How Far Should We Go?

The Daily News has taken an outstanding lead in the agitation so far with a view to inducing the Canadian National Railways to exercise what we believe to be its obligations in the postwar development of this part of the country and the port of Prince Rupert in which it has such a heavy stake. We think the railway management, to date at least, has been very remiss in the inclination to assume, much less implement, this obligation which includes the operation to the best advantage of its dry dock and other properties at Prince Rupert.

Now the weapon of boycott is being suggested as a final lever to induce Canadian National Railways to build at least one of its proposed new coastal vessels in the already moribund Prince Rupert Dry Dock and Shipyard.

The idea is being scouted as a "last resort" following discouraging replies from government and railway officials to their campaign to have the dry dock maintained at least a portion of its wartime activi-

It is questionable what public reaction would be to a possible boycott of Canadian National Railways if it fails to use its own shipyard to build at least one of its proposed new ships.

Such a boycott would mean, if the citizens approved of the measure, that none of the great amount of freight and passenger traffic would be routed over either Canadian National Railways lines or coastal steamers.

We may view as very discouraging the fact that, whereas several months ago the government indicated that one of the new ships probably would be built at Prince Rupert, latest word from Transport Minister Hon. Lionel Chevier says that the government is "exploring the possibility of such vessel or vessels to be built in British Columbia shipyards."

It is thought that Vancouver shipyards might be selected to build the ship or ships.

The proposed boycott measure would have to be subject to unanimous agreement by the citizens of Prince Rupert. Otherwise it would not be effective. Even then it is to be questioned if it would do much good. It is an extreme measure indeed and is something that must be seriously considered. Boycott is a fighting and challenging word and action. It always implies reprisal. Are we prepared to put up with all the consequences that might be involved in such a boycott?

Local News Gets Reader

No matter how sensational the world and national news on page one, stories with a local flavor carry the major appeal to newspaper readers, according to findings from data collected over the last 5½ years. Thus, when the front page of the Montreal Daily Star carried a story of the R.A.F.'s onslaught on Nazi invasion fleets in the issue of September 18, 1940, readship figures established this amazing comparison with the story of a minor casualty to a local pilot on page 3:

Read by Read by Front page R.A.F. invasion story .... 85% men 67% women Page 3 casualty to local pilot story .. 61% men 79% women

This example is typical of inumerable cases which establish beyond a doubt the irrestible drawing power of local news. The lesson for advertisers is plain.

For in the Local Touch—and in the unchallenged command of it possessed by newspapers and newspaper advertising-lies one constant in the maze of unpredictables which all wartime postwar planning has to face.

Newspapers impart to all advertising they carry a large part of the same intimacy, of immediate local importance, that characterizes the home town news. People find the advertising as well as the news their. newspapers carry virtually indispensable to everyday living.

SATURDAY SERMON

PASSION SUNDAY

(By CANON W. F. RUSHBROOK)

"Christ offered Himself without spot unto God . . . for us." -Heb. IX 14.

In Christian tradition last Sunday, the fifth in He endured the cross. Not as the Lent, is called Passion Sunday. Next Friday is Good conquered but the conqueror. Friday. Passion Sunday honors the "I Will" of our victor's crown. Thorn-crowned Lord's redemptive life. Good Friday consummates thought He was, there must have the decision. On Passion Sunday The Christ "offered shone through the blood and Himself without spot unto God for us." On Good bruises of His buffeting the joy-

As the marriage of a man and a maid is but the consummation of prior mutual pledges either to the other so Passion Sunday determines Good Friday, the great Convenant Day of the Christ and His Bride.

When a persons says "I will" or "I will not" and really means determined for him. Victory is a mental and spiritual outcome, compelled to die, then "He died dured the Cross despising the

What an all important 12 days for us are those between His passion and His cross! Christians are one great family of the bride. "Neither Jew nor Greek, Bonded or Free." The Christ clearly illustrates this at least twice during these few days. He, their Lord and Master, washed His disciples, feet; a slave's job. He ordained the Lord's Supper, a common meal, where under the symbolic bread and wine, Christ by faith is received and our souls nourished. All race, color and cast are lost in a common brotherhood. "Come unto me all ye that are weary—and I will give you rest!"

Then, as He and his followers walked towards Gesthemane where He knew that He would be betrayed, He sat by the wayside and spoke the parable of the vine and the branches. In this He reveals how the great family life was to be maintained. The Divine life that flowed through Him, the vine, also flowed through them, the branches. nourishing them and making them spiritually fruitful. As the first purpose of the marital life is the procreation of children so the first duty of the Church,

Mayor Daggett made a speech over the radio last Hallowe'en and asked the parents of Prince Rupert what they had done for their children. I am now asking the whole city council what they have done for Prince Rupert. All during the war it was impossible to get taxi service. The people of Rushbrook Heights had the taxis going all day while the high taxpayers out in Westview had to walk to town or stay home when the weather was tough as the taxis would go no further than the bridge. Now when business is slacking down they get service three times a day. It is a private service, to be sure, but I am certain, if the council had put
