BEVIN HITS MOSCOW PROPAGANDA

LONDON (CP)—Foreign Secretary Bevin told the United Nations Security Council today that "Moscow and Communist propaganda" is endangering world peace. He added that this is the "real danger."

Bevin made his statement in blasting back at Russian charges that Britain is imperilling world security by maintaining troops which the Soviet delegate said supported fascists and pro-monarchist elements in Greece.

The British Foreign Secretary demanded a straight "yes or no" verdict from the council on the charge of Soviet delegate Vishinsky. Vishinsky told the Council that the Soviet "insists on quick and unconditional surrender of British troops from Greece."

LONDON (CP) — Russia charged before the United Nations Security Council today that "white terror" exists in Greece, and that British troops there served to support the anti-democratic elements in that country.

A Serious Port Need

If there were coal transfer facilities from railway to ship at Prince Rupert, a full cargo shipment of eight thousand tons of coal could be made through this port just as soon as the coal could be got together. But the fact that there are not the facilities is ruling out the possibility of making the shipment. That is a pretty serious state of affairs for a port which is otherwise so excellently equipped as Prince Rupert for the handling of ocean cargoes. It suggests that no effort should be left unmade towards having the deficiency removed.

The railway company professes to be interested in the development of traffic over this line and through the port of Prince Rupert. Here appears to be an opportunity for it to manifest its good faith by either establishing the required facilities itself or taking steps to see that they are established in some other way. It is one case where the railway company could dispel the growing belief that it is utterly indifferent, if not entirely inimical, for some reason or other, to the development of this part of the country.

Guard Against Inflation

Prime Minister Mackenzie King gives reassurance that the relaxation of price and ceiling controls, which made the basis for important announcements from Ottawa yesterday, are not expected to weaken the essential fabric of Canada's anti-inflation program which was the model of the world during the war and which saw this nation so admirably through the conflict on an even economic keel.

The immediate fear is that a relaxation of the price controls would cause a sky-rocketing of prices and that the lifting of wage restrictions would bring about undue demands for higher wages, the higher prices on the one hand and the higher wages on the other combining to set in motion an upward spiral thereby interrupt the economic balance.

However, the situation seems to be adequately safeguarded with the government reserving the right to exercise its power to restore controls and restrictions if it should appear necessary to do so.

It is also wisdom on the part of the authorities not to release the ceilings on essential commodities and services for the time being.

Control of Labor

It is to be supposed that the provincial governments will not greet with any particular enthusiasm in these restless times the move of the federal government to throw back in their laps jurisdiction over wage rates, hours of work-the elements which kindle industrial disputes. Indeed, it is a very questionable gift. If Ottawa was as wiling to restore to the provinces other prerogatives. it might be more appreciated. Labor controls are the constituents of plenty of legislative and administrative headaches and Ottawa is smart as far as its own interests are concerned in getting rid of them.

As for the removal of some of the restrictions which were imposed in the interests of selective service for war purposes, the relaxation will be welcomed. In many ways, although they might have served a purpose in steadying the manpower of the country in days of crisis, they were a nuisance.

For nearly an hour last week H.M.S. Pollux, an Admiralty experimental radar ship, steamed blindfolded through the mist of the Thames estuary, yet not one of the other ships in the crowded waterway was endangered and a perfect course was kept.

Pollux was testing a British radar apparatus which experts believe to be a forerunner of those which will equip the Britor two and make navigation safe

"The trials," writes Lloyd's correspondent, "admirably demonstrated how simple and reliable the use of radar will be."

An essential for the radar servicing of the Merchant Navy is erated by the officer of the watch without recourse to special highly trained personnel. With the radar unit now being tested, a P.P.I. (plan position indicator) is placed in front of the officer of the watch, either on the bridge or in the chart room. This indicator includes all the controls necessary for operating the set. The number of controls is kept down to the minimum

The indicator records a picture of the whole area surrounding the ship. There are three controls, which enable the set to be ranged over a distance of up to two and a half miles, from zero to seven and from zero to 20 miles. Thus on the broad Atlantic it is possible for a navigator to distinguish objects such as other ships and icebergs up to 20 miles distant. SMOOTH HARBORS GERMAN CHOICE WHEN SEAS RACED ON ATLANTIC

Lieut. W. S. Pugsley Depicts Life in Royal Canadian Navy in "Saints, Devils and Ordinary Seamen"

By ALAN RANDAL

Canadian Press Staff Writer Wild weather at sea never deterred small ships of the Royal Canadian Navy but it was different with the Germans. They were not of such stern stuff and their destroyers preferred the smooth haven of harbor to raging seas. Lieut. William S. Pugsley of Montreal points this up in his book "Saints, Devils and Ordinary Seamen," (Collins) as he tells how the Canadian destroyer Sioux moved north from Scapa Flow with a Royal Navy force hunting the German battleship Tirpitz which refused to do battle.

"The speed made the ship act so only a cowboy could feel at home," writes Pugsley. For him it recalled the chase after the fleeing German battleship Bismarck and the fact that the Bismarck's crew "were very bitter when they heard their own destroyers couldn't come out from Brest to help because it was too rough. They knew the British destroyers were at sea."

SETTLING DOWN AGAIN-By this time you may have settled down to work out your household and cooking schedules around the small supplies of fats available, or you may still find that the shortage pinches. In either case the thing to do is to make the utmost use of fats at hand, every bit of fat that is left over from the roast or settles on top of a pot of soup as well as the commercial fats, butter, lard and shortening.

While the shortage lasts, and the Prices Board tells us it is temporary, it is important not to waste a scrap. The agricul ture department has supplied these instructions for rendering

Put fat in a large pan. Set over a moderate heat and melt slowly, then strain through a fine sieve into a clean pan. To two cups of melted fat, allow one cup of boiling water and 1/8 teaspoon of baking soda. Use a large pan since the mixture is apt to foam up. Cook very slowly until water has evaporated and fat is clear. Skim and strain into container. While cooling, beat occasionally.

Rendered household fats should be stored in a tightlycovered crock, tin container or opaque jar in a cool, dry place away from the light.

Contrary to popular belief, it s never too cold to snow. Subzero temperature, however, seldom holds enough moisture for the snow to fall in flakes. Then the fall is fine and dust-like.

Returning Service Personn'el Records Are Being Sought

The Daily News is anxious to completely record the arrival of all service men and women returning home from the war. Accordingly, it is requested that information be made available to this office regarding the date of arrival home, the service with which the veteran has been identified, in what theatres of war, if wounded, ill, etc. If inconvenient to call at the office, the information may be written or telephoned in. Pictures would be particularly welcome. Street and Postal addresses and telephone numbers are also requested.

SKI TRAILS

(By A. A.)

It is best not to dampen the enthusiasm of prospective skiers but, until the ski club is able to secure accommodation, it not advisable to climb Mt. Hays. It was hoped that one building might be made available until final disposition of the Army camp is known. However, that not possible at present so it necessary for anyone going skiing to spend all day in the open without the welcome break provided by a cup of coffee in a warm shelter. As soon as accom modation of any description i available it will be announced in this column.

In spite of these conditions, nine enthusiasts were out last Sunday to run the fast powder snow that blanketed the slopes. Paul Strom, former Vancouver Ski Club member noted for his downhill and jumping form, was running an impromptu instruction class and had the boys weaving down a packed surface practising plows, stems, christies and an occasional stizmark. Paul says that skiing conditions here are comparable to any that Vancouver has to offer and It is perhaps a shade more difginners' slopes have not yet been picked out and a short Max Schmeling's chances of cross country run is necessary meeting Jimmy Braddock for the to reach the best downhill and world's heavyweight boxing slalom courses.

One of those snow gremlins crossed his skis so he used his head and set a new record for plowing-Dunc McRae had just finished making some extravagant claims for his laminated skis when he took a run and landed in a heap with a split ski. Fortunately, the the first goal was scored against break wasn't too bad and he was able to keep on with his skiing for the rest of the day and can get the ski repaired.

Camera fans were wishing color film was available so that the brilliant effect of the sunset could have been captured. The weather alternated between fog and sunshine all during the afternoon. Art Hardwick and Eileen Winskill had a busy time fanning a fire on top of the snow and it finally produced some hot coffee. There had been delays in the realization of some hopes and aspirations but he could assure his listeners that, as a result his travels, he had come to the conclusion that it would not be long now before the promise of this area would be fulfilled.

The commissioner brought the regrets of the provincial Cana dian Club organization that of late it had not been possible to send as many speakers here as might have been desired. The Prince Rupert Club should not, however, feel that it was being

"Had British Columbia been attacked, they and the British Columbia police would have been the first in action. You would then have appreciated just how stabilizing an influence it would have been to have trained people going around, knowing their business and knowing what to do," the speaker declared.

After concisely reviewing the wartime accomplishments of St. Lake; John Ambulance, Commissioner Parsons delved back into history for 900 years to trace the progress of the organization which had originated at Amalfi in Italy near Naples in an organization of merchants who banded together to found a hospital and form "The Brothers of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem." The order grew and expanded to widespread importance in Europe and its ministrations were active in the days of the Crusaders. Jerusalem. Cyprus. Rhodes, Malta had well known its services-both as military and a hospital order. The fighting knights of the order had, perhaps, played a great part in moulding the future of Europe than might have been realized.
