Prepares Plans For New Ships Kurt Meyer's Neck Saved Withdrawal By Canada

Minister's Statement

Chevrier Cannot Say Where Or When New Canadian Liners Will Be Built

VICTORIA — Hon. Lionel Chevrier, minister of transport, announced here that naval architects were preparing plans for two new coastal liners for Canadian National Railways for service from Vancouver through Prince Rupert to Alaska.

The minister would not say, however, when or where they might be built.

ASK ROADWAY TO NEW FLOATS

Decision to send a delegation to interview City Council with the view of getting a road completed to the new fishermen's float site at Westview was made at a meeting of the Deep Sea Fishermen's Union in the Fishermen's Hall on Sunday.

At present the site, which also contains the Co-op fish dock and cold storage plant, is not served by a road. Fishermen using land passage to the floats must climb the steep Westview hill to the Cemetery road, which is the closest approach that can be made by vehicles.

The fishermen felt that since the site is developing into an important area for the fishing industry, a road extension should be completed.

Weather Forecast
Prince Rupert — Cloudy with rain. Partly cloudy with rain or snow showers in the late afternoon and evening. Winds moderate south to southeasterly.

LATEST SLIDE MAY RENDER HIGHWAY USELESS UNTIL SPRING, IT IS FEARED

Failure of Telegraphic Service Makes It Difficult to Obtain Exact Information Regarding Conditions

Reports of a major snowslide which has blocked the Prince Rupert highway near Kwinita about 60 miles east of the city reached here today but information as to the size of the avalanche could not be definitely ascertained.

Slides at several places along the line have knocked out wire communication with the interior, and the Public Works office here has been unable to obtain definite information on the road trouble.

Public Works Engineer J. C. Brady said this morning.

However, unofficial information places the length of the Kwinita slide at from 600 to 1,200 feet. Mr. Brady said that if the information is correct, the highway will probably be unusable until spring.

"I have been trying to get in touch with the road crews along the highway, but so far haven't been able to," Mr. Brady told the Daily News this morning.

In addition to the snowslides, a heavy fall of snow between here and Terrace has covered the highway, making it impassable. Duncan Kerr, Terrace lumberman, who arrived in the city on last night's train, said he believed it impossible to travel on the highway near Terrace now.

"A truck carrying lumber to repair the Shames bridge left Terrace on Thursday and took two days to make the trip," Mr. Kerr said. "There has been quite a snowfall since then."

One of the reasons that last week's snowfall may not be cleared from the highway is that bulldozers have piled high banks of snow on either side of the highway when they cleared earlier snowfalls from the road. These obstruct the disposal of the new snow.

The new trouble on the highway will change plans of the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce delegates to the annual meeting of the Terrace Board of Trade on Wednesday. Some of the delegates had hoped to make the trip by automobile, motoring as far as the Shames bridge, then transferring to Terrace cars at the other side of the bridge. Now they will be forced to go by train.

Train service east of Prince Rupert so far has not been affected by the snowslides. Last night's train arrived on time and tonight's train is scheduled to leave for the east on time.

Walsh, deputy Quartermaster General of the Canadian Army and chairman of the interservice committee.

The survey here was made by the interservice committee last November, and revised engineering and cost estimates were submitted some weeks later after they had been compiled by City Engineer E. A. Phillips.

Total amount of the city's claims is $344,000, the greatest portion to compensate for street damage by military vehicles during the war.

YEAR'S FIRST FLATFISH IS LANDED HERE

First flatfish to be brought to Prince Rupert this year arrived Sunday and today aboard three boats whose operators braved winter gales to start the 1946 beam trawling season along the coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands. The vessels took advantage of Sunday's calm weather to make the run across Heate Straits with full holds.

Capt. Ole Skog's Thelma S. arrived Sunday and landed 35,000 pounds of flatfish at Canadian Fish and Cold Storage wharf, while the Shamus, Capt. John Johanson, brought in 30,000 pounds to B. C. Packers.

Capt. Dave Ritchie's Finella arrived this morning with a full hold and at noon was unloading at the Canadian Fishing Company's wharf.

The Co-op dragger Manhattan I, Capt. O. Moon, left Sunday night to begin trawling off Skidegate Bar.

According to reports some herring have been found in the Prince Rupert harbor, but in schools too small to be of interest commercially. Several seiners were reported to have sailed last night to join scout boats in locating herring schools.

CHANGES IN EDUCATION

Cameron Report to Be Implemented—Federation Will Resist Cuts

"Dr. Weir, the minister of education, has announced that it is definitely the government's policy to implement the Cameron report at the coming session of the Legislature," J. S. Wilson, president of the Prince Rupert and District Teachers' Association, told that body at its regular monthly meeting in reporting on sessions of the executive of the B.C. Teachers' Federation which he attended in Vancouver during the Christmas holidays as a representative of the teachers of Northern British Columbia.

Touching on the province-wide salary picture, Mr. Wilson stated that the federation "emphatically will not accept any salary cuts in any part of British Columbia but on the contrary will continue to strive for improvement of salaries."

The democracy and education committee of the federation, stated Mr. Wilson, had pointed out that in 1944 as compared with 1899 half as many of a given number of workers could produce twice as much in two-thirds the time. "This increase in productivity was creating enormous social problems and the school could not lag behind in dealing with these problems."

Mr. Wilson, in his comprehensive report, which was applauded by the teachers, covered a large number of other points including steps on the part of the federation to improve teaching standards throughout British Columbia.

WAR ASSETS SELL FIRST BUILDINGS

Disposal by War Assets Corporation of the first wartime buildings in the Prince Rupert area to be declared surplus began today with the receipt at City Hall of a list of 23 Canadian Army temporary structures which the Crown Corporation is offering for sale to the city.

The offer was made first to the city in accordance with its senior priority agreement concerning military installations in this area. However, Mayor Daggett said that he thought it unlikely that the city will purchase any of the buildings contained in the list.

"As far as I know we have no intention of buying anything listed. There is nothing in it that we want," the Mayor said. "However, some of the aldermen may have a suggestion to make."

According to the senior priority offer, which came from the office of R. G. Dinsmore, director of the lands and buildings department of the War Assets Corporation, the city must make its decision before January 23. If the city does not signify its intention to buy before that date, the buildings will be offered to other buyers.

Election in Newfoundland . . .

In 1933 the Newfoundland Parliament voluntarily renounced its Dominion status in favor of government by a commission appointed by the King. Now the island is once more to be given the opportunity to decide what form its administration will take. This promise by Premier Clement Attlee carries out the policy stated by the Coalition Government in December, 1943, now endorsed by the Labor Government.

Newfoundland, which previously was a fully self-governing Dominion, experienced financial difficulties during the depression. After borrowing heavily for some years, she found herself unable to pay interest on her debts. A financial crisis developed in 1933, leading to the appointment of a Royal Commission of Inquiry. It was after this investigation that the Newfoundland Parliament asked Britain to take responsibility for her administrative and financial problems until she could herself develop financial stability. Since that time the island has been administered by a governor and six commissioners, three of them Newfoundlanders and three from the United Kingdom, appointed by the King.

During the war the island assumed importance as a naval and air base, with consequent improvement in economic conditions. In 1941 she balanced her budget without a grant-in-aid from Britain for the first time since 1933, and in 1942 she had a surplus of $7,000,000 from a total revenue of $23,000,000. It may be, of course, that this wartime prosperity is only temporary.

As early in 1946 as the Newfoundland climate permits, a convention is to be elected, with all adults voting. The convention is to consider and discuss changes that have occurred in the financial and economic situation of the island since 1934, bearing in mind the extent to which the high revenues of recent years have been due to wartime conditions. It is also to make recommendations as to possible forms of future government which should be put before the people of Newfoundland at a national referendum.

Timber and Prince Rupert . . .

Fishing has long been regarded as Prince Rupert's sheet anchor as far as permanent industry is concerned. When all else failed, it remained active. With war over and returning normal conditions making it once again possible to restore the facilities and multifarious services which go with a fishing port, no doubt fishing will again become an economic mainstay for the community. Even war did not eclipse the increasing interest and plans for development along modern lines of the fishing industry contiguous to and centralizing on the port.

In view of the new scientific developments and innovations in respect to the use of the woods for commercial products, notably in the textile and plastic field, the timber of the northern and central British Columbia coast and islands east, west, south and north of Prince Rupert, once more or less despised when compared with the south coast's and Vancouver Island's preferred Douglas fir, in the immediately coming years will, no doubt, come into its own as a potential natural resource.

The move that is on foot looking to the more scientific and thrifty development of the forest resources of British Columbia, culminating in that admirable and comprehensive document, the report of the Sloan

Commission, just issued, may be expected to play a part in bringing into fruition the long-awaited and inevitable development of the forest resources centering upon Prince Rupert as a manufacturing and shipping centre.

Indeed, it may not be long now before the manufacture and shipping of timber products provide a permanent industrial activity here comparable with that which has contributed so largely to the growth and development of such ports as Vancouver, Victoria, New Westminster, Seattle and Portland.

Action Not Words Needed . . .

Examination of the directorate of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways may furnish a clue to the neglect by these companies of their coastwise passenger fleets, says a Vancouver Sun editorial.

The C.N.R. hasn't got a western director at all on its seven-man board. The C.P.R. has one—Hon. Eric W. Hamber—by comparison with ten from Montreal and five from other cities in Canada, England and the United States.

Perhaps these outsiders have little appreciation of the situation in British Columbia. Maybe they don't understand that the province has already lost its entire aircraft manufacturing industry, that its shipbuilding industry is down from 28,000 employees to 6,000 and is shrinking rapidly, and that its tourist trade may almost collapse from want of vessels and hotel accommodation.

These would be important factors to them if they had any regard for the welfare and prosperity for their one million customers served by rail lines west of the Rockies.

Instead of holding off their shipbuilding programs until the yards of Great Britain are ready, they would be glad to order the vessels from the idle yards of their own country. They would not wish to see their own fellow-Canadians without jobs, nor would they care to think of large numbers of free-spending tourists taking their patronage to other playgrounds.

But that is not the way the matter stands. Neither of the railway companies has adopted such a policy. The best statement of their views was given by R. C. Vaughan, chairman and president of the C.N.R. He said by telegram:

"Transportation, which played such an important part in the (war) emergency, will continue to be vital, and the C.N.R. may be counted upon to carry on its responsibilities efficiently."

"We owe a debt of gratitude to the shipping and travelling public for the understanding co-operation given us in the past and it will be our constant endeavor to merit its confidence in the future."

With these fair words Vancouver is expected to be content. But it is fair deeds that count. The C.N.R. will "merit the confidence" of the public, discharge its "debt of gratitude," and "carry on its responsibilities" when it puts some new boats into service and strives to remedy hotel space shortages.

The same kind of double-talk indulged in by Mr. Vaughan comes from D. C. Coleman, president of the C.P.R. He declares that his company "has every intention of restoring the first-class service . . . at the earliest possible date."

His words might seem to indicate that the ships would be built here at once because that is the quickest method of restoring the fleet. But his remark must be read in conjunction with the preceding sentence to the effect that the boats will be built "when and where (they) can be most expeditiously and economically supplied, taking into account all relevant factors." This could mean anything or nothing.

It is a slick method of avoiding a definite promise. The pious sentiments of the railway presidents don't meet British Columbia's demand for action commensurate with the country's need.

FIGHTS BERGS IN NORTHLAND FOR 42 YEARS

Danish Skipper Sails Arctic Bays But Never Ventures Into Atlantic

TIMMINS, Ont., (P) — For 42 years grey-haired and be-speckled Captain Jens Ole Nielsen has plowed past the teeming icebergs of Hudson and James Bays. In all this 42 years of skimming salt water, the 61-year-old skipper has never once ventured out into the Atlantic as master of an ocean-going vessel and expects to retire in four years without breaking his record.

Quite content to sail the northern bays and rivers during his nearly half a century in the north, he "wore out" four ships totalling 336 tons.

At present he is visiting his wife, Clementine, and his family in Timmins on winter vacation, from his Mooseonee post as master of the Hudson's Bay Company schooner Port Severn.

Skipper Nielsen is a Dane, measures "only" five feet 10 inches in height, but maintains that what he lacks in height, he makes up for in width. He wears size 52 suits with 20-inch shirt collars, and tips the scales at 247 pounds.

The skipper was only 14 years old when he took to the water as a cabin boy aboard Danish ships. When he was 19 he set sail for Canada as a crew member of the Hudson's Bay Company ship Lady Head, which he joined in England. That was in 1903, and his first Canadian winter was spent in Mooseonee. Next fall, he joined the Revillon Brothers and sailed for that firm for 22 years after which he returned to the Hudson's Bay Company.

Hazardous Life
"Sailing the bays and rivers of the North is a treacherous business," Nielsen says. "You never know what you'll run into next. He has been caught in ice-floes. He has been in ships when their propellers were knocked out by ice. One ship he was in had her bottom ripped out. He knows what it is to be out in thick fog with icebergs looming in the frozen waters. Skipper Nielsen knows every bay and inlet in the northern waters. Along the route from Mooseonee to Charlton Island and Great Whale River are countless islands where fur traders have been carrying on business for 200 years. There, posts were established by the Hudson's Bay and Revillon trading rivals, to intercept the Indians bringing home their furs. The skipper remembers those days during the last war, when he himself trekked for miles with his dog teams in the bitter cold to get furs before his rivals could. Very fond of the Eskimos, Skipper Nielsen believes they deserve a great deal of credit for the way they live. "They're wonderful, people and every time I see an Eskimo, I feel ashamed of myself for being white," he said. "Civilizing Eskimos has been responsible for their going astray. Once they became so-called civilized, they'd go ahead and steal and do all sorts of things and blame it all on the devil."

Musicians Mourn Ace Violin Maker

MANCHESTER (P) — Musicians the world over mourn the death of T. Earle Hesketh, 79-year-old violin maker who worked in a little shop on Oxford Road. He was known as the "aristocrat" of his trade and his violins won praise from Sir Thomas Beecham, Kubelik, Albert Sandler and other master musicians. Almost every instrument he made was a perfect copy of a Guarnerius or a Stradivarius. Swiss chalets were scoured yearly for wood 200 or 300 years old to provide the sound boards. He produced no more than 20 violins a year—and violins he made and sold for £25 ($115) were sold years after for £100 and more. At one time as many as 23 Hesketh violins were in use in the Halle Orchestra of Manchester.

Very fond of the Eskimos, Skipper Nielsen believes they deserve a great deal of credit for the way they live. "They're wonderful, people and every time I see an Eskimo, I feel ashamed of myself for being white," he said. "Civilizing Eskimos has been responsible for their going astray. Once they became so-called civilized, they'd go ahead and steal and do all sorts of things and blame it all on the devil."

BRITISH WOMEN GET MINIATURE FASHION TREAT

By FLORA LEWIS

LONDON, (AP) — Tweedy, roughly-shod London women whose clothes coupons provide for about one new dress a year have a new pastime.

It's to stand in dewy-eyed wonder before a display of Parisian wire-puppets, gowned in the newest Paris styles.

The display may go to America as soon as the thousands of English women flocking to this new type fashion show have had their fill of delight.
About 20 inches high, the little mannequins show off every aspect of fashions decreed by France. They've stitched leather pocket-books with shoulder straps, long, gathered silken gloves and intricate high-swept coiffures.
Even the shoes are precise miniatures of the brightly colored high-tied wedges (made with cord or wood) that click down the Champs Elysees. From the settings—a reproduction of the inside of the opera house, "the enchanted grotto,"—to the dresses, it is a fairy-tale show.

Gibson Girl
Most of the clothes, even gaily flowered garden prints and red and black checked morning suits, have the huge sleeves, wasp-waists and enormous flowing skirts of the Gibson girl.
The materials, especially for evening clothes, are luxurious—heavy brocades, smooth satin with croix de lorraine watermarks, crepes rich with pearl sequin and delicately applied bugle beading.

It's clear from the display—which represents Paris' top designers, that liberated French women are going romantic and frou-frou. From the enormous quantities of oohs and ahs, it's just as clear that war-weary British women are ready to follow suit.

Numerous friends paid final respects to Mrs. Adcock who was well known throughout the city. Rev. Gordon Smith of St. Peter's Church officiated. Interment took place in Fairview Cemetery. During the service the congregation sang the hymns "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go," and "Abide With Me." Mrs. J. C. Gilker was organist. Pallbearers were Alex Gomez, Ernest Russell, David MacPhee, August Wallin, Jack Carr and Stephen Rapkin.

Newsman find themselves in odd surroundings in their perpetual hunt for news. Correspondents covering the Nurnburg trials were quartered in a medieval castle complete with murals and gilt armour.

The family's penchant for a Sunday roast could be pleasantly met by a three pound rolled shoulder of lamb. A tempting remake for Monday should be a tasty lamb curry. Aside from this, you may have some useful odds and ends for luncheon sandwiches. A vegetable-egg scallop can appetizingly and satisfyingly solve the problem of a meatless meal for Tuesday. Just alternate layers of the family's favored vegetables, hard cooked eggs, and flavoursome cheese sauce, top with buttered crumbs, and oven heat until bubbling and browned. Good companions for it would be hot scones and a crisp cabbage salad. Steak and kidney pie on Wednesday is an excellent dish to tastefully and nutritiously satisfy winter appetites. For Thursday, plump frankfurters, along with sauerkraut and jacket boiled potatoes, are suggested for appealing thrift. And on Friday unrationed fish, done to your liking, will bring the goodness of the sea to your table. A flank steak encasing a savoury dressing will take care of Saturday's dinner. It should leave you with a comforting something to tuck away in the ice box. You may care to devote the remaining token of the week to 6 ounces of cooked meats for luncheon menus, or to augment the cold sliced flank steak for Sunday supper.

FRENCH PERFUME IS VERY SCARCE

Charge Over Twenty Dollars For Tiny Bottle of Scent

PARIS (AP)—French perfume is in a class with the Hope diamond, oysters Rockefeller and Scotch tweed and today its manufacturers are in a struggle to keep the cachet of quality along with quantity production.

There is a perfume shortage in the land of perfume, just as there is a shortage of everything else from gasoline to bed-springs. Perfumers are working overtime to devise ways of rationing the short supplies to scent-loving French and yet find enough to supply thousands of American soldiers whose one big gift idea is a bottle of famous-name liquid to send to the folks back home.

The American trade in Paris is important now, because it keeps trade names before the overseas public which before the war constituted a number one perfume market.

As queues of combat-booted, khaki-uniformed soldiers wait patiently in and outside shops with names like Chanel, Guerlain, Lelong, Paquin, Molyneux, Millot, Renoir, businessmen on upper floors wrestle with the unromantic problem of getting together the necessary ingredients for the product.

Male Musk Deer Are Hard to Get

They are having nightmares about the shortage, for instance, of musk, the heady basis for many expensive perfumes. Musk is obtained from an abdominal sac of the male musk deer which is found only in China and Indo-China, countries from which luxury exports are, at the moment, less than negligible. The same goes for fragrant sandalwood, wax-like ambergris, spicy iliangiang flowers, all of which must come from the Orient, and none of which are coming. The French stockpile is non-existent and there are no adequate chemical substitutes.

Then, added to that, the perfume-flower crop of southern France—jasmine, orange blossoms, tuberose, rose, lavender and rosemary—fell far short of expectations this year.

All this adds up to the high price of high-powered scents. A tiny bottle of good perfume in a plain bottle (there's a glass shortage, too) costs well over $20—including the government's 33 per cent luxury tax. Soldiers may obtain a courtesy refund of

CANADIANS NEED FOOD KNOWLEDGE

Advances Made in Nutrition Should be Used by Housewives In Peace as Well

TORONTO, (C)—The average Canadian housewife gained valuable information about food during the war. She knows more than she ever did before about food values and balanced meals, and she has also learned how to make lower grades and less interesting types of food palatable. This knowledge improves her family's health and helps the budget.

There is a great question, however, about how much of this newly acquired wisdom will stick. The need for better nutritional health among Canadian people was not just a war emergency. When the number of men turned down by the draft because of defects directly traceable to nutritional deficiencies is considered it is appreciated how little Canadians knew about proper feeding before the war began.

There are, and always have been, people in Canada who do not get enough to eat. Even today 50 per cent of the people can't pattern all their eating habits after the "basic seven" foods we've heard so much about—because they can't afford it.

That doesn't necessarily mean that they are suffering from malnutrition, however. There are several kinds of hunger, "hidden hunger," which comes from not getting the proper nutrients in diet, has become a familiar term. Then there's "hollow hunger," which comes from eating insufficient food. The rest of the world is suffering from that in far greater proportion than Canadians are. Last of all, there's "humdrum hunger," which is brought on by housewives and cooks who care too little about their jobs to contribute imagination and variety to the food they feed their families.

SLOW GROWING FLOWERS NEED EXTRA EARLY SPRING START

Most annual flowers will stand transplanting, and if sown in the house, or in a greenhouse, hot-bed or cold frame, weeks before it is possible to sow them outdoors, they will begin to flower much earlier than otherwise when moved to the garden.

Asters, petunias and snapdragons especially should have this early start, because they are slow to germinate and mature. In setting out plants rather than sowing seeds direct there is another advantage, which lies in the placing of plants. Since flowers are usually planted in borders, rather than in rows, and often must be placed between established plants, it is not easy to be sure of growing plants from seed in exactly the desired location. Another advantage is that thinning out plants becomes unnecessary and seed thus goes much farther.

Many flowers have very small seed, which must not be covered deeply, lest growth be prevented, sometimes indeed, the seed is just pressed into the soil. It is important that flower seed be sown in loose soil, rich in humus, which will not become too compact, or form a crust which might prevent the seedlings from emerging. Many garden soils do not answer these specifications, but it is usually easy to find enough of the best type of soil to fill a few flower pots or seed boxes, in which seeds may be sown with assurance that they will germinate and grow well.

Because of this, gardeners often sow all flower seeds in this way, even outdoors, and move the plants when ready to locations where they are desired. Seed boxes are easier to manage outdoors than under protection, and growth is more rapid than in the garden, for plants in a seed box can be shaded when desirable, and watered frequently, or kept constantly moist by automatic watering.

"SIR" BARRED IN ALL RANKS CLUB

Social Gatherings Run by Winnipeggers Pleased Soldiers and Dutch Friends

By WILLIAM BOSS

DOETINCHEM, Holland. — It was an offence punishable by grand whacks from the ceremonial cane to use "sir" in one of the Canadian Army's few "all ranks club" operated by the Fort Gray Horse, armored brigade of Winnipeg in this town. Known as the "Coffee Club," it was originated as a recreational meeting place and conversational centre.

Members were called "mister." Free coffee, biscuits and sandwiches were served to officers, other ranks and their civilian female and male guests in well-furnished lounges. Officers also helped serve in the club which was run on "scrounge" principles with an initial membership fee of 20 cigarettes which were used as barter for extras. Lieut. Bert Forrester, Kelvington, Sask., was "Grand Vizier" with Capt. Frank P. Davidson, New York City, as "Grand Potentate." Tpr. Bob Wright, Sherritt Gordon, Man., was "grand steward" and "grand treasurer" was Tpr. Ralph Argue of Mathar, Man. Auxiliary Services supervisor was Stan Hill, Y.M.C.A., Toronto, helped furnish and supply the club.

Bus Service Provided

After evenings in the club, a unit bus service was provided which took the men and their girl friends home, then retraced the route 30 minutes later to pick up the men. The bus was operated by Lieut. Barney Dowling of Winnipeg.

Dutch police attended the club dances and girls considered under age, or not fit company for the men, were courteously

Paul Aivazoff Is Doing Well

According to word received by local friends, Paul Aivazoff, pioneer local business man, who had the misfortune to suffer the loss of his left arm under painful circumstances in an industrial plant which he operates in Vancouver, is getting along well. The accident occurred over a month ago and he is still in Vancouver General Hospital.

escorted home. To answer questions on Canada the men were divided into panels representative of each province and delivered talks on their parts of Canada to the older folk of the town as well as children, invited to lunch in the men's mess on "talk days."

Symbolic of the close co-operation between unit and town was the direct line between the burgomaster's office and that of the adjutant, Capt. A. H. Holmes of Assiniboine, Sask. Behind the whole undertaking was the commanding officer, Lt.-Col. Eric Wilson of Toronto, who master-minded the project. On the day the unit moved into Doetinchem until its departure November 30.

THIS AND THAT

"He's got a nice voice, but I can't understand all the fuss they are making over him. Can you?"

HOW CAN I ???

By ANNE ASHLEY

Q. How can I remove white stains from furniture?

A. Dip a cloth in kerosene oil and rub the spot well. Then take another cloth, dip it in alcohol and rub quickly. Too much alcohol will destroy the varnish. Then moisten a third cloth in furniture polish and rub thoroughly.

Q. How can I keep cut flowers for a longer time?

A. When placing the flowers in a vase, remove all the leaves that would be under water. The flowers will keep better and it will mean much clearer water.

Q. How can I tighten the sewing machine belt?

A. The sewing machine belt can often be tightened by placing a few drops of castor oil on it.

LIVELY COMEDY ON SCREEN HERE

"Pillow to Post" with Ida Lupino, Coming to Capitol Tuesday and Wednesday

Gleeful story of a pert travelling saleswoman, played by Ida Lupino, and of her adventures in a soldier-packed army camp town, "Pillow to Post," an hilarious comedy with William Prince and Sydney Greenstreet in the other leading roles, comes to the screen of the Capitol Theatre here on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

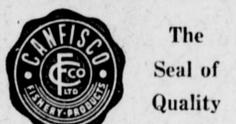

Complications follow in quick and lively succession after Miss Lupino poses as a young officer's bride in order to get quarters in the town. William Prince is the young officer while Greenstreet has the part of an Army colonel who gets in on the play. After many amusing incidents, the couple finally go to a parson and all ends happily.

Prominent in the supporting roles are Stuart Erwin, as a perplexed fellow officer; Johnny Mitchell, as a young town business man and Ruth Donnelly.

High Standing of U.B.C. Law Students

VANCOUVER — Students of the newly established Law Faculty at the University of British Columbia did extremely well in their first written examinations, it was stated by the president, N. A. M. MacKenzie. Christmas exams in law were simply tests, it was stressed by Professor Curtis, dean of the faculty, and serve only as indications of the first term work. The 73 students in first year law, most of whom are veterans, achieved a high class average. Highest mark was 84 per cent, which for law subjects, is quite unusual. There are three women enrolled this year. For the 10 students in the second and third years—Law Society students completing their course at the university—there was one final exam. All passed in this and other subjects. Two of these students are women. "We are very pleased with the work of the law students so far," Dean Curtis said.
