TERRACE HOME DEFENCE SOLDIERS PARADE AGAINST CONSCRIPTION—WANT TO BE SHIPPED TO QUEBEC

Demonstration Saturday Afternoon Orderly and Harmless—Situation In Interior Town Remains Calm

MORE PARADES TODAY

VANCOUVER, Nov. 27.—There were more parades this morning at all camps in British Columbia where Home Defence troops are stationed except Terrace.

French-Canadian Home Defence soldiers stationed at Terrace and comprising at least sixty percent of troops there have demanded to be sent back to their homes in Quebec.

ELSEWHERE TOO

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.—Reports that about 2900 members of the Home Defence Army stationed in six British Columbia towns held anti-conscription parades Saturday.

More than 25,000 Home Defence soldiers are stationed in British Columbia. Three thousand of these are French speaking.

At Chilliwack, two platoons of approximately 130 men paraded the streets Saturday night.

At Prince George, about 200 Home Defence soldiers staged an orderly parade through the main streets.

A goodly number of the marchers were carrying their rifles. Their general attitude appeared to be good-natured and, except for lack of officers and non-commissioned officers, it might have been an orderly "march easy" parade.

The only thing even approaching the nature of an outward incident was the taking down of a Canadian Legion sign at the Legion Hall.

Following the march through the limited main streets of the town the various groups comprising the procession dispersed to their camps.

General Sir Harold Alexander has been made a Field Marshal and will succeed General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson as overall commander in the Mediterranean theatre.

King Gov't Fate Rests In Balance

Debate on Manpower Resumed at Ottawa Today

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.—Canadian Press staff writer R. K. Carnegie last night reported from Ottawa that he had been told by "a thoughtful and experienced member of parliament" that the fate of the Liberal government will hinge on Col. J. L. Ralston's stand on the confidence motion in the House of Commons this week.

The former defence minister resigned in protest against the government's refusal last month to institute conscription for overseas service.

According to Carnegie's informant "If Col. Ralston votes confidence in the government, then I think the government will stand. But if he votes no, then, it seems to me, enough members will follow his lead that, even if the ministry is not in a position to consider resignation, the debate on manpower opened today in the Commons and Mr. King moved his confidence motion in a cabinet policy speech.

Progressive Conservative House Leader Gordon Graydon and other opposition group leaders are likely to speak before Col. Ralston enters the debate.

The C.C.F. is expected to move an amendment in line with its frequently announced position that conscription of wealth would go hand in hand with conscription of manpower.

Carnegie goes on to say that a Progressive Conservative amendment blaming the government for not going all out for conscription and an anti-conscriptionist counter-amendment are likely to be defeated by substantial majorities.

The belief of political observers is that French-Canadian members, while not approving of the government's conscription policy, might support the King government, should it appear threatened with a want of confidence vote, instead of taking chances with a coalition government.

The resignation of Hon. C. G. Power as minister of national defence for air was accepted, the Prime Minister announced.

Democracy Exemplified . . .

Freedom of speech and freedom of the press have been well exemplified in Canada during the current discussion of overseas reinforcements and conscription. In how many other countries of the world—even so-called democracies—would people have been permitted to say and newspapers been allowed to print utterances and news such as have been so freely vented during the past few weeks in Canada? We cannot imagine, for instance, an officer in the armies of some countries being permitted to make statements such as Major Connie Smythe made about the state of reinforcements or where army officers have been allowed to air their personal views on government military policy such as Sixth Division officers commanding did in Vancouver a week ago.

In some countries publicity in press and air would have been banned for incidents like these in Quebec, Vernon, Prince George, Terrace, Nanaimo, Chilliwack and Courtenay.

As for the army personnel, there are regulations laid down which forbid officers expressing their opinions as did Smythe and the Sixth Division officers. There is reason to believe that, in view of recent developments, there may be a tightening down now.

There are often times when it is really in the interest and even the safety of the public that opinions and incidents should not be too much projected into the limelight.

Let's Get Together . . .

It pays to be co-operative, and it will pay the people of Central British Columbia to lift up their eyes and see beyond their immediate confines. The time is now opportune to see ourselves as a mighty inland empire requiring a unity of voice and a unity of purpose rather than separate communities, each with its own demands, and unconcerned about the adjacent towns and districts.

United for the common good of all, a great empire can be developed in Central B.C., extending from the Alberta boundary clear to the "Sunset" port of Prince Rupert and extending south deep into the Cariboo and north to the last outpost.

Prince George and residents have long smiled superiority when we have along the C.N.R. line. Much of this criticism has not been fair or just, but heard criticism of ourselves by towns we have done little or nothing to overcome it. We, in turn, have criticized the others, and all this has made for disunity in our country for many years.

Central British Columbians have for decades sought to interest the southern part of the province and influential men in the wonders and the needs of our country. But this has been spasmodic. One town or city would act at a time. And many times one community would ask for something that was bitterly opposed by another.

The question of a road to Alaska has long been a sore point. Our lack of unity on this question certainly didn't help when study was being given the route for the Alaska Military Highway, which is to be abandoned.

Now Central B.C. has another chance. Leading men in the Pacific Northwest States are more than passively interested in having the United States build a highway north to Alaska that will connect them with that north-domain and at the same time open the Alaska Panhandle unto them.

Now is the time for all Central British Columbians to see the broad picture. Now they must appreciate that what benefits any one part of our interior empire will benefit all.

Irrespective of where a new road to Alaska started in Central B.C., all of our country would benefit. Realizing this we must express ourselves as agreed on the need and the importance of such a road. By speaking as one, and speaking loudly, we will lend encouragement to our American cousins in the Northwest States. Their enthusiasm for the project might well lag if we showed no interest in a project from which we would benefit so generally.

Last June there was an effort to revive the annual sessions of the Associated Board of Trade of Central B.C. Nothing has been done. Let something be done. Let all boards of trade agree to accept the invitation of the Vanderhoof board to meet in that town, to meet soon, and determine a common policy for Central British Columbia that will benefit all and make this part of our country better known. Let us dedicate ourselves to a new spirit of co-operativeness so we may make better and greater strides in the days to come. —Prince George Citizen.

WHAT TYPE OF AIRCRAFT IS THIS?—You couldn't possibly know unless you were in on the secret. It is the AL 504, Royal Air Force Transport Command Liberator, so modified that it is the only one of its kind in the world. Known as a "Commando" it has logged more than 400,000 miles travelling on historical war missions and special flights to every part of the globe and it is the most famed aircraft operating out of Canada. Recently, it inaugurated the new Canada-Australia regular air service. Some months ago the standard stabilizer fins of an orthodox Liberator were removed and a single tail, 31 ft. from the ground and highest fitted to any aircraft, was substituted. Seven feet were added to the length of the aircraft to permit installation of arm chair seats, beds and an electric kitchenette. As the "Commando" was unique, the photograph could not previously be published, but is now released because there is no likelihood that on future special missions the aircraft will be with range of the enemy. BEECHAM'S BARBS STILL HAVE STING

LONDON, Nov. 27. — Sir Thomas Beecham, the famous British conductor, has worked up quite a reputation for stirring up fireworks in musical circles and London musicians have learned to their sorrow—that his spell in North America hasn't changed him any.

A reception was held in his honor at headquarters of the London Philharmonic Orchestra and he took advantage of the occasion for one of his scathing speeches.

"Musical institutions here are still walking in the same dear old morass of reactionary unbelief," he said.

"Orchestras are playing badly as ever. You can take this with a pinch of salt—but not too large a pinch."

He didn't blame the Philharmonic entirely. It was a scandal, he said, that it had no assistance from state or industry.

"The New York Philharmonic

Orchestra has about $900,000 a year from the U. S. rubber companies. This enables it to have the right number of concerts and rehearsals.

"Organization in the United States is 50 years ahead of what it is here."

IN FAIR PLAY

Editor, Daily News:
We, the undersigned, in the interests of fair play, wish to state that we were present throughout the "Back McNaughton Rally" Monday evening, and at no time did we hear Mr. Mickleburgh, the speaker, or Mr. Casey, the mover of the resolution from the floor, or anybody else, say anything that could be even remotely construed as meaning that our boys overseas should be denied reinforcements. In our estimation, the whole purpose of the meeting was as a step to see that the boys should get reinforcements by the quickest methods determined in the light of existing conditions.

Photography Film Proves Interesting

Friday evening a group of photographers, professional and amateur, civilian and military, saw a worthwhile sound motion picture on photoflash photography. The picture, which is released by the Canadian General Electric Company, shows by means of slow motion photography, the types of shutters and their lighting needs, the function and operation of the three elements of photoflash photography—the shutter, the lamp and the synchronizer, synchronization, photo-flash lamp reflectors and their efficiencies, and how to check a synchronizer. The film was made available through the co-operation of J. S. Wilson, personnel manager of the local dry dock and shipyard, and Thomas Wilford, who operated the projector. The 25 minute film proved to be of great interest to the audience and aroused a lively discussion which showed how informative the film had proved to be.

In spite of material and labor shortages, building activity in this community points to a promising outlook held by business men. Work is progressing on additions to two buildings and plans are almost completed for the erection of a new building.

As temperatures drop and snow creeps down the hillsides, game hunters in this district are growing more active. Recently Jim Downey bagged a four-year old moose, Jack Armstrong got a two-point buck and Jack Ayre and Henry Windt teamed up to shoot a two-year old buck.

William Irvine and Vincent Segur, C.C.F. organizers, held a series of meetings in this district last week.

VICTIMS OF COMRADES

Some Partisans Played Role Too Well, Shot by Impetuous Resistance Workers

By MARGARET ECKER
 Canadian Press War Correspondent
 PARIS, Nov. 27 (C)—Overzealous patriots in liberated countries of Europe have taken the lives of a few of the resistance movement's most courageous workers, some stories have said here.

Some underground workers who discovered that they could best work for the liberation of their homeland by posing as Nazi sympathizers have been executed by their freed countrymen on D-Day or since.

This story was given to me by resistance workers who hoped that its publication might halt similar impetuosity in countries still under Nazi occupation.

"It is dangerous for people to take it unto themselves to administer justice without investigation of the crime," one worker said. "In most cases the people who are executed are guilty, but then in the odd case an innocent and brave person dies."

Some place in Belgium, one of the first persons shot in a newly liberated town was a girl, who had worked in the gестапо headquarters and who had been known as a friend of Nazi officers.

Through her job in the headquarters she was first to learn the names of her countrymen who the gестапо planned to arrest. In that way she was able to inform the victims and give them the chance to escape. As a friend and confidant of the Germans she collected information of highest use to the underground. So clever was she that the Nazis never suspected her and only the Belgians who worked with her knew her double, Mata Hari-like role.

In the south of France a talkative, friendly Frenchman was another victim.

From the time the Germans occupied his town he had treated them with jolly camaraderie. He had become a friend of the German officers and popped in and out of Nazi police headquarters several times a day.

He placed his car at their disposal and went on long trips into the country to collect food for them. Patriotic Frenchmen in the village hated him. They didn't know that he learned many things valuable to his resistance group in the headquarters. That he used the gasoline allowed to him by the Germans to make resistance-organizing trips throughout the district.

After D-Day his fellow townsmen meted out the punishment they thought fit in the light of surface appearances.

FOSSILS FOUND AT GIBRALTAR

GIBRALTAR, Nov. 27.—Tunnellers of the Royal Engineers extending the Rock's famous underground defence system have found fossils of interest to students of natural history 200 feet inside the eastern face of the cliff.

The fossils were several pairs of antlers, jaws, complete sets of teeth, many vertebrae and other bones. The 20-foot wide fissure in which they were located has been sealed up and will be searched closely for more bones after the war.

The coastline of Norway, including the greater islands and indentations, is about 12,000 miles.

ilton, Ontario, acting officer commanding, declined to make any statement for publication following the demonstration. It was evident, however, that army officers were inclined to the view that there was nothing very wrong or harmful about the incident.

After the parade, the men followed their usual Saturday afternoon week-end activities. Some went to the show, some went to the beer parlors. All were back in camp by the usual time and there were no detentions as a result of the parade.

Caused Some Alarm at First

Unused to such incidents, the citizens of Terrace might have seemed somewhat alarmed at the outset of the parade. One Terrace business man said he was about to be leaving his store to go home for lunch when he heard the noisy procession approaching. He was at first minded to stand by the store but then decided his place was at home with his family. The people of the town later accepted the whole thing as a harmless demonstration.

I.D.'s at Terrace, in casual conversation, said they did not wish to have trouble.

From Prince George, where Major General H. N. Ganong makes his headquarters, came word of a similar "more or less good natured" demonstration parade by Home Defence men. Nothing serious happened there and like at Terrace, confidence was expressed that everything would be kept within due bounds.

BROTHERS REUNITED

Search for Birth Certificate Leads to Meeting at Midland, Ontario

By ADELAIDE M. LEITCH Canadian Press Correspondent

MIDLAND, Ont., Nov. 27.—The story of Harry and Tom Scott reads like a fairy tale—two brothers separated when children, living separate, yet in many cases parallel lives in opposite corners of the Dominion until, after 53 years, they are brought together by a birth certificate.

One of them is Thomas Scott, 59 Quebec St., Midland; the other is Harry Scott, 1650 East Third Ave., Vancouver. Although separated and not even knowing if the other was alive, yet there was instant recognition when the Vancouver Scotts stepped off the train at Midland station.

"There he is!" each brother said to his wife. They would have recognized each other anywhere.

It all started when Harry Scott found he needed his birth certificate. Toronto couldn't help him, having no contact with the people who knew him. Remembering that her husband had a brother who at one time lived in Midland, Mrs. Scott took matters into her own hands and wrote to the chief of police, who for the next day or two, spent considerable time ringing doorbells and asking all the Scotts in town if they had a brother Harry.

Quebec St. was the last call. From then on it was simply a matter of exchanging air mails and arranging a visit.

Separated in 1891

The last time the brothers saw each other was in 1891 when Tom 11, and Harry 8, took the train north from Toronto to live on Ontario farms.

Harry's destination was Clear Lake, Muskoka, and for five long years all he can remember is "the lickings I got." At 13 he was working in a mill at Wood Lake and after that there followed a succession of logging camps until eventually he reached Falconburg.

He went west in 1903, journeying up the Cariboo as far as Quesnel, working in Kamloops, Revelstoke, and finally ending up at the Vancouver shipyards where he is at present employed. His wife is an English girl who came to Vancouver from Cumberland.

While this was happening to Harry, Tom stayed on a farm near Midland for two years, and then went to work in the bush. Several years of that and then he went west as a harvester. Later he returned to Ontario for mill work. Thirty-five years ago he came to Midland, and 15 years later went to work for the

BRITAIN PLANS SEAWEED TESTS

EDINBURGH, Nov. 27.—A Scottish Seaweed Research Association has been founded under joint auspices of the Supply Ministry and the Scottish Council of Industry, to investigate the commercial possibilities of seaweed.

On its work depends to a great extent the future of the crofters of the Scottish Highlands.

The association will have a biological division; an engineering section with a ship equipped to examine deep sea weeds and the best methods of harvesting them, and a chemical division to determine how best to extract the chemical constituents.

Midland Public Utilities where he has been ever since. He, too, married an Old Country girl, Margaret Stevenson, two years out from Scotland.

Many times the brothers' paths almost crossed. Both served overseas at the same time and fought in the same battles—Vimy, Passchendaele, Arras, Amiens—without knowing the other was nearby.

The only thing that surprised the brothers on meeting was Tom's five-foot-five and Harry's five-foot-nine were much shorter and much taller than expectations.

These dimes work their heads off No doubt you've seen dimes worn so thin that you can't see the heads on them. That's what happens when money is really passed around. That's what happens every year to at least two and a half billion dimes that are put into circulation through the life insurance companies. These dimes really go to work. They come in the form of premium payments from four million policyholders and if you prefer figuring in folding money, they amount to 250 million dollars. In peacetime these dimes are not idle. They are kept busy through investment in a great variety of local and national undertakings. For the past five years they have been busy in a strictly military sense—backing up our fighting men with more than a billion dollars' worth of Victory Bonds. These busy dimes are helping to buy security for you and yours—both in the present and in the future—both at home and abroad. ALICE DUER MILLER MADE POEMS SELL
"The White Cliffs of Dover" Has Proven Phenomenal Success
NEW YORK, Nov. 27 ©—One of the publishing trade's standard axioms runs, "Poetry never sells." There have been others, such as "Farm novels never sell," and once publishers held their beads out of their mugs of nut-brown ale and declared, "Civil War novels never sell."
Margaret Mitchell put the final skids under that last, even though other Civil War books have sold besides "Gone With the Wind."
Poetry has had a habit of selling best long after a poet's death, although one or two others have done well enough while still among the quick. But the late Alice Duer Miller, whose chief reputation had been in prose, has had the last word on poetical success.
Mrs. Miller's "The White Cliffs" has done the job. Thomas R. Coward, of Coward and McCann, publishers happened to hear in July, 1940, by the literary grapevine that Mrs. Miller had finished a longish poem about England. Mr. Coward was not Mrs. Miller's publisher—his chief contact with her had been over a proposal that she write a popular book on mathematics, since she was a mathematician before she became a writer. She never did the book, but Denning Miller, her son finally did.
Anyway, Mr. Coward called Mrs. Miller's agent who said she would be delighted if he would publish "The White Cliffs." Mr. Coward says part of this pleasure may have been due to the fact that the manuscript already had been rejected by "a considerable number of distinguished publishers."
The book was published at $1 on September 16, 1940, and Mr. Coward recalls with a grin that it had an advance sale of exactly 800 copies. Nor did it begin to move until early the next month; by October's end Lynn Fontaine had broadcast the poem twice, and very movingly, with the result that 6,777 copies had been sold.
That was the beginning of the landslide. By the end of the year 43,781 people had bought "The White Cliffs"; 138,125 bought it in 1941; next year 41,985 copies were sold, and last year 20,774 copies. Then another factor entered the field, to wit, the movies.
"The White Cliffs of Dover" sold 30,782 copies of "The White Cliffs" through August, making a grand total in the United States of 275,507. But the interesting thing about this is that in August of this year alone, Mrs. Miller's poem sold nearly half as many copies as it did in all 12 months of 1943. And here are some other oddments:
Miss Fontaine recorded the poem for Victor, which has sold nearly 50,000 albums at $3.50. In England, where large editions are almost impossible because of the war, the sale has been about 300,000 copies and in Canada nearly 40,000.
