The National War La announced to The Press last night an all cents an hour increase of all hourly-rated Canadian rail workers, retoactive to September 15. Daily workers receive a boost of 48 cents a day, while weekly paid workers will get $2.88 extra a week and monthly-paid employees are assured of $12.48 more a month.

The award was made on the application of 48 railway unions for an increase of 32 cents an hour in wages of non-operating workers. The application also asked the levelling of workers' wages in running trades to those paid on eastern United States railways which would have meant increases of approximately 25 to 32 cents an hour.

Between 100,000 and 175,000 workers are affected.

PROTECT OUR CHILDREN

A dangerous condition that requires the immediate attention of authorities exists at Rushbrook Heights where a number of Wartime Housing homes, occupied by families with small children, back onto a dangerous slope that in places becomes a sheer 200-foot precipice.

Small children, between two and five years of age and older, have been found on several occasions recently playing on the brink of the cliff.

Many of the imports were essential Brett, A. Haines, John R. Ritchie moderate oven. About 20 mir commodities, key raw materials whose importance and Henry J. Dickens. was disappropriate to their monetory value. In spite of research achievements and development of new and substitute matrials access to these former imports will still be vital to Canadian post-war industry.

Even more important are the new perspectives opening for external trade in the Pacific area. New world relations of the Soviet Union are recognized as offering opportunities for trade especially between Canada and Russian Asia. According to observers, long dormant Siberia is coming to life and its development and exploitation will require many products which Canada can supply. The recovery and rehabilitation of China and her development to a position justified by her size, population and resources, mean an expanding opportunity for Canadian trade.

In both of thtse immense areas Canada's wardeveloped heavy industries may find an opportunity for survival by meeting their expanding needs.

Maintenance of Canada's position as fifth trading nation in the pre-war world (fourth in exports) and eighth in imports) is of vital interest to every individual and group in the country. Geared to an even higher rate of industrial production our external trade is the key to post-war prosperity. To British Columbia with its expanded population, industrial plant capacity and vast shipping facilities the post-war Pacific trade is the difference between depression or healthy growth. Though not as generally recognized it may be a determining factor in the post-war prosperity of every man, woman and child in Canada.

This is the bread and butter and cash in the pocket reality behind the question of Canada's policy in the Pacific discussed by Norman M. MacLeod, press correspondent, in a recent story from Ottawa. The story deals with the uncertainty about Canada's participation in military and naval operations against Japan.

Canada's intention to have R.C.A.F. squadrons act in the Asiatic-Pacific area as a Canadian organization was announced some months ago by the Hon. C. G. Power. Other intensive preparations to have Canada play a major role in the Pacific war, made by Canadian authorities, include huge dock facilities, large air port developments and construction and development of a great naval base at Naidon, near Victoria.

The United States, while recognizing interests of Great Britain and Australia, seem to regard the war against Japan as primarily an American show and are apparently not anxious for Canadian participation. Canaddian authorities, reports Mr. Mac-Leod, are in a difficult situation to work out Canadian policy. This stems, to some extent, from lack of a recognized definate Canadian policy in the Pacific before the war. It was based on indifference of Canadians in general to Pacific problems. In face of the urgent importance of, immediate and potential, of our post-war relations with other Pacific powers it is an indifference which cannot continue.
