Yielding to pressure of the British government, President Rackiewicz signed a decree dismissing his long-time friend from the position he has held since the exiled government was formed.

Rainfall Is Help To Interior Farms

SMITHERS, Sept. 30—A steady fall of rain during the past few days in the Bulkley Valley will provide a certain reserve of moisture in the ground for next year's crops and should give the seed a good start for next year.

It is quite a few years since this district has had such good fall rains and, while it is hampering late harvesting and threshing to some extent, it will be of inestimable benefit to next year's crops.

The soil throughout the valley had become so dry that, with any lack of moisture in the spring, a lot of seed would not even start to grow but these rains should at least ensure good germination and good prospects for a future crop.

During a short-term two-year period immediately after the war Mr. Perry thought there would not be much difficulty. He then spoke of plans being made to smooth out the longer period to follow.

Lieut. Torrance has been gaining considerable satisfaction over the interest that is being aroused among the young women in the naval service about what they will do after the war.

Those who are lacking in matriculation subjects are being told how these can be taken up through the Canadian Legion educational service with the local naval schoolmasters, such as is the case here, co-operating.

Lieutenant Torrance expressed pleasure over the large number of Wrens who had signed up here for courses this winter with the co-operation of Sub. Lieut. A. E. Hobbs, schoolmaster of H.M.C.S. Chatham.

CALAIS FIGHTING IS RESUMED; YANKS SMASHING SIEGFRIED LINE

Germans Abandon Bridgehead Across Rhine River—Rain and Mud Enveloping Entire Front

LONDON, Sept. 30 (CP)—The British Second Army held firmly Saturday in Holland against German counter-attacks from east and west aimed at Nijmegen and the Waal Rhine bridge.

The British expanded their Dutch salient with a new thrust within four miles of strongly fortified communications centre of Hertogenbosch.

On the Channel coast all Nazi resistance ceased at Cap Griz where long-range batteries were silenced by the Canadians.

At Calais the battle was resumed after a 24-hour truce to permit the evacuation of 20,000 civilians.

"I have received orders from my Fuehrer to fight to the last man and that is what I intend to do," is the statement attributed to the German commander in chief at Calais as the battle resumed.

The Germans Friday night abandoned a slim bridgehead against the Neder Rhine at the tip of a fifty-mile Allied salient at Arnhem. The position had been captured by enemy troops which crossed the river in darkness but the Nazis were flung back by British attacks.

The retreating Germans destroyed the approaches to Arnhem bridge.

The American Seventh Army drove wedges into two of four main Vosges Mountain passes to the Rhine.

To the north the American First Army attacked in the Prum salient across the German border, smashing further into the Siegfried Line and knocking out eight Nazi fortifications in one single engagement.

On the Third Army front the Americans destroyed twenty-four German tanks north of Lunenburg and American planes knocked out another seven.

The whole front from Belfort Gap to Holland is rain-splattered today and slippery with mud.

The Nazis yesterday flung three hundred fighters against British ground troops along the corridor through Nijmegen but British and Canadian planes destroyed thirty-three Nazi fighters and damaged sixteen, keeping them from getting into strafing range of the British ground forces.

One British plane was lost.

EDITORIAL

"SACRIFICE" NOT "DISASTER" . . .

The episode of the "lost army" at Arnhem may be accepted as a "sacrifice" rather than a "disaster." In the regret of losing thousands of men—1500 of them dead—we might at first be inclined to think that a blunder had been made. On more sober reflection, however, and, with all respect to the men who died and those who mourn them, we might conclude that the sacrifice may have been worthwhile if it contributed in a tactical way towards the flanking of the Siegfried Line, the entrapment of 200,000 Germans and the opening of the road to Berlin.

In fact the episode may very well have been an important factor in the final culmination of the whole Battle of Germany.

Of course, it is hard to lose our men, whether they be singly or in thousands, but such is war. We cannot hope to kill all the enemy without suffering some losses ourselves. We cannot win all the stakes we put up.

POST-WAR CONSTRUCTION . . .

Prominent men of the construction industry from Eastern Canada, visiting Prince Rupert this week and expressing keen interest in the place, suggested that it was timely now to think of what might be required here in the way of post-war construction work. They pointed out the importance of the construction industry in the economy of the country and the flexibility with which it could be rapidly changed from a wartime to a peacetime basis.

Other progressive parts of the country are interesting themselves very actively at this time in the post-war possibilities of construction industry, eighty cents out of every dollar of which is spent on labor. It is undoubtedly something that Prince Rupert too might interest itself in but, unfortunately, the most of Prince Rupert people seem to be still exclusively engrossed in their own interests in the already receding wartime boom and not much concerned about the condition which may follow the war or steps that might be taken to meet it.

KEEPING UP RESERVE ARMY . . .

It was fitting that Major-General Alexander, the inspector-general, Canadian Army, should have suggested to the men of the local reserve unit, on the occasion of his visit of inspection this week, that they are carrying on a useful work in training themselves for emergencies which, remote as they may seem at this time, might still arise. One of the jobs in war is preparing for possible surprises.

Many things are done in war which might have seemed in the light of subsequent events to have been unnecessary but which, under different circumstances, might have been of vital importance or the failing to do which might have been held tragic negligence.

As long as the war goes on, the local regiment may be considered an integral part of the country's defence machinery. It is also bridging the period until the younger men come home from the wars abroad to take over, together with the boys who will be coming of age, the function of the peace time militia.

The reserve may well carry on and citizens may consider it an honorable duty to join and take part in its activities.

BETTER TAXI SERVICE . . .

Travellers tell us that the lack of taxi service, particularly at the late night trains and boats, is creating a bad impression upon strangers coming to Prince Rupert.

Some time ago, at the instigation of the city, an effort was made to provide a more efficient taxi service in spite of the difficulties of war time restrictions and lack of manpower. For some time there appeared to be an improvement but there has been a slipping back lately, it is said, to the old unsatisfactory conditions.

There should be some way in which the taxi people could get together to render as effective and regular a service as possible with the limited facilities at hand. Possibly some co-ordinated attempt could be made to meet the essential needs.

Seining at Naden Harbor Opens—Halibut Landings Still Lightning Up

The Naden Harbor area opened to salmon purse seining at midnight Sunday, the Fisheries department office announced today. With the closing of salmon fishing in the Bella Bella area at midnight tonight, the only remaining areas in District Two open to salmon net fishing are Rivers Inlet, South Queen Charlotte Islands and Naden Harbor.

Only two cargoes of halibut arrived in port last week, making it the lowest period since the beginning of the season. On Thursday the Canadian boat Kaare II and the American boat Spray each brought in 40,000. The Kaare II sold to Storage, and the Spray to B.C. Packers. Of the 10,608,300 pounds of halibut sold in this port this season, 4,732,300 have come from American vessels and 5,876,000 from Canadian. Earlier predictions by halibut men that the season for Area Three would close by the first week in October apparently will not be borne out. The 27,000,000-pound quota is still within two and three million pounds of being filled, and there has been a general decrease in halibut fishing.

The canned salmon pack for the week ending September 23 took a surge upward to 954,719½ cases to top the previous week's pack by approximately 60,000 cases, the largest part of which was pinks. Pinks dominated in all canneries, 388,065 cases being packed. Total pack of all types in the Naas and Skeena River areas was 408,310½ cases. The Fisheries department bulletin reveals that last week's pack was the lightest of any for the last six years.

This has been a fabulous season for fishing dogfish off the Queen Charlotte Islands and off the Alaska coast. While no specific figures are available, at present, fishermen admit with modest conservatism that it was a "good year." Activity off the Islands has been called the "dogfish rush" and southern boats have been doing their best by it. Many of the local boats which have been operating off the Alaska coast have been slowed up by the considerable amount of fog which has prevailed all summer.

REGIMENT HAS JOLLY SMOKER

Personnel of Local Reserve Unit Enjoy Happy Evening

A jolly smoking concert was held last night in the Armory for the personnel of the Prince Rupert Machine Gun Regiment. The affair being conducted under the direction of Lieut. R. E. Montador to the pleasure and satisfaction of all in attendance, their number being quite substantial. Music and community singing were featured and an outstanding item was the barrel boxing contest. Refreshments were served in abundance.

The barrel boxing consisted of several bouts and the final winner was Private Alvin Daly over Private Dan Parent. Among the other barrel boxers were Sergeant Bill Stone, taking the measure of Lieut. Herman Engelage, and Lieut. Bob Parker who showed up the training officer, Capt. J. R. Hall.

Lieut. T. N. Youngs' mental telepathy act, with the co-operation of Sergeant Stuart Johnson, was amusing if not baffling.

Capt. R. G. Large pleased the audience with his vocal solos—"Gunga Din" and "Sweet Mystery of Life." Sergeant Peter Lien accompanying.

Wright Davies entertained with his interpretations of "Charge of the Light Brigade."

Sergeant Stuart Johnson also contributed to the program with recitations. Among those who took a hand in leading community singing were Lieut. Col. G. C. Oswell, Lieut. C. J. Norrington and Sergeant Major E. R. Macdonald. Accompanists were C. A. Davis and Capt. C. J. Toombs.

Shortly after 11 o'clock the affair broke up, all satisfied after a happy evening of camaraderie and geniality.
