Up to City Council

N AN EXTENSIVE and exhaustive report on the public works of the municipality, which may well be accepted as the keynote document of reconstruction; long deferred and now becoming critically essential, the city engineer reminds the council that there is no overall plan for reconstruction of sewers, water distribution system and streets and that such an overall plan is a fundamental requirement if the money available is to produce the maximum of lasting results. It is not the first time that the need of such a plan has been mentioned but, so far, although there has been a lot of generalized talk about the depiorable conditions existing and the need of doing something about it, the councils have not got down to business in the matter of planning a definite program of the needs. Now the city engineer throws the matter right in the lap of the 1947 council, pointing out that it will be necessary for him to have technical help in the laying out of the program.

The immediate thing to do, of course, is the laying out of the necessary work and estimating finally how much it will cost. Then there will be the very perplexing problem of how it will be financed which, obviously, will have to be along extraordinary lines.

Everyone in the city knows that something has to be done right soon about the streets, some of which are approaching the state of becoming impassable. We are told by the engineer that the condition of sewers and waterworks are relatively as bad.

The situation is a challenge to the talent, enterprise and ingenuity of the mayor and aldermen. A state of deterioration has been reached now where no further time can be wasted in planning the repairs and, somehow or other, getting something done instead of just playing around.

The new city council is to be wished the best of luck in getting along with a difficult job.

Good Citizen Gone

THE LATE JOHN J. LITTLE, vice-president and general manager of the Northern British Columbia Power Co., whose death we regretfully record today, was a good and useful citizen. That he should have passed away at such a relatively young age makes his demise all the more regrettable.

Daily News: I have just read, in your paper of November 26, the account and experiences of the two men from Alice Arm. Quite an experience but untrue. May I give you the true story? Not as sensational as the one related but, nevertheless, true.

The two men arrived here about 4:30 p.m. Sunday, November 17, seven hours or so after leaving Alice Arm, only hitting a rough sea shortly before getting out of the inter and crossing the Naas. It was only when Hasse was preparing to leave after a few hours stay that he had trouble and was compelled to stay here until the trouble could be located and the boat repaired, which, unfortunately for them, took almost a week.

THEY FIGHT FIRES ON BOARD H.M.C.S. WARRIOR IN THE TROPICS—The two men clad in asbestos suits are members of the Canadian aircraft Warrior's flight deck fire-fighting team. They are fitted to walk right into a blaze, should one occur, during flying operations. A chain is attached to them so that they can be dragged out if things don't go too well and they can't get clear on their own steam. Along with other less fashionably dressed members of the team they are constantly at the stand-by on the flight deck while aircraft are in operation. The asbestos suits aren't too personally tailored and the wearers will pass them over to another pair of their teammates after half a day's use. Left to right are Able Seaman J. Tyre, of Vancouver, B.C., and Able Seaman L. Werry, of Calgary, Alberta. Tyre, 21, has been in the R.C.N. for three years, and saw service. Werry, 19, is a part of the new peacetime navy.

Bowden, of Vancouver. The ceremony was performed by Bishop J. B. Gibson before a number of family friends.

Wearing a floor-length gown of brocaded white silk with full length veil, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses. Attending the bride matron of honor was her elder sister, Mrs. Mel Matthews, who wore a gown of pink net over sheer pink tafetta, and carried a bouquet of yellow and white carnations.

Groomsman was Ian McRae. Following the ceremony, reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where friends of the family were received by the newly married couple. Toast to the bride was proposed by the groomsman, and responded to by the bridegroom. The toast to the bridesmaid was proposed by the groom. A lively wedding cake was cut by the Police headquarters reported a relatively quiet time during the holiday. There were complaints of three cars reported stolen by joyriders, all of which were recovered. One of the cars was found in a lane off Third Avenue, a second in the ditch on Seventh Avenue and the third also abandoned in the ditch, on Ninth Avenue. The latter received considerable damage as it went over the bank. No injuries were reported.
