TWO ARMIES JOIN

NAPLES, June 3 (CP)—The Allied Fifth and Eighth Armies joined forces east of Valmontone today as advances of several more miles were made in the drive toward Rome.

NAPLES, June 3—With Valletti and Valmontone, chief anchor points of the German defense line against the Fifth Army taken, and both ends of the line to the south of Rome cracked, the Allies are pressing closer towards Rome against heavy Nazi resistance which, however, is proving unavailing. The Eighth Army continues to press its way from the east.

It has been revealed that, since the new offensive commenced on May 11, 20,000 German prisoners have been taken by the Allies.

Today Allied troops, continuing to slug through the Alban Hills toward Rome, captured Montecastellaccio, only fourteen miles from Rome, and another column Saturday drove up the Via Cassilina toward the Capital.

The British broadcasting Corporation said that Eighth Army troops captured Alatri, five miles north of Frosinone, which is fifty-four miles from Rome.

Other Allied troops pushed along the highway from Valmontone, twenty miles southeast of Rome, one jaw of the potential trap for Nazi rearguards who fell back under the steady advances of Allied armies to the south.

Canadians, advancing along the Via Cassilina, were reported within eighteen miles of the Fifth Army forces who took Valmontone on the same day.

Alfred headquarters cautioned that, although Velletri and Valmontone, Nazi bastions on the Rome Line, have been captured, "the enemy's defensive position in that sector has not yet been broken."

REPATRIATION OF JAPANESE

VANCOUVER, June 3 (P)—The Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion passed resolutions yesterday asking for repatriation of the Japanese, the breaking up of foreign colonies in Canada, denial of land titles to the Doukhobors and refusal to accept German immigrants into Canada until "the German people present a different system of thought which will guarantee the peace of the world."

Manhunt for Killer of Three Comes to an End in Saskatchewan

BREWER, Sask., June 3 (P)—A man hunt in this eastern Saskatchewan area ended when Julius Bella, aged 24, wanted for questioning in the fatal shootings of three women and the wounding of one man, shot and killed himself when cornered by a posse.

Bella was being sought in connection with the deaths of Mrs. Anthony Osicki and two daughters, Helen, aged 19, and Mrs. Jacob Mann and the wounding of John Wolochuk.

Wallace Speaks In Siberia City

IRKUTSK, Siberia, June 3 (P)—Vice-President Henry Wallace of the United States, enroute for a visit to China and Soviet Russia and now on his way to Moscow, spoke in Russian before a Russian audience in the Irkutsk opera house last night. He referred to the necessity of full co-operation of the Allied powers not only through the war but into the period of peace to follow.

Hopes to See Real Old Age Pension Plan

OTTAWA, June 3 (P)—Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, minister of labor, said yesterday that he hoped to see the day when there would be a full scale contributory old age pension plan for every one in operation in Canada. He acknowledged the lead the trade unions had taken in pressing for old age pensions.

Members were agreed that old age pensions should be entirely federal responsibility.

Sequel of War Should Be Great Development of Prince Rupert And District, McKelvie Thinks

The sequel of this war and the practical recognition it has finally brought of the importance of Prince Rupert's position in the Pacific theatre will be a great postwar development of this port as a shipping and industrial centre, it is believed by Bruce McKelvie, Victoria representative of the Vancouver

Province and other Southland newspapers and one time editor of the Prince Rupert Daily News, who is in the city for a visit of a few days. Central and Northern British Columbia should receive a major share of attention in postwar rehabilitation projects.

"The last war set Prince Rupert back 30 years," said Mr. McKelvie, "but this war I believe, will result in the fulfillment of the Laurier vision of trans-Pacific commerce through here, the movement of shipping to and from Alaska and the establishment of industries which will complement the opening up of the central interior hinterland."

The better understanding with Soviet Russia that war has brought will, Mr. McKelvie believes, have a direct result in the establishment of shipping trade between the ports of Vladivostok and Prince Rupert.

Mr. McKelvie looks with favor upon the route northward from Hazelton for a highway connection between Central British Columbia and the Alaska Highway. He also thinks there should be a railway to open up the Groundhog coal fields, coming out at Stewart or Topley but is inclined to feel that the funnel for the Peace River should be through Prince George to Vancouver.

Mr. McKelvie has come north for the express purpose of writing articles about this district for the Province newspaper. Proceeding through the interior next week to Prince George, he will then fly north into the Peace River country before heading southward.

While here Mr. McKelvie is busy renewing old acquaintances and interviewing leading citizens to get views and atmosphere for the articles he will write.

POSITION OF ROME

Will Not be Attacked Unless Nazis Makes it Necessary, Says Allied Statement

LONDON, June 3 (P)—The German TransOcean Agency today quoted a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman as saying that Rome "can be regarded as free" of German forces. The propaganda agency quoted an official statement on the Pope's plea not to destroy Rome.

"On the German side everything has been done for months to preserve Rome from such a fate. Rome today can be regarded as a city free from armed forces."

Meanwhile an Allied statement said that Rome "would be attacked only insofar as Germany uses the city for military purposes."

General Sir Henry Maitland-Wilson said today that the Allies would do everything in their power to spare Rome and both His Majesty's government and that of the United States hoped that the enemy would not "make it necessary" to attack the Eternal City.

United States Raises Halibut Price Ceiling But Differential Stays

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 3 (CP)—Fishermen's prices on drawn halibut rose 1½c per pound yesterday on order of the United States Office of Price Administration which also raised the prices on all halibut landed at Alaskan ports. The order makes No. 1 halibut (10 to 60 pounds dressed weight) 15½c per pound in Seattle and 13½c in Prince Rupert.

The increase of the 1½c per pound was made to adjust transportation differential between Alaska ports and Prince Rupert. Prices for halibut heads and cheeks will be set after the first catches are landed in Seattle.

Airmen May Come Here

OTTAWA, June 3 (P)—Royal Canadian Air Force air crew who have served three years overseas are eligible for repatriation to Canada, Hon. C. MacMillan, Parliamentary secretary to Hon. C. Power, minister of air, announced yesterday.

CHECK UP AIRPLANE WRECKAGE

VANCOUVER, June 3 (P)—A search party has left for an isolated spot on Vancouver Island where wreckage of an airplane is reported lying somewhere between Nanaimo and Youbou in the Cowichan district.

Officials of the Western Air Command said there was no proof that the machine was a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber which disappeared Monday with five on board.

Budget Coming In Two Weeks

OTTAWA, June 3 (P)—Hon. J. L. Ilsley, minister of finance, said yesterday that the budget would be brought down in two weeks. All reports which had been published about what the budget might contain were speculative rumors, the minister declared. Neither he nor the government knew what was in the budget and they would not know until a short time before it was presented.

NAZIS DENT RUSS LINES

But Wedge is Termed Insignificant and Enemy Suffers Heavy Losses

LONDON, June 3 (P)—Heavy United States bombers were out over western and southern Europe again yesterday and there were further night raids by the Royal Air Force and Royal Canadian Air Force. Seventeen British planes failed to return but all Canadian machines got back safely.

West wall defences and crumbling rail facilities were the principal targets of the overnight attacks against the continent in which at least seven German fighters were destroyed.

Allied daylight formations raced across the Channel today to carry the current aerial offensive against the continent into the sixteenth day. Today's raiders hit Nazi coastal fortifications in the Pas de Calais and Boulogne areas of France.

Prince George Fires Are Out

Not Even a "Fishing Village" . . .

There is no denying that Prince Rupert has lost heavily of its position as a halibut fishing port to Vancouver—if not in volume of landings certainly in residence of the boats and operators. First, the curtailment of production in the interests of conservation of the fishery brought about conditions which caused some of the boats to leave here for the southern port which, if it was not then the halibut headquarters, was the headquarters of other lines of fishing endeavour. Then came the war and the shoving around of the fleet as far as moorage and service facilities here were concerned in favor of war activities.

Meanwhile, pre-occupied by the war activities which have produced a boom partially at least of temporary nature and which we can even now detect to be receding, we have permitted our halibut fishing fleet in large portion to drift away from us with little protest about the matter. It may not be so long before we will be missing real seriously as a part of our local economy the resident halibut fishery which for many years was our principal mainstay.

One thing we could very appropriately do at this time is to continue to press for the re-establishment or extension of the moorage facilities, lack of which has been one of the principal factors in our losing our halibut supremacy to Vancouver. If we are content to permit inaction now in this vital port requirement here, we must be satisfied later to let Vancouver be the "fishing village" instead of Prince Rupert.

What to do With German Army . . .

Some day in the not too distant future the once mighty German army will go down to final defeat.

When that day arrives, the Allied Nations will be posed with one of the knottiest and most interesting problems arising from the war. What is to be done with that army, which for the better part of five years ranged up and down and across Europe leaving in its wake such destruction as had never before been wrought by any military machine?

Will it be simply broken up and allowed to return home, there to take up their interrupted tasks and the new one of rebuilding Germany? Or will it be made to participate in the reconstruction of the lands it ravaged?

There has already been lively discussion of the issue. Recent published reports on the deliberations of the European advisory council in London have indicated that there are divergent views on the subject among the three major powers.

FISHING IN ADRIATIC

Canadians Find Out That Other Italian Marine Species Tasty and Others Not So Delectable

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent
ORTONA, Italy, June 3 —

Triglie, polpi, calamari, mazzalina, milo, angioletti, sepi.

One by one these seven fish from the Adriatic went into the simmering pot of olive oil to join at least another seven species being prepared for the noon day meal. A handful of red peppers, some pimento and a cup of water and you had a dish fit for a king, or an Italian fisherman.

The occasion was a day-Lieut. Bill Boss of Ottawa, Lloyd Moore, CBC engineer from Richmond, Que., and I spent at sea aboard the motor trawler Michele, dragging the Adriatic for fish. We were guests of the Fronzi brothers of Ortona and their crew of seven and we sailed in company with two other trawlers licensed by British naval authorities to fish within certain strict limits.

Master of the vessel was Bastiano Fonzi, a bearded gentleman of 63 who proudly told us he had been a fisherman since the age of three and had never been away from his native Ortona except to fish. He could neither write nor spell his name.

The fishermen recounted how, when the Germans came to Ortona, fishermen scuttled their boats rather than turn them over to the enemy and the Michele herself spent some months on the bottom of Ortona harbor.

Bastiano, dressed in jacket and trousers with more patches than whole cloth, had his home mined. The tattered clothes he was wearing, including hand-knitted long underwear, were his only possessions.

SOME WIERD MARINE LIFE

When the net was hauled in the first time, the fishermen stood bare-footed on the deck as 200 pounds of the weirdest assortment of marine life imaginable slithered over their toes. Deftly they sorted the fish into three categories, boxed them, washed them and packed them away under a tarpaulin.

Into the lunch pot went the olive oil and spices, followed by squirming, ink-jetting squids and other octopus-like creatures.

These, they said, took a long time to boil. In the meantime the entree was served, a transparent little fish with great blue eyes which we were invited to eat raw. We did . . .

By this time the pot was ready for its second layer of fish and in they went, some cleaned, others still very much alive. We wondered what one did about the insides, but asked no questions for we feared we would find out all too soon.

Next course was a salt water roach, roasted on a spit and as tasty as brook trout. We ate four of these apiece then turned to the pot pourri, the bubbling stew.

The squids, a bright red by now, were our first effort and we nibbled at them until Bastiano advised us the idea was to put the whole thing in your mouth at the same time. Easy to say, but it takes practice to manage eight legs at once.

However, if Bastiano could do it so could we, though a photograph would describe better than words just how successful we were.

From squids we tackled the other fish one by one, including those with the insides. Maybe the Italians ate those entrails but this was one place where we balked and surreptitiously slipped them over the side.

The meal took well over an hour and at its close we had little interest in the afternoon's fishing. The sun was warm and we lay back on the deck and slept.

In late afternoon the net was hauled in a second time and another great load was dumped on the deck. This time, in addition to more of the morning species, there was a sturgeon, which brought joy and a promise of considerable money to the fishermen.

The net revealed other interesting oddments. There were three bits of airplane, a bullet pouch, several chunks of shrapnel and an olive tree. Bastiano said they dragged in the wing of a bomber a few days earlier.

We returned to port at dusk with a new understanding of Adriatic fishing. We were given several pounds from our catch as

Halibut Landings Are Well Under Way — Summary For First Week

More than half a million pounds of halibut were brought to Prince Rupert fish buyers in the ten days between May 25, when the Arctic I brought in the season's first catch, and June 2. Friday was the biggest day for landings of the season so far with 236,500 pounds landed from 11 Canadian and two American boats. The Canadian boats brought in 189,000 pounds, which sold at the regular prices of 18½¢ and 16½¢. American boats arrived with 47,500 pounds which sold at the American ceiling of 15¢ and 13½¢.

Thirty Canadian boats returned to port in the ten day period bringing in 488,000 pounds. Three American boats have arrived during the same period, bringing in 744,500.

Largest single catch brought in so far was by the Dovey B whose 33,000 pound load was bought by Allin yesterday. The Fredelia III brought in 30,000 pounds on Tuesday, selling to Cold Storage.

The Sigs came close to scoring a number of times but didn't succeed until well into the second half. Hilder, outside right, gained the equalizer when he slipped through the Reserves' defence and booted the ball into the lower right-hand side of their goal.

Reserves went ahead by a count of 2 to 1 a little later when Cameron, outside left, picked up a corner kick and headed it between the Signals' posts. Less than a minute later, Pavlikis, inside right, snared a pass from Rivers and booted it home to give Reserves their third and final counter.

CREAM SOUPS — Delicious and nourishing, are capable of many variations to make them year-round stand-by.

Laura Pepper, chief of the Agriculture Department Consumer Section, suggests a "noodle" cream soup: the base

four cups of well seasoned

sauce to which is added

one cup of mashed, pureed or chopped cooked vegetables or a single vegetable or a combination. Season to taste, and thoroughly, and serve garnished with croutons, paprika,

gested seasonings include a dash

ach or greens; chopped mint or green peas and a bit of

CHEESE AND WATERCRESS: Cream Canadian cheese by

TURKISH TOWELS and towelling are scarce these days so it is more important than ever to save every old bath towel and wash cloth on hand.

The Prices Board suggests

these hints on towel conservation:

Darn the smallest hole as soon as it appears; reinforce thin places with machine stitching;

cut very large bath towels in half to make two smaller ones;

make one usable towel out of two badly worn ones by quilting

them together with diagonal lines of machine stitching;

make new wash cloths out of the best parts of worn bath

towels.
