily-armed and especially designed for convoy work. Scores of these sturdy ships are being built and launched in American shipyards, such as this one at Orange, Texas. Similar ships called frigates, are being built in Canada.

Becoming Nonchalant . . .

Prince Rupert takes its war alarms quite nonchalantly now as indicated by the attitude struck by most of the people on Tuesday afternoon during the precautionary blackout period. They took it quite as a matter of factthe men carried on with their work, the women continued their shopping and the children might as well have remained in school as being dismissed to play about. Certainly no one seemed to worry much although it should' be general knowledge that alerts are no longer called in this area now unless there is some definitely good reason for them—this time it was unidentified surface craft in the vicinity.

Of course, we would not advise any one to get overly excited of panicky. Just the same we should not be too complacent about it. One of these times it might be the real thing and we might wonder if we would be prepared if it were. Because nothing has happened so far is no reason to believe that there is still not a definite possibility—a possibility against which we should all do something to guard.

Prescription for Peace . . .

A local service club was given a suggestion yesterday by a visiting international official as to the real prescription for peace—the development of true friendship among men and the spirit of human service. We hear about monetary reform, economic changes, social security and other panaceas for the salvation of the world. None of them are complete and could stand alone unless there is the spirit and the goodwill behind them-the desire to be friendly and to serve unselfishly—the Golden Rule, if you like. Unfortunately, our human nature is such that it makes these things difficult to obtain. Peace and goodwill cannot be legislated or machinated. They are developments of a spiritual rather than a material na-l ture. They must needs be.

Use of Manpower . . .

As we see it the efficient and proper use of manpower will yet be the most important factor in winning this war. SAV-MORS In this regard our enemy has been able to show us the way thus far. We shall win but we could be winning faster CHAMPS were our manpower better marshalled. There might have to be compulsion or even regimentation. We may have to Defeated Peoples Store Last Night fight fire with fire but we should not forget that the idea is to put the fire out. International State

Editor Daily News:

Please permit me to extend congratulations to E. T. Kenney, M. L. A. for Skeena on his wisdom and courage in giving publicity to his plan for an international state with Prince Rupert as the principa and the skeptical in the words of E. A. Guest, that:

Anyone who has thoughtfully ead the terms of the appointment of the Canadian-American Planning Commission, together with uch information as to the terms of he Atlantic Charter as has appeared in the press, must have ome to the conclusion that the creation of an international state, such as has been suggested by Mr Kenney, is in the minds of the world's leading statesmen as a corollary to world peace.

The territory outlined in the purview of the commission's charter offers nearly all of the resources that will be required by the industries of the world in the rehabilation period and after. With a connecting link of railway from Hazelton to Dawson City, as charted and planned by Sir Wilfrid Laurier thirty years or more ago, the transportation problems of the territory would be well cared for. The necessary facilities and outlet for ransportation to the markets of the world are well provided a Prince Rupert. It now requires only the will to do and of course, the suppression of opportunism on the cart of selfish interests.

Outstanding Event

Outstanding event in connection vith the visit of Mr. Kagy was a linner dance held last night in the Tagles' Hall. The Gyros put on this party in spite of the inability to secure a restaurant which would undertake the catering by providing the dinner themselves, doing the preparing, cooking and serving entirely themselves. The result was one of the finest meals the club has had and it was a great treat for the members and their lady friends who turned out to the number of upwards of fifty persons.

The menu consisted of celery, olives, crab cocktails, the fresh ingredients of which were caught by the members at Dundas Point, turkey, mashed potatoes, green peas, rolls, apple and lemon pie, cheese and coffee.
