Province Will Get At Least $20,000,000 Per Year It is Estimated—Considerable Part of Old Obligations Written Off-Municipalities to Benefit

VICTORIA (CP)—A five-year agreement, which would give British Columbia a total revenue of at least $100,000,000 for five years from federal subsidy, will be recommended to the provincial legislature for acceptance, it was announced by Premier John Hart today. The payment would be made as a "rental" by the Dominion for the province's income, corporation and succession duty tax and statutory subsidies. The Premier announced details of the agreement following a cabinet meeting at Ottawa from which he returned on Sunday.

British Columbia, if the agreement is accepted, will receive an annual subsidy of $18,000,000 or 150 percent payment under the wartime tax agreement. It is minimized at $18,000,000 based on 1942 population and gross national product.

Mr. Hart announced that " would be no double taxation and that, at the end of the five years, the "lease" would terminate. The province then could review its position and, if advisable, renew the agreement.

The annual subsidy will never be less than $18,000,000 and, on this basis, for 1947, it will amount to $21,299,000 based on population and the gross national pro-

Mr. Hart admitted that he was not altogether satisfied with the agreement. He had hoped for more generous treatment for old age pensioners and the assumption by the Dominion of entire responsibility for unemployment relief. However, these were accomplishments that might be achieved later.

Europe Unsettled

series of post-war elections, new governments and upsets such as the continent has seldom seen in a 12-month period has kept the political life of Europe in 1946 in ferment with little settled by the end of the year.

Through western Europe there is a fierce ideological clash between the Communists, much stronger than before the war, and middle and right-wing groups—a clash demonstrated as clearly in France as anywhere.

During the year French electors went to the polls five times. First they rejected a proposed new constitution for their country and followed that up by choosing a new provisional government. This government prepared another constitution which was adopted in October, and the first general assembly of the Fourth Republic was elected Nov. 10.

The Communists emerged as the largest party, followed by the Popular Republican Movement, a centre group. The surprise of the general election was the defeat suffered by the Socialists.

Finally France elected the Council of the Republic—the second chamber with the Centrists obtaining a small majority. Now the Socialist, Leon Blum, becomes president-premier protem. Early in 1947 the new parliament meets to strike out on the new political highway, with prospects that it will be rough.

In Germany, democratic political parties were knee. "Then it is you and Daddy Finally this exchange of gifts organized during the year in the four occupation zones and local elections took place, with the Social Democrats, a left-wing but non-communist group, leading the way in the British zone and the Christian Democrats, a centre party, in the United States

The Russians in their zone sponsored a fusion of the Social Democrats and Communists in a new Communist-dominated Social Unity party. High hopes were held for it by the Communists, but in Berlin municipal elections Social Unity took a beating from the Social Democrats in one of the biggest political surprises of 1946 Europe.

In Austria, where the Communists are very weak, a coalition government worked steadily through 1946 but it is hamstrung by the over-riding Four-Power Control machinery.

Italy rejected the monarchy and a coalition government was formed, with the Christian Democrats the strongest party. There is great political instability as the country awaits the final peace

... Greece saw King George II of the Hellenes go back to Athens after a plebiscite favoring his return, but outbursts of violence along the northern frontier, claimed by the administration to be Communist-inspired; failure to broaden the Athens government with the inclusion of middle and moderate left parties; and a Communist boycott of elections and parliament leave the country in a state of

The situation is unsettled in Belgium, one coalition government going under and another being fermed with the Christian Democrats in opposition. King Leopold II remained in exile but the future of his throne is still unsettled.

In the Netherlands' first post-war election, the moderate Catholic Peoples' Party won, with Labor close behind.

Through the Scandinavian countries there is a general trend toward the moderate left.

The Communists in CzechoSlovakia won seats in the largest group of the general election but a coalition government was formed. In Poland the Communists dominate the new government.

Among other countries in the Soviet orbit, Yugo-Slovakia, Romania and Bulgaria went Communist but Hungary still retains more western-style democracy in her coalition government than any of the other Balkan nations. .

General Franco remains in the saddle in Madrid unaffected by the many verbal broadsides fired at him during the year but still facing crisis due to stand of United Nations.

The opening up there of a banking sub-branch, with the prospect that a full-fledged branch will be established as soon as volume of business warrants such expansion, is the latest sign of business progress and a well-justified one, too, since Terrace has become a more important industrial and agricultural centre than it ever was before.

In the way of community enhancement and service, the taking over of the great Army drill hall there as a civic centre at Terrace has been an important negotiation indeed. That the community will be able to maintain it satisfactorily is much to be hoped but it is quite a large undertaking and will require a lot of steady support and good manage-

The establishment of a Red Cross outpost hospital for the community, which has long been so woefully in need of hospital facilities, is another most gratifying development and looks like a happy solution of that matter. Terrace and its people are to be congratulated on their enterprise and spirit and the progress they are making. They are not settling into a postwar slump but are keeping up-to-date in the postwar reconversion.
