SHORT OF TEACHERS

Six Have Already Resigned and More Resignations Expected

That a serious situation may develop in the matter of teachers for the Prince Rupert schools for the coming term is a possibility, according to Mrs. J. A. Rutherford, secretary of the school board.

The six who have already resigned are all of the High School staff. They are Miss N. Ramsay and Miss J. Alken, who have been teaching general subjects, Miss E. Springer, who has been teaching physical education, Miss E. Young and Miss A. Snyder, home economics, and R. G. Thistlewaite.

While there is variation in the official reasons for leaving, Mrs. Rutherford thinks that many of the present staff might have stayed on if they had been able to obtain suitable living accommodation.

A similar condition remains in the hiring of new teachers, Mrs. Rutherford says. There has been no shortage of applications for teaching posts here but accompanying almost every application has been a question regarding living accommodation.

Harry G. Perry Takes Over Pullen Interest In Prince Rupert Daily News

Hon. H. G. Perry, publisher of the Prince George Citizen, and also minister of education for British Columbia, has acquired the controlling interest in the Prince Rupert Daily News from the estate of the late Henry F. Pullen.

Mr. Perry has for thirty-two years been identified prominently with business and public affairs of Northern and Central British Columbia. In acquiring the Daily News, he hopes, in co-ordination with his Prince George property, not only to build up a successful business enterprise but to further promote the joint interests of the two cities and the whole vast district of the centre and north of the province which lies adjacent thereto.

Mr. Perry envisions a great future for the north after the war—"which is going to end some day, even though it may be one, two or more years"—and he sees Prince Rupert and Prince George as the bases of a great triangle having its apex extending in the great and potential hinterland of the north.

"One of these mornings we will wake up and find the highway between Prince Rupert and Prince George completed," he says "and this will bring about a complete change in the relations of all communities from the coast to the interior."

As for the Peace River Highway, Mr. Perry does not see that it makes much difference which way it goes. Prince Rupert and Prince George will always be prominently in the picture and all places will benefit.

Under the new control of ownership of the Daily News, there will be no change of policy or management, it is announced. The negotiations between Mr. Perry and the Pullen estate were not unknown to the management of this paper which welcomes the entry of Mr. Perry into the picture.

It has also been well known to the printing and publishing trade that the Daily News has been for sale.

With Mr. Perry as president of the company, G. A. Hunter, personally interested in the paper, will continue as managing editor and no changes in the staff personnel are contemplated.

Hon. H. G. Perry, minister of education, and Dr. S. J. Willis, superintendent of education, are visitors in the city today in the course of a northern tour.

CONSUMERS HAVE DUTY

Should Play Their Part in Adjusting Themselves to War-time Conditions, Prices Board Official Says

There are definite responsibilities for the consumers to cooperate understandingly with the retailers and manufacturers in carrying on under wartime restrictions in connection with the handling and distribution of goods.

With price control well established with the aim of obviating inflation, equitable distribution was now a more pressing problem for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Retailer's Dilemma

The retailer, faced today with less quantity and variety of goods, would find it necessary to cut his expenses by such means as shortening hours of business, curtailing credit and delivery and cutting lighting.

Mr. Syer declared that the retailer was really doing a grand job under very trying conditions and he was entitled to the support and sympathy of the consumers.

The prime objective of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board Mr. Syer said, was to do everything possible to promote the most effective pursuit of the war.

ACTIVITIES OF Y.M.C.A. AND Y.W.C.A.

By DOROTHY GARBUTT
The Hostess

Just six months until Christmas, folks! Got your Christmas shopping started? Neither have I.

The Service Wives Club met Thursday afternoon in the ladies lounge at the Y. There were eleven ladies and nine children present. The ladies finished the tie backs for the curtains they made recently. It was decided not to hold the next meeting scheduled for Dominion Day but to carry on the following week. The raffle was donated by Mrs. Moore and won by Mrs. Girardi. Lunch was served by Mrs. Gay and Mrs. Dewar. As Mrs. Hood is leaving Mrs. Valen is taking over her duties protem.

Junior hostess Phyllis Hamblin left last night to enlist with the Canadian Women's Army Corps. We'll miss having her around the Y but we're proud to have her joining up and hope to see her home on furlough in due time. I'm sure she'll find the life interesting indeed.

Business in Wartime . . .

Local retailers who turned out in substantial numbers Wednesday to hear R. M. Syer, a pleasing young business executive from Hamilton, Ontario, presently attached to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, management service division, discuss some of the perplexing problems confronting the retail trades due to extraordinary conditions brought about by the exigencies of war, probably formed a more favorable impression of the same Wartime Prices and Trade Board and the functions it is endeavouring to carry on. It was interesting to hear Mr. Syer declare that the function of giving service to business people and the consuming public had come to be of even more importance than the task of insuring the enforcement of the regulations set up to check inflation. Mr. Syer's talk was understanding and understandable and withal must have proven helpful to all who heard it. To those who did not hear it we would commend a reading of the report which we presented in the Daily News yesterday.

From our standpoint as a newspaper we cannot help but stress Mr. Syer's comment regarding advertising, the elimination of which he suggested would be "false" economy. "Keep your name before the public even if you have nothing to sell," Mr. Syer counselled. It was an interesting parallel which the speaker drew of advertising being to business like an engine was to the train—cut off the engine and the train gradually stop. We often have counselled along these lines ourselves. It is gratifying to have an avowed advocate of simplification and economy in wartime business propound the same theory. It is but natural that we in the advertising business should be tempted to draw special attention to the fact.

Intolerable Action . . .

The action of the mine workers is "intolerable," declares President Roosevelt in commenting upon the recurring strike in the collieries of the United States. This is sufficient and simple commentary on that tie-up. Persisted in, the only answer to such tie-ups would be drastic government action with results to the parties concerned which might not be nearly as favorable as they now enjoy. To precipitate strikes in the essential war industries or in any line of useful endeavour these days involves a serious responsibility and such tie-ups, to be justifiable, must have basis in the most extreme of provocation.

When the Bell Rings

When the crash dive signal is given aboard a submarine, every piece of machinery is expected to give perfect co-ordination. When the fire alarm rings at the station, immediate response is expected from the multi-horsepower motors for a quick get-away. So, also, when trolling, you expect your engine to give smooth dependable operation at all times, assuring that when the bell rings, your sole attention can be given to the work in hand.

This efficient engine performance is dependent on good lubrication—the oil which keeps movable parts running smoothly—a guardian against wear. In the panel at right is listed many time-tested Marine Products. Tie up at any of the Standard Marine Stations shown below and discuss your problems with the operator—he knows.

SPEAKS FOR C.W.A.C. HERE

Sympathetic Understanding on Part of Public Asked—Are Doing Good Job

Speaking before the Prince Rupert Gyro Club at luncheon Wednesday, Capt. Nancy K. Hewett, pleasing young commanding officer of Canadian Women's Army Corps at Prince Rupert, appealed to the civilians of Prince Rupert to back up her girls and do what they could to help them along. The girls in uniform would naturally be conspicuous for a time. Even she herself felt self-conscious on occasion.

Capt. Hewett said that it was not an easy job for the girls of the C.W.A.C. who came to Prince Rupert which, incidentally, was the first defence area in Canada in which they had been placed. Ordinary girls, from ordinary Canadian homes — somebody's sister, somebody's daughter — they were doing a splendid work in taking over duties which released men for more active service and should receive every support with sympathetic understanding.

The speaker told how C.W.A. had first been organized in 1941 by Matron in Chief Elizabeth Smillie. They were actually an integral part of the Canadian Army and not an auxiliary service. Women between 18 and 50 of Category C and upward and without dependents were eligible. While there was a basic training course which included physical training, gas, military law, administration, etc., the army work of the girls was largely specialized to that for which each one was best fitted. The plan was as far as possible to keep the girls in the districts to which they belonged although naturally this could not be done in all cases.

Capt. Hewett's talk was of much interest to the Gyros and guests and suitable acknowledgment was voiced by President W. J. Scott who was in the chair. Other guests included Lieut. Bayfield, second in command of the C.W.A.C.'s here, William Perry of Vancouver, Ralph K. Farris and Capt. John Hall.

W. F. Stone reported arrangements complete for the annual Gyro picnic to be held Sunday aboard Dr. R. G. Large's power cruiser Soogwills to picnic Bay. Next week's speaker at the Gyro Club will be George Cameron, Vancouver barrister and Grand Master of the Loyal Orange Lodge for British Columbia, who, incidentally, was Conservative candidate for Skeena in the last federal election.

RED PRESS DESCRIBED

Feature News With Little Advertising—Run by Organizations Rather Than Private Interests

Great daily newspapers of Moscow, circulation of which runs into the million mark, feature news, much of which is handled interpretatively, and there is not much advertising, said Nicholas Zhivaynov, Canadian representative of Taas News Agency with headquarters in Canada, who was a visitor in Prince Rupert yesterday in the course of a tour of western Canada. They run from six to eight pages and are operated by organizations rather than as private enterprises. They are not dependent upon advertising revenues and the government sees to it that they do not languish financially. The greatest newspaper of Moscow is Pravda, the organ of the Communist party. There are also Izvestia, the government newspaper; Red Star, the Red Army organ; Trud, which represents the trades unions, and Evening Moscow. Other large cities of the Soviet had similar newspaper set-ups to that of Moscow.

Mr. Zhivaynov, who was in journalistic work before the war, has been for ten months in Canada as Taas representative. For two and a half years before that he was with Taas bureau in New York. His work consists of writing generally about Canada with particular reference to the present time to the war effort. The object of the western tour including the visit to Prince Rupert was to get general background rather than to write specific descriptive articles. Mr. Zhivaynov commented upon the obvious and growing importance of Prince Rupert in connection with the war effort. He had been much impressed with many things he had been able to see here and spoke of the co-operation that had been accorded him by the authorities. Mr. Zhivaynov left on train

MILITARY GOVERNMENT

Editor, Daily News:
I am glad that you are getting wise to the possibility of a military government that may be even worse than the present one "by order-in-council." Why pay for a Parliament anyway? Surely enough rubber is left to make at least one small rubber stamp to do their work.

You wonder why people vote C. C. F.? Did it ever occur to you that the people may be so sick of Conservatives and Liberals that they are getting reckless enough to do almost anything? It would be well to find out what the people are sore about and do something about it instead of trying to kid the people and yourself too long. You remember what happened to Bennett!

You can fool all the people part of the time, part of them all the time but not all of them all the time.

Sady yours,
ONE OF THE GUINEA PIGS.

NORWAY IS FEATURED

Resistance of Fishing Village to Nazi Invasion is Theme of Picture

A little Norwegian town's unyielding defiance of Nazi domination is the general theme of "Edge of Darkness," starring Errol Flynn and Ann Sheridan, which is the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre this Friday and Saturday.

The Nazi invader learns in the Norwegian fishing village that the love of peace and freedom is not weakness but strength. The story makes use of the traditionally stolid Norwegian temperament as a foil for the Nazi commandant, whipping him into a mounting frenzy of frustration as he learns that he cannot subjugate these simple people just as he wishes. Added brutalities only lead to an explosion point in which the commandant and every Nazi in the village are destroyed. Following the destruction of the garrison, the surviving townspeople take to the hills to carry on guerrilla warfare until the invaders are driven from Norway.

The story is a parallel of just what might happen should this part of the country be invaded by the Japanese.

Others in the cast include John Beale, Monte Blue, Dorothy Tree and some Broadway favorites who are seldom seen on the screen.
