Impact of War Upon Prince Rupert; City Is Transformed

Written for Canadian Press by G. A. Hunter)
The outbreak of World War II in September, 1939, and Prince Rupert a tranquil little town of six thousand people deriving its support from a seasonal fishing industry with further justification for its existence as being the terminus of a branch railway and the distributing and administrative centre of a largely undeveloped district.

Prince Rupert was still a sleepy town of some day being a centre of commercial importance in the Pacific arena. Fortification of the port had commenced in a leisurely sort of way, and the start of the war in Germany and feverish activity started to get the large Canadian National Railways and shipyard into operation and ocean-going freighters help make up the deficit caused by the u-boat sinkings. There was nervousness in regard to Japan and troops began to be sent to Prince Rupert in a big way rather than an active emergency. Prince Rupert's population began to swell but so gradually.

That frosty December 7, 1941, and Harbor and Prince Rupert immediately began to feel the impact of war and consequences of war. Since then the city has been virtually transformed until now, what with

British and Canadian Troops Are Spearhead Of Proper 2nd Front

Is Missing On Overseas Service

Sergeant Wireless Air Gunner Jack Hamer of Vancouver, nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Scott of this city, is reported missing on operations overseas with the Royal Canadian Air Force. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hamer of Vancouver and his sister, Miss Doreen Hamer, is at present visiting in Vancouver. Sergeant Hamer is twenty-one years of age and has been overseas for about a year.

British and Canadian troops of the Eighth Army were among Allied forces under command of General Dwight Eisenhower which landed in southern Italy at 4:30 this morning Algiers Time (7:30 p.m. Thursday Pacific Daylight Time) and are, according to latest advices, continuing their advance in heavy fighting. The move can be on the fourth anniversary of British declaration of war on Germany.

Under heavy fire of the Eighth Army's field guns from the Messina shore and with the further support of fire from naval units and air cover from British and Canadian planes, the invasion started at a point directly across from Messina where the strait to the mainland is only two miles wide.

General Bernard Montgomery's Eighth Army, including units of the Canadian First Division, spearheaded the invasion which followed days of heavy aerial pounding of railway lines and communications in southern Italy.

It is the first time since the spring of 1940 that Allied forces have been in action, except for commando raids, on the mainland of Europe.

It has been suggested that the Axis may withdraw from southern Italy and make the main stand north of the Po River where there are estimated to be 350,000 to 400,000 German forces.

Allied Headquarters in North Africa announced today that the British Eighth Army, including Canadians, had invaded the European continent today, striking into southern Italy from Sicily, first reports indicating that they had succeeded in establishing a series of beachheads.

"Allied forces, under command of General Eisenhower, have continued their advance," said an Allied communique. "British Canadian troops of the Eighth Army, supported by Allied sea and air power, attacked across the Strait of Messina early today and landed on the mainland of Italy.

The initial attack was, apparently, struck in the vicinity of Reggio Calabria, bomb-battered ferry terminus.

Dispatches said that an armada of many hundreds of troop-jammed ships and barges made up the attacking force. As they sped across the narrow Messina Straits, Allied long-range guns on the Sicilian coast laid down a terrific barrage on Axis defences. Warships bombarded the beaches, blowing up barbed wire entanglements and machine-gun posts and a great swarm of aircraft formed a protective cover overhead.

As the assault developed Allied bombers smashed at German lines of reinforcements by bombing bridges in the Brenner Pass which links Italy with Germany.

German broadcasts indicated today that Allied forces landing on the Italian mainland had occupied both Scilla and Reggio Calabria. Both are on the Italian west coast directly opposite Messina.

Italian headquarters said that the Allies had begun operations against the Calabrian coast on the toe of the Italian boot "on a vast scale."

There was no Axis claim of any invasion spearhead having been thrown back after first landings which came at 4:30 a.m.

From Services To Civil Life Is Initial Care

By FRANK FLAHERTY (Canadian Press Staff Writer)

OTTAWA, Sept. 3 (CP)—Plans for the re-establishment of members of the armed forces in civilian life are further advanced than any other phase of post-war planning. They are actually in operation for the benefit of those discharged from time to time as the war proceeds and are subject to change in the light of experience.

The arrangements in operation include a clothing allowance, a rehabilitation grant, transportation from place of discharge, provision for continued education and vocational training. Not yet in operation but on the statute books is a Veterans' Land Act under which financial assistance will be given to soldiers about to settle on farms or small land holdings.

The aim of all re-establishment plans is to see that, so far as possible, a man or woman is not worse off for having served his country in the armed forces.

Disabilities Treatment
For those who return with wounds and disabilities there is provision for treatment so long as there is a possibility of improving their condition before discharge and up to one year after discharge. This treatment (Continued on Page Four)

Paris Is Target of Heavy Allied Air Attack Today

LONDON, Sept. 3 (CP)—Great fleets of United States bombers laid down a strong early morning bomb barrage on northern France today, it is announced. The target was not immediately identified but a Rome broadcast said that Paris had been bombed and that there was heavy damage and casualties. Daylight attacks followed night blows by the Royal Air Force and the Royal Canadian Air Force against Axis airfields and other targets in northern France and the Low Countries.

OUR YEARS OF WAR

Today, September 3, fourth anniversary of the beginning of the Second World War, marks not only a new and more content phase in the struggle for the principles of right and human decency, but brings to mind the events of four years ago, still fresh in mind, and somewhat dimmed by the confusion of years of conflict. Through the "phoney" of the first year or the evacuation of Dunkirk, the great blitz, Japanese aggression in the Far East, and the drawdown submarine warfare, the confidence of King and his Empire has been fully justified. The Quebec conference of mighty events recorded as late as today, have passed from the hands of a relentless enemy determined on total war, to the United Nations, with the beginning of the light on the horizon.

On the fourth anniversary of the declaration of war, Canadians look forward soberly confident within the British Commonwealth of Nations and the ultimate triumph of principles they hold sacred than life or material welfare.

MOSCOW, Sept. 3 (CP) — Striking more than halfway along the comeback trail from Stalingrad to the Polish frontier, five Soviet armies dealt staggering new blows today to the Germans and counted a two-day bag of more than 550 villages recaptured and 16,000 Nazis killed: Red Army headquarters announced these latest gains:
1. A six-mile smash into the defence perimeter of Smolensk, Nazi keystone citadel 230 miles west of Moscow.
2. Capture of Budenovka, only 20 miles north of the long-held German stronghold at Mariupol by Soviet columns driving westward along the Sea of Azov.
3. Capture of Kirovets, 25 miles north of the key rail hub of Konotop, thus putting the Red Army within 150 miles of the Ukraine capital at Kiev. Yampol, 32 miles northeast of Kirovets, also fell to the advancing Soviets.
Five Russian armies, plunging westward, cut the Bryansk-Kiev railway 150 miles from Kiev, smashed German reinforcements in a six-mile gain on Smolensk and rolled up Axis lines in a 45 mile spurt in the Donets Basin, it was announced here Thursday night. The swiftness of the Russian advance indicated that the Germans were engaged in large scale retreat toward the Dnieper River.

Invasion of Italy . . .

Dramatically timed on the fourth anniversary of the declaration of war by Great Britain on Germany, the Allied landing on Italy proper is a development of great moment in the conflict. It is not exactly sensational or surprising, however, but may be accepted as a continuation of systematic Allied operations which must have as their final objective the heart and seat of Axis power. Possibly it is the most important phase so far of the Allied offensive in global warfare.

Certainly all indications and all activities of late, including the recent aerial pounding of Italy's communication lines, pointed to the new move which came today.

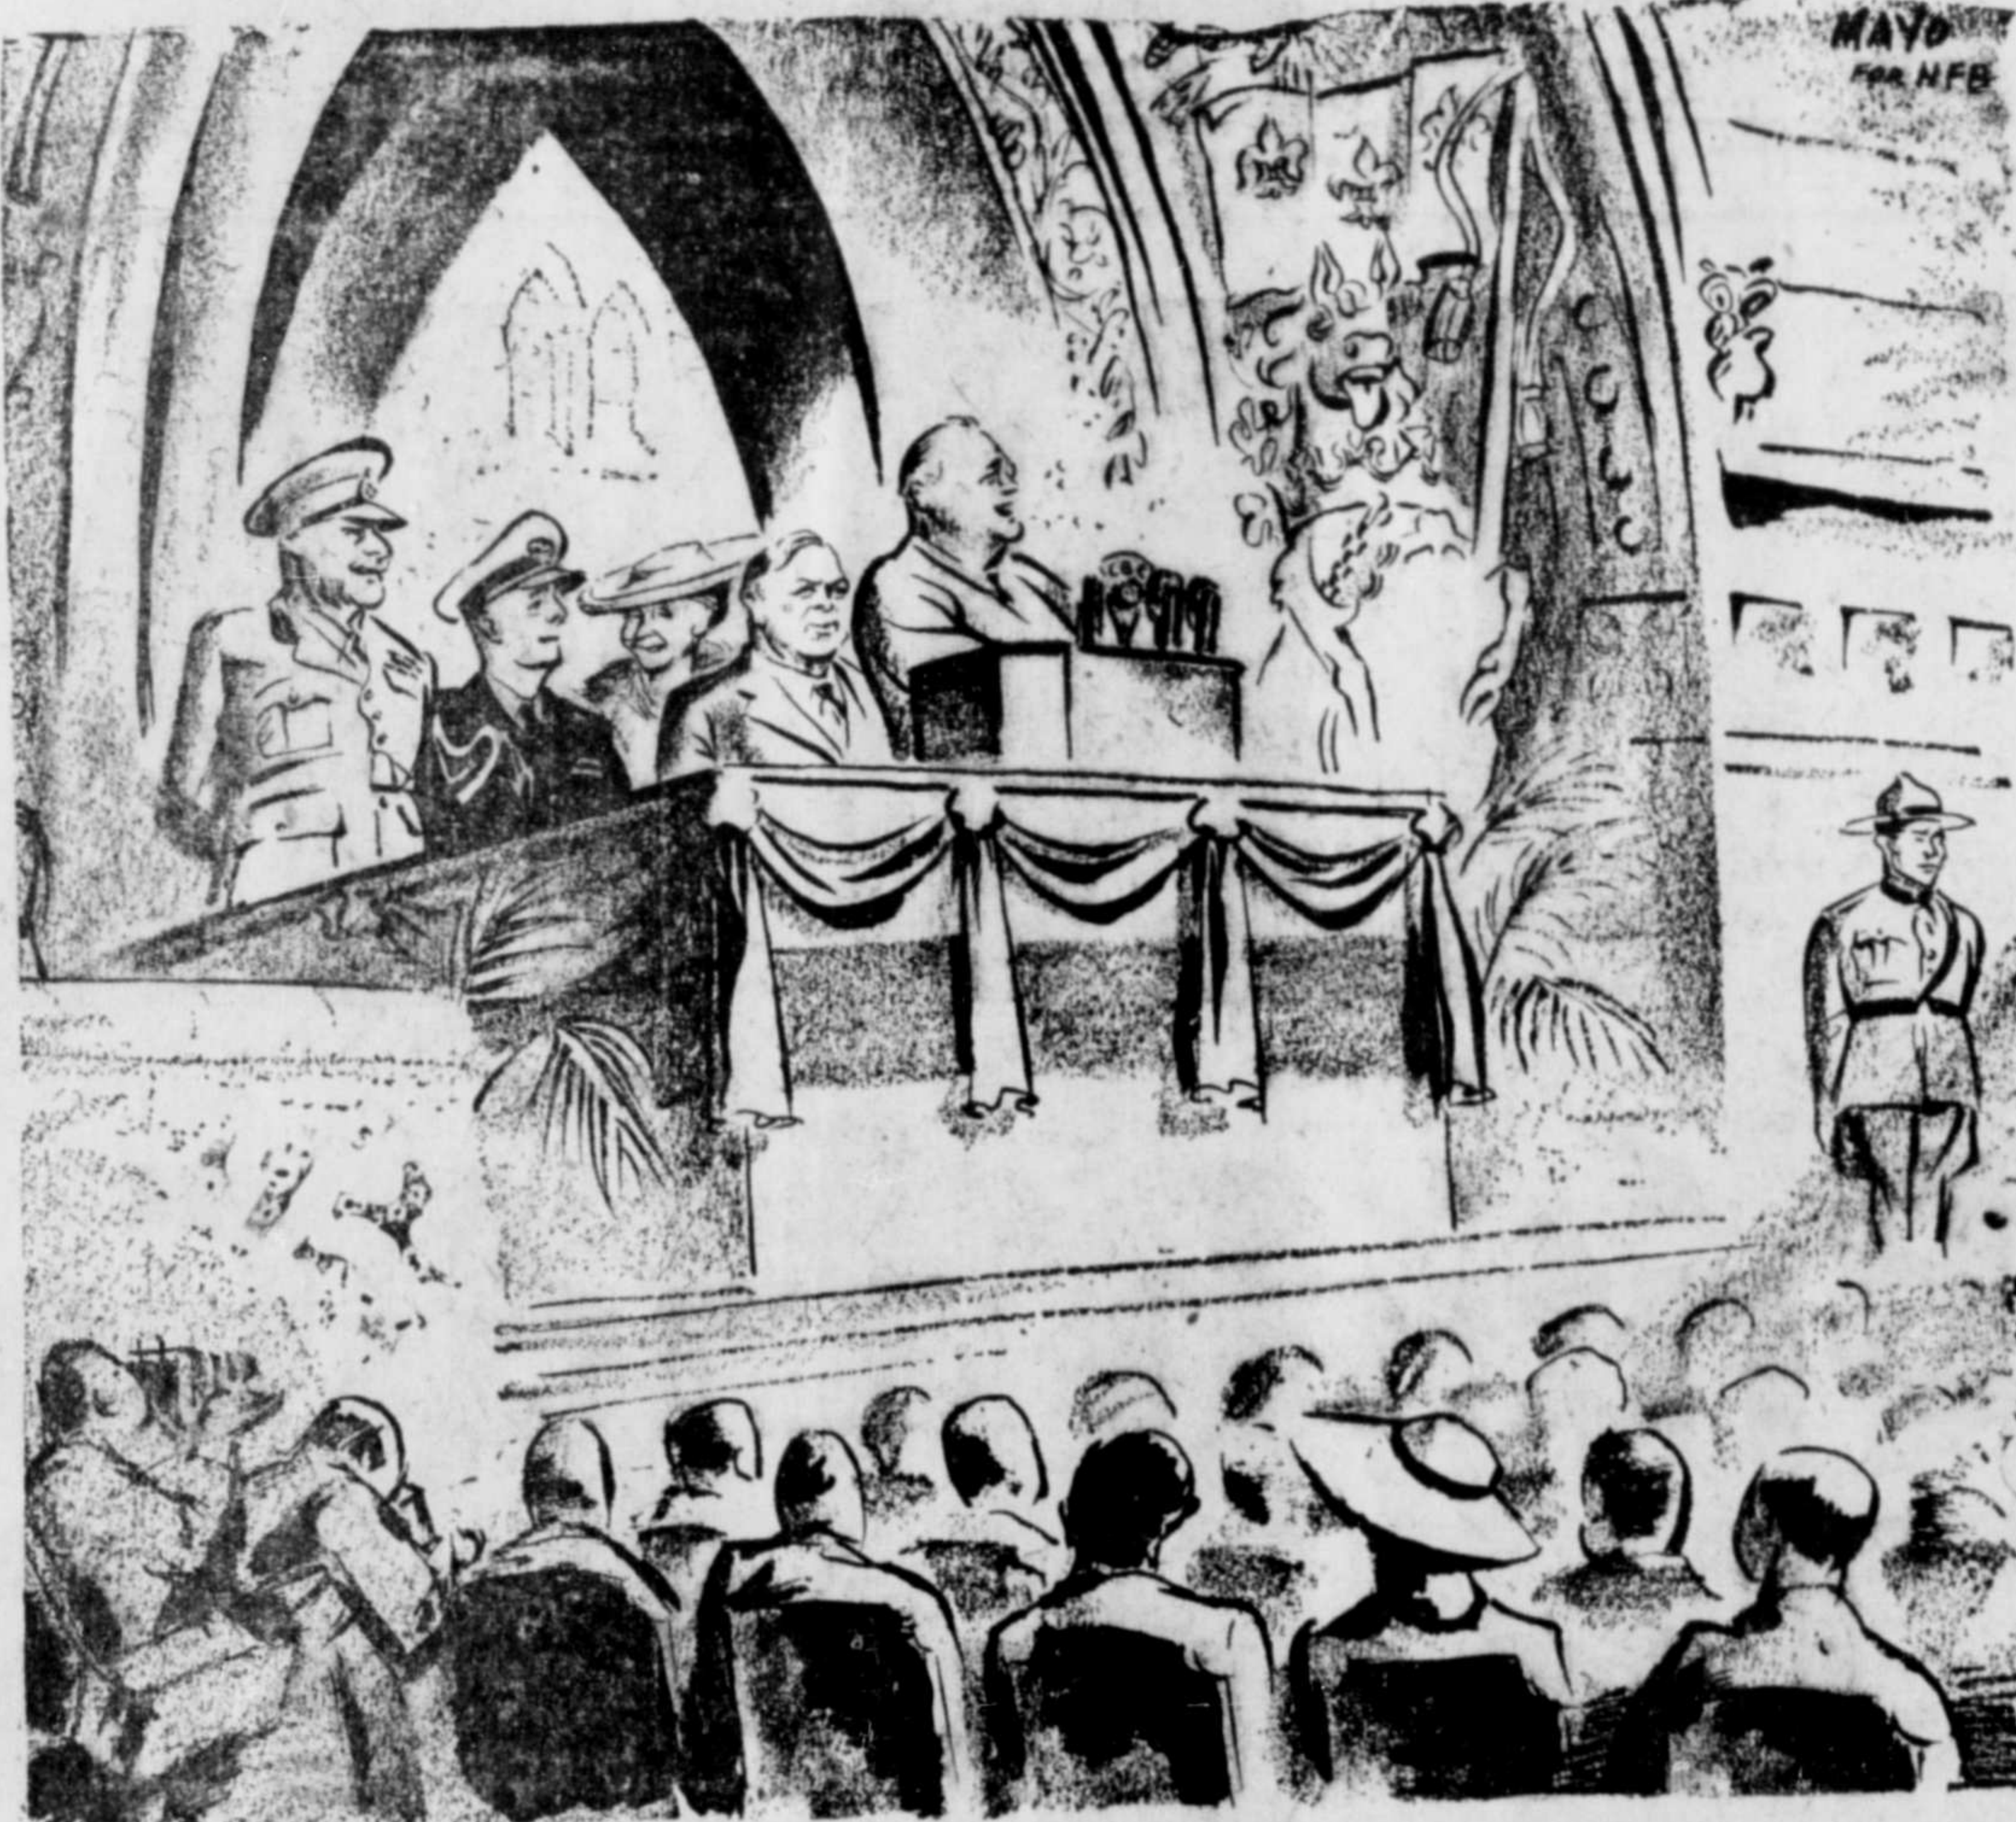

The second front has been opened in real earnest now. The war is increasing in scope and intensity. The tempo is quickening. We are getting the action which we so long have anticipated, yes hoped for because it must be faced some time.

Canadians are in the thick of it now and we must be prepared to take the bad news with the good.

Central and Southern Italy will probably be made the base for an invasion of the Balkans within the near future. In such a case supplementary invasions of other European areas, particularly Northern Europe, Northern France or Denmark, should be expected.

Likely the Badoglio government will fall quickly after troops are landed and that Badoglio will be replaced by a less illustrious military man, who will accept the terms of unconditional surrender. Complete disintegration of the old administration in most parts of Italy is likely, and our troops may for the first time enter areas where the native population has already freed itself from the Fascist overlords and taken over the local government.

In a military sense the German armies stationed in north Italy can establish a strong defence along the Po River, although the supply lines would be tortuous and vulnerable. More than military considerations, however, may move the German generals upon whom the task of defending Northern Italy would fall. Even German troops will be demoralized by the anti-Nazi, anti-Fascist, anti-war sympathies of the Italian population. Italian workers revolting under internationalist Socialist banners do not constitute a movement calculated to revive the fighting spirit of a war-weary army dependent on a war-weary population. German generals can probably see already that enforcement of ruthless discipline against an actively recalcitrant Italian population would be necessary, and that such retribution against revolutionary Italian workers would merely fan the flame.

Louise Brough, the blonde California bombshell who is the favorite of many to win the current women's national tennis championship at Forest Hills, thinks that girls are pretty poor tennis players considering the time and effort they devote to the game. Miss Brough doesn't think much of girls as tennis players and she is candid enough to say so. She includes herself in this criticism, admitting that she can beat a fair, second-flight man once in fifty times.

"Considering the time and effort they put into the game, most girls are pretty awful," is the unvarnished manner in which Louise expressed her views.

Miss Brough turned to tennis as an escape from practicing the piano after her family moved from Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, to Beverly Hills, Cal., six years ago. After she had been soundly and repeatedly trounced at tennis by her girl companions Louise decided to become more skilled at the game she then despised so that she could "retaliate some day by beating those girls in love sets."

So it wasn't long before Louise was developing her now renowned aggressive game, of which power is the keynote, under the tutelage of Dick Skeen, professional at the Beverly Hills club, who is regarded as the best women's coach in the business. Within a year Louise had started sealing the tennis heights which, once she reaches, she intends to retain for a while.

views. "I can understand why men sarcastically call them fugitives from a kitchen stove. The trouble is that they're too lady-like. They're so concerned about looking pretty and making every move a picture that they forget to sock the ball.

There's so much room for improvement in every girl player I've ever seen that I don't feel flattered when I'm compared to anyone," says the 20-year old Louise who explains that "over-confidence rather than stage fright caused her to lose her touch just when victory was within reach and lose the national championship to Miss Pauline Betz last year at Forest Hills.

"As soon as I took the lead in the second set, I talked myself into being too tired for every shot. I just lay back and expected to get the breaks. It won't happen again."

Prince Rupert's position is one of utmost importance today on the home front but a thousand of her man and row of her women have also enlisted in the armed forces and are serving far afield on land, at sea and in the air. At least two of her citizens have won decorations for their war service.

Nursing Sister Edith Kerin Mutrit, now in the Mediterranean area, has won the Royal Red Cross for service with the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps. Skipper James Thomas has been honored by the King with the conferring of the Order of the British Empire for his service with the Fisherman's Reserve on the British Columbia coast.

The war has also brought sadness for the people of Prince Rupert. Some of her finest young men have made the supreme sacrifice while on service with the Royal Canadian Air Force—others with Royal Canadian Navy.

Today finds every employable man and woman in Prince Rupert pressed into service in the war effort. There is a labor drought in line with the shortage of goods and services.

New Union Formed Here

A meeting of the Prince Rupert Industrial Union of the Canadian Congress of Labor was held in the Eagles' Hall on Wednesday. Many members of other unions attended and Harry Harrison, president of the Boilermakers' Union, opened the meeting with a very interesting talk. The majority of the Co-operative staff were present and voted unanimously to form a union after hearing a talk by Mr. Fourie on behalf of the committee previously formed. The election of the officers then took place, resulting as follows: President, E. Fourie. Vice-President, W. M. Smith. Secretary, Mrs. M. Hitchens. Executive members—H. Mendes and C. Green. The meeting was to embrace all employees of the waterfront. The Misses Creak played Hawaiian music and refreshments were served. Mrs. C. H. Sawle of New Hazelton arrived in the city on last night's train from the interior to spend until tomorrow night visiting in town.

Fourth of a series by AP foreign correspondents on their biggest moments in covering the war). By HENRY C. CASSIDY MOSCOW—A patient old Russian couple who have been Moscow neighbors of mine gave me one of my greatest thrills of this war by putting their bombed house together again and moving back home. The story goes back to the night of July 21, 1941, when the Germans first raided Moscow. It was a night of horror during which incendiaries rained down. Our neighborhood was ringed with smoke and flames. During the night an incendiary made a dead-center hit on the ceiling of the bedroom in my apartment, but the roof-watcher for the five-story building flung the bomb into the yard where it flared up and hissed out harmlessly. While inspecting the damage I saw my neighbors' little house blazing furiously. I ran to help them, but they already had pulled out what possessions they could save. Firemen already were there, pumping water into the house while planes-droned overhead, bombs screamed and shell bursts in mid-air. For a year my neighbors kept coming back, putting around their house, bringing what materials they could find to repair the burned roof. Finally, when the Nazi planes could come no more, my neighbors finished patching their roof, peacefully resumed their existence. I was more frightened when bombs fell around me in Spain. I felt sadder at the sight of the fall of Paris. I was happier as I watched the Red Army chase the Nazis back from Moscow. But this simple little incident, the determination of this old couple to go back and live as they had lived before the bombs fell—that gave me a combination of all those emotions. Some 2,071 British children have lost both parents in this war. Of them 511 belonged to members of the Services, 288 to the Mercantile Marine personnel and 1,272 to civilians.
