BOMBS ON SCOTLAND

First Raid in Weeks is Made by Nazis—Southeast English Town Hit

LONDON, March 25—Nazi raiders last night bombed Scotland for the first time in weeks, incendiaries being dropped on the southeast coast. Scotland had been untroubled by heavy German raids since the spring of 1941 and only once previously this year the target for small scale attack until it felt the sting of German reprisal assaults early today when the enemy bombers flew through severe anti-aircraft fire on the southeast coast and dropped incendiary bombs inland.

In a southeast English town during the day more than a dozen planes came over and twelve persons were known killed with the list rising. There were also a number wounded and some damage done. Homes, business buildings and schools were hit. One school was demolished just after the children had left for shelter.

Large Scale Raids on Shore Installations and Shipping Around New Guinea

Shore installations at Mumbo as well as shipping of the enemy came in for heavy and effective battering with no less than 44 planes taking part in the attack. All Allied planes returned safely to their bases.

Lae on New Guinea was also attacked by the Allied planes and the raids extended to enemy bases on New Britain and the Solomons.

The Allied planes hit a fifteen thousand ton enemy merchant vessel Wednesday, the High Command announced. Two small coastal vessels were also seriously hit.

Padre Durnford, Writing From England, Forecasts High Destiny This Year

Britain Tense and Canadian Soldiers Poised For Hour Of Great Adventure — Describes Air Raid

"We are facing a year charged with high destiny for thousands of us and, as the hour draws near for the great offensive in Europe, there is a corresponding tenseness among us, writes Rev. (Captain) R. C. H. Durnford of Prince Rupert from Britain to Rt. Rev. G. A. Rix, D.D., Bishop of Caledonia. "Most of the lads in my regiment have waited in this country for three years for just this moment. They have not always possessed the grace of patience for so long a delay although at no time have they lacked courage and the fighting spirit. But now all that impatience is changed. There is an air of expectancy and alertness and a certain "straining upon the leash." There is, in fact, an air of movement and big events everywhere about us.

"If the surrounding country can lend inspiration to these momentous affairs we certainly have it here for in the area of our training we are reminded of the days of ancient crisis for Englishmen. My own quarters overlook the glorious ruins of a castle which Caesar's legions built on arrival here. Later it was rebuilt by the men of the Crusades and now it provides shelter for the modern attempt to break our resistance against the enemy. From where I sit I can see the steeples and spires of England's shores where but a hundred or so years ago Napoleon essayed an unsuccessful invasion. The scarred faces of many a field hereabouts tell of locked battles and bloody encounters with armed and saddled forces. In many of the ancient churches in this south country can be read the history of those strenuous past days.

"One feels that, apart from the very thorough defences lining every inch of our coast, there is a yet greater defence to be found in the quality of the people.

Training for Battle

"All day long our boys have been training for one of the fiercest bouts in military history.

"It would be difficult to imagine a more peaceful spot than this in normal times—the white cliffs dropping sheer to the sea, the dazzling white ramparts, the sun and the green undulations of the south downs rolling away to the west. Our lads use these hills from time to time as an ideal terrain for tank and gun exercises.

"The thrush, the blackbird and the skylark are blithely confemulating spring and, for a vastly distant reason, I am doing the same though not so blithely.

"The quiet little town at the foot of the downs has all the appearance of being asleep but, in reality, it is very wide awake. I doubt if any town along these shores has received a greater battering from enemy marauders and now hardly a day goes by without a warning of the approach of the Hun. His most dangerous method is to fly at rooftop height so as to be out of range of heavy anti-aircraft guns. He comes singly, in pairs and occasionally in groups of ten. Bombing and machine-gunning are indiscriminate. Women and children are the worst sufferers although no one is safe.

"The other day I was going back to my quarters and was suddenly startled by machine gun chatter and anti-aircraft gun fire coming from the shore defences. This was followed by the roar of enemy planes from the sea. They dropped some bombs and came in towards our position. I could see our men were diving for shelter and it occurred to me that I should lose no time in doing the same thing. I tried the nearest garden gate. It had a patent fastener and I could make no impression upon it. I saw the black crosses on the planes coming in my direction at an amazingly low level, the vicious spitting of red flames coming from their guns as I leapt over the gate to lie on the lawn. The planes roared over me and I could see the pilots and the bomb racks with their deadly loads—the vast spread of olive and green wings above me. However, they dropped no bombs on us and it turned out afterwards they were on their way to London. When it seemed safe to get up I did so and made my way to the gate and again tried to jump it out, do you think I could? Not by a long shot! It needed the sudden appearance of a bombing plane and machine guns to give me the energy for such an athletic feat.

Civilian Courage

"The civilians here have stood up against this sort of thing for a long time with unsurpassed courage. Their conduct must prove discouraging to the enemy who thought they would be terrified into surrender. What is true of these south folk is true of the whole country. They have faced up to the worst that the enemy has to give and many restrictions their own government has found it necessary to impose upon them. Above all we feel the need of keeping the power of God in these trying times. These are mad days interspersed with inspiring leadership in church and state. God grant we may prove worthy of survival when we have won by force of arms the right to build a free world.

"My chaplaincy duties cover two regiments and one city hospital. I am attached to the Seaforth's but do extra duty with a Royal Canadian Artillery Regiment hereabouts. Soon I will have to undergo training with my boys designed to fit us for actual combat with the enemy in the near future. I do not know how I am going to shape up to this arduous and exacting work. I have no doubt about the men. They are tough as nails and take anything in their stride.

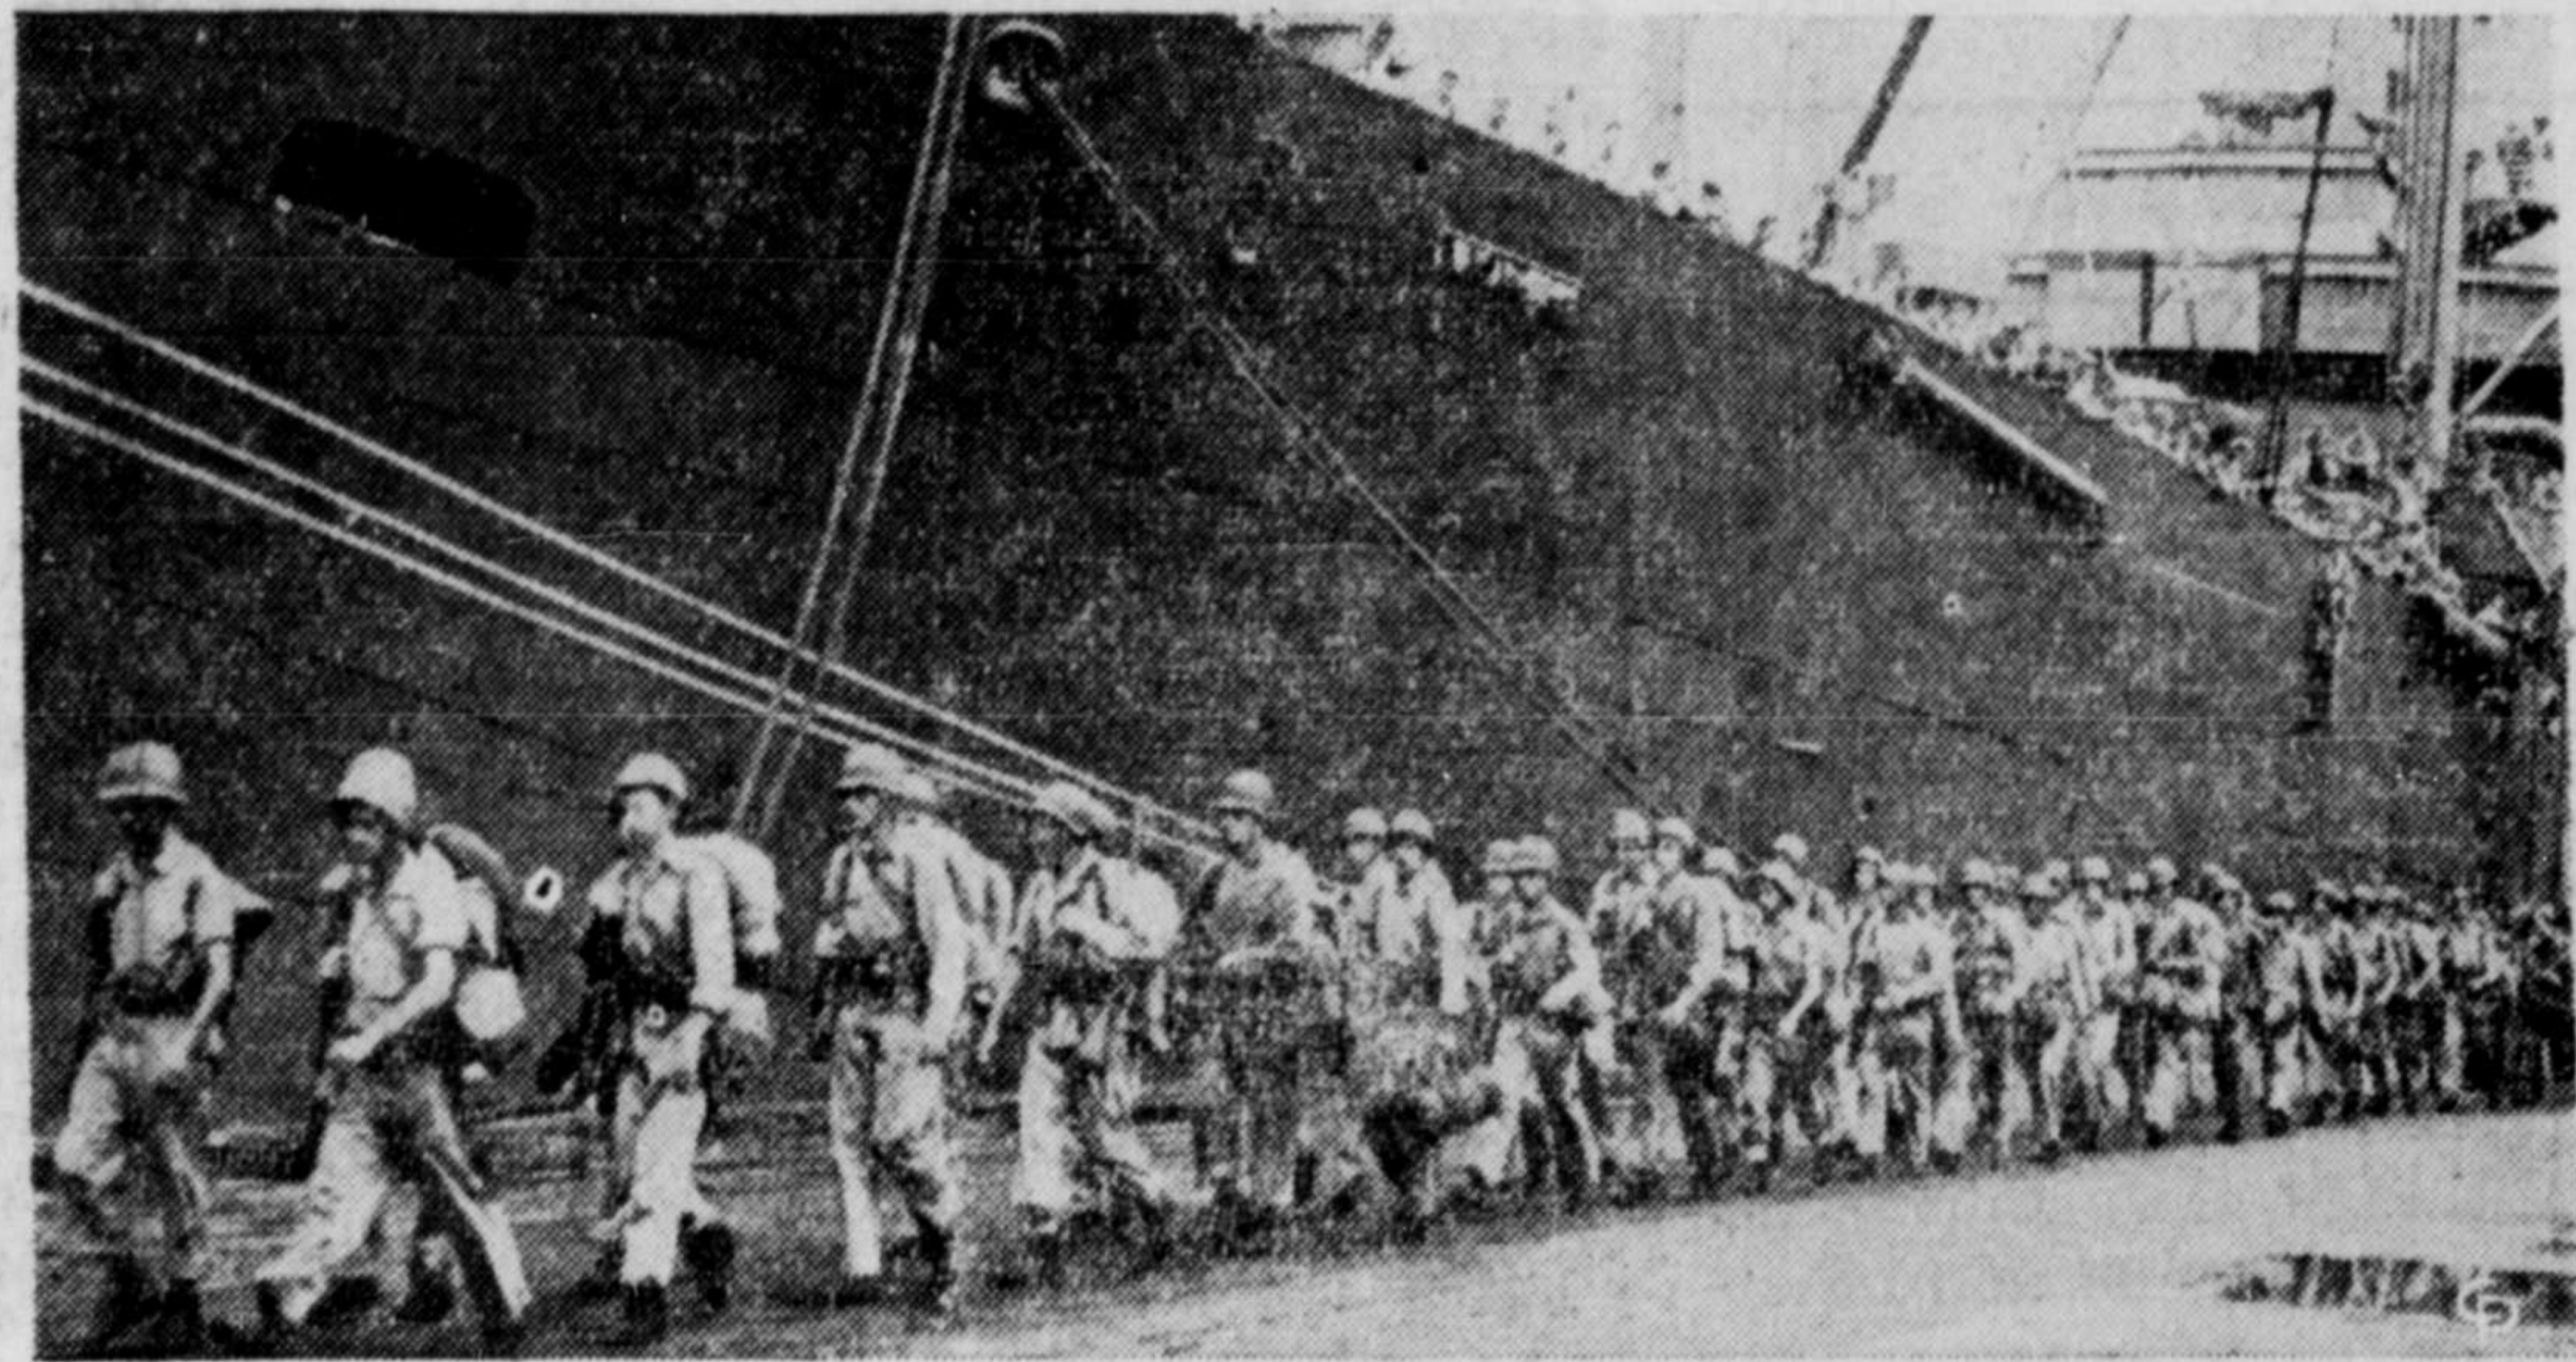

"It is of great satisfaction to me to know that my place on the actual battlefield will be with the medical officer and his advanced dressing station which is only sixty to eighty yards behind the front line. If I can win my right to the title of "padre" there I shall have to thank God for the opportunity. If I can there point men to Christ and help them make their peace with God I shall sing my Nunc Dimittis as gladly as I now sing my Te Deum. In the task before me I rely so much on the prayers of my friends—may they pray that I may cast away everything that hinders a clear and steady witness to His saving grace!"

DAILY EDITION Thursday, March 25, 1943

The Civic Situation . . .

The mayor and aldermen are now immersed in consideration of the civic budget. It did not take them long to find out for themselves that, in spite of the greatly increased activity and population here which had it been under normal circumstances and conditions would have brought a portion of prosperity that we would have been able to handle, there were many things that should be done but which could not because of financial and other considerations. Now they are even looking around to slash, if possible, the requirements which they thought were a minimum.

As we have observed before, it is abundantly evident that, as far as the city itself is concerned, there can be no expansion of works and services, such as some people might have anticipated would follow the return to civic autonomy, but it will be just a case of carry on and protect the city's interests as well as possible under extraordinary conditions. And even carrying on is going to cost us more as a municipality owing to increased overhead and restricted revenues.

The local autonomy which many people thought would be a wonderful thing to have back seems to have brought little more than considerable grief, hard work and responsibility. If the members of the city council themselves ever had any illusions about the matter they are now, of course, dispelled.

In the face of large developments going on under the auspices of the higher authorities, the council, however, should still be able to function usefully in protecting the city's interests. Our civic authorities may also be able on occasion to embrace opportunities that will definitely redound to the benefit of the community, if not now some time in the future when the privilege of local autonomy may be productive of more tangible returns and accomplishments than it appears in the meantime will be possible.

The New Income Tax . . .

The new income tax deduction tables, showing what we will have deducted from our wages after April 1 to help pay for the war, have been delivered. For many of us it will mean substantially greater deductions than we have had so far. Naturally, it is all rather shocking and for the most of us rather distasteful.

However, it is the war and we have got to pay for it whether we like it or not.

The most of people will be more willing and more quietly philosophical in accepting the new personal burden, we believe, if they realize what it is they are really paying for—a victory failure to achieve which would not even leave us the privilege of paying an income tax, much less still retaining a substantial portion of what we earn to handle as we like.

NEWS FOR MIDLANDS

This district of Ontario, like the rest of the province is suffering from a shortage of wood fuel. Dealer stocks have been low for some time and it is likely little will be available in the future. Rural residents may suffer even more than town dwellers because of the small amount of wood cut during the winter now ending. Heavy snowfall and labor shortage have been contributing factors to the shortage.

The town of Cobourg may have an ice shortage during the coming summer due largely to lack of storage facilities. A supply may be available from Oshawa provided a Cobourg distributor can be found.

Peterborough Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church of Canada held its sessions in Cobourg last week with Rev. Horace Kaye of Colborne, moderator, presiding. One of the features of the ecclesiastical gathering was the induction of Rev. E. W. B. MacKay as pastor of Cobourg Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Dr. A. K. McLeod, who had been pastor of Trinity-St. Andrew's Church at Brighton for fifty-seven years, died there recently. He was ninety-three years of age.

Another snowstorm brought more relief to an already winter-tired Ontario. Montreal-Toronto and Ottawa-Toronto trains were hours late and rural roads once more became blocked.

W. T. Sinton, representing Health Magazine, publication of the British Columbia Tuberculosis Association, will leave tomorrow night on his return to Vancouver after having been here for the past week or so on business.

OIL PICTURE IS GRAPHIC
 World Battle for Vital Commodity Depicted in Films—Convention Considered

A large attendance of Gyro Club members with guests in the persons of Staff Sergeant A. Robillard, Gus Gottfred, Harold Park, Capt. George Decker, Len Griffiths and Neil McElroy were in attendance at yesterday's luncheon of the club when the feature was the presentation of a graphic moving picture film entitled "The World Battle for Oil" by C. A. Brind, local manager of the Imperial Oil Co. The pictures dealt principally with the transport of oil under war conditions as well as the development of new fields.

A brief session of the executive followed the luncheon to consider a proposal that the district convention be held at Harrison Hot Springs in April instead of later in the season since that resort is shortly to be closed down. The club was not in favor of so early a convention and suggested alternative arrangements for a later gathering.

FATS AND DRIPPINGS
 Satisfactory Arrangements are Made by Junior Chamber for Collection and Shipping

Satisfactory arrangements have now been made by the Junior Section of the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce with the co-operation of the military authorities for the salvage of rendered fats and drippings from the housewives of Prince Rupert. It is announced by Robert Parker, president of the Chamber. The arrangements to this end have been made after considerable time and effort was expended in devising a satisfactory means of collecting and shipping these materials which are urgently needed in connection with the war effort. Such proceeds as are derived will go to a fund which will be used for the benefit of the armed forces in the way of recreational supplies and entertainment.

Under the plan the retail butcher shops will accept all rendered fats and dripping (not bones or unrendered fats) from the housewives, these fats and dripping to be brought to the butcher shops in wide-mouthed cans, not glass containers. The fats and dripping will be donated by the housewives as the butchers will receive no payment for them.

The local army units, under the supervision of headquarters of Prince Rupert defences, will call at all retail shops every Tuesday morning and collect the fats and drippings. These will be packed and shipped to the packing plants in Edmonton. The collecting and shipping will be under the personal supervision of Regimental Quartermaster Sergeant Moore of Prince Rupert area headquarters.
