THE FAR EAST SITUATION . . .

With the end of the European war, the great question of hussias policies in the Far East will; become acute. An agreement on international security problems (Dumbarton Oaks), on the continuation of lend-lease supplies to Russia, perhaps even on the distribution of German reparations, can only be achieved when Russian policies in the Far East are clarified. This problem was not on the agenda at Teheran. A new inter-Allied conference in which Stalin will participate will probably take place only when Stalin is ready to agree on Russia's participation in the Far Eastern war.

From the military viewpoint, it is possible for the American-British forces to continue successfully the offensive against Japan without Russian participation. But American bases in Alaska and the Aleutians can be used effectively for direct attacks against Japan only if Russian bases are available. With Russian bases, the war could be brought to an end within a few months.

We may expect that Russia's Far Eastern policies will be influenced by her traditional interests in the Far East. Czarist Russia used to have "spheres of influence" in Mongolia and Manchuria and, to some extent, in Korea. It is precisely these areas that Japan must fight for unless she is to give up her position as a "great power." Russian policies will try to avoid great land battles against Japanese armies in Manchuria, even though Russian armies would be aided by American arms and air power. Russia will also want to keep complete control of its Far Eastern bases. She will time her participation in the war against Japan with deterioration of the Japanese position in Manchuria.

Chiang Kai-Shek will pass through the most difficult period of his political career in the next few months. Many of his political supporters inside China are doubtful about his political future. This refers in particular to some influential local war leaders and also to many intellectuals. Pessimism regarding Chiang's future is based on the belief that Japan will be defeated before there is a major drive of land armies from the West against Japan's positions in eastern and northeastern China.

If Japan's empire collapses mainly as the result of combined naval and air borne actions, China will be liberated but Chiang Kai-Shek will be left in a difficult internal position. The most important strategic areas of China are the coastal regions, which are now under the complete control of Japan. At the moment of Japan's collapse new local leaders may arise in these areas; Wang Chin-Wei, Japan's puppet, might even retain some importance. In either case, Chiang Kai-Shek would be left in a strategically unimportant area, far away from big towns and coastal regions.

Another strategic area of China is Manchuria. But the Red Army is nearer Manchuria than Chiang Kai-Shek's forces. Thus it is thearetically possible that the Red Army would be able to enter Manchuria first during a downfall of the Japanese empire, accepting unofficial protection from Russia. Such a move would complete the isolation of Chiang Kai-Shek, a possibility that is much feared by many members of the Kuomintang. Stronger material support for Chiang Kai-Shek will become possible only next year, when new supply routes from India to Chungking will be available.

For Relieving Miseries of Childrens Colds

More than two generations ago-in grandmother's day-mothers first discovered Vicks VapoRub. Today it is the most widely used home-remedy for relieving miseries of children's colds.

And here is the reason . . . The moment you rub VapoRub on the throat, chest and back at bedtime it starts to work two ways at onceand keeps on working for hours-to ease coughing spasms, help clear congestion in cold-clogged upper breathing passages, relieve muscular soreness or tightness. It promotes restful sleep. Often most of the misery of the cold is gone by morning! That's why VapoRub is so good to use when colds strike. Try it!
