The Power of Churchill . . .

Prime Minister Winston Churchill plainly told the British House of Commons to endorse his policy of intervention in Greece, Italy and Belgium—or else. So the House, without wasting any time about it, gave the Prime Minister's government a thumping endorsement and mandate—notwithstanding the criticism of the most of the British press, with the notable exception of Mrs. Anthony Eden's Yorkshire Post, to say nothing of the attitude of the United States officialdom. So it took Churchill only a few hours to get a vote of confidence and there was no political manoeuvring or pussyfooting about it either. He will carry on as he is doing in connection with intervention in liberated countries.

Increasingly stiff, tenacious German resistance behind defences in depth reinforced by reserves drained from somewhere; rain, sleet, and mud, and the ever-recurring problem of an attacking army to accumulate supplies for a fresh advance — all have combined to hold back the Allied drive on the ground.

Right or wrong, Churchill has the faculty and the power of getting things done. His dynamic force has done much to bring Britain and the Allies so far and so well in the war. Evidently, the British people have no intention of "dismissing" Churchill as long as the war is on. Of course, what will happen after that remains to be seen. But that is another story.

The Political Front . . .

Prime Minister Mackenzie King says that "the war situation is more serious than can be imagined." We suppose that Mr. King is speaking more of the political than the military phase of the war. Certainly, as far as our side is concerned at present, the military aspect is developing favorably.

Some of the political angles are, however, disconcerting enough, particularly those arising in the newly liberated countries which are still seething with uncertainty, intrigue and general confusion.

We may well expect that there will be many problems and situations to be faced. There may be events which we do not understand at the time. Actions may be taken for which we cannot see the point. The more cautious will wish to wait and see before expressing opinions even on actions which may seem at the time to be inexplicable and even unreasonable. For instance, it is safe to assume that, behind the events which are now taking place in such countries as Greece, Italy and Belgium, there is more than meets the eye and ear. We can but accept the word of those who should be in a position to know and one of these is Premier King who says the situation is serious.

Air Arm Takes Over . . .

While the ground advance has slowed its tempo for the moment all along the Western Front, it is worth while watching what the Allies are doing behind the German lines. The offensive is still driving forward by air, striking at German sources of supply and lines of communications.

There are other things that should receive the immediate attention of the city council. Take the sewers for instance. Do the city fathers know there are dry closets and rotten septic tanks within a few blocks of the City Hall?

For the $40,000 proposed to spend on the bus line the City could lay enough sewer to serve two hundred homes and surely it should be a primary objective for the Council to ensure sanitary conditions for the homes of our citizens. As for the bus line, I think the present operators are giving satisfactory service and I don't think the city could do any better.

I say, vote against the by-law.

Bank of Montreal President Asks For Realism on Post-War Problems

George W. Spinney Declares That An Economic Millennium Cannot Materialize By Order-in-Council

B. C. Gardner, General Manager, Reviews Changes In Bank Act At Annual Meeting of Shareholders

Urging that the wares of the panacea vendors be treated with a "nice sense of discrimination," George W. Spinney, C.M.G., president of the Bank of Montreal told the 127th annual meeting of shareholders that the true post-war objectives, as he saw them, were full employment arising out of productive activity and operating under conditions of individual liberty to produce a high standard of living in real terms of goods and services.

Mr. Spinney said that he did not know of any way in which these ends can be achieved except through production on the broadest possible scale and the freest possible exchange of the resultant products within Canada's own borders and beyond them.

The president warned against the assumption "that a post-war economic millennium, in which everybody will be more secure, richer and presumably happier," can materialize by Order-in-Council. "But to take an honestly realistic look at the post-war prospect," he continued, "is to recognize that the reconversion of industry to civilian production, the re-employment in peace-time pursuits of those now in the Armed Forces and in war work and the restoration of our external trade on satisfactory basis will involve problems of tremendous magnitude. And after giving full value to everything that governmental agencies can usefully do to aid the transition from war to peace, there will remain a vast area of effort and opportunity that will challenge to the utmost our courage, ingenuity and powers of co-operation."

The Real Basis of Welfare
In his reference to the "panacea vendors," Mr. Spinney declared that he shall also need to have a clear-headed appreciation of the true significance of measures which may redistribute goods and services but which themselves do not increase productivity. Some of these measures were undoubtedly desirable, but we should not fall into the error of regarding them as short-cuts to national prosperity. He said that full employment was not necessarily wholly synonymous with material welfare and that a high national income was not necessarily the end of economic policy. It was at this stage of his address that he emphasized that the only way he knew in which these ends could be achieved was "through production on the broadest possible scale and the freest possible exchange of the resultant products within our own borders and beyond them."

As to Canada's post-war possibilities Mr. Spinney said that he was no "pessimist," and continued: "Canada will start out into the post-war era with some great advantages. Due to the tremendous stimulus of war production, our economy has become better balanced and diversified as between the primary industries and manufacturing than ever before. Our population has acquired new skills. We have brought about a veritable revolution in productive methods and techniques that is full of promise for the future. I think also it is fair to say that our reputation and stature among nations of good-will has become enhanced, a factor of no small significance from the standpoint of external trade. Moreover, we have been able to accomplish our vast mobilization of material resources without subjecting our economy to the stresses and our people to the cruel injustices of inflation. It seems to me that our hope of achieving our post-war aims depends in large measure upon maintaining these advantages."

Practical Objectives
The desirability of defeating inflation was emphasized by the speaker, who declared that it will be essential that the success achieved thus far in holding down prices and living costs be maintained and carried through into the period of post-war readjustment.
Discussing the post-war relationship between government and individual enterprise, he expressed the view that a supreme dependence on government would represent the negation of the qualities most necessary to an enterprising and democratic economy. However, he saw the costs of government continuing at a higher level than before the war, adding that under such conditions "the distribution of the cost of government becomes a matter of peculiar importance, for if these costs are distributed in such a way that incentives are diminished and individuals or corporations are thereby discouraged or deterred from entering into productive undertakings, then the net result will be a loss to the Canadian people in terms of employment and living standards. He urged the encouragement of the processes of production and interchange through private agencies rather than through the channels of government spending.

Maintaining Exports
Discussing foreign trade as a factor in developing our natural resources and maintaining prosperity, Mr. Spinney mentioned the problem of providing ways and means whereby our foreign customers can pay for the high volume of Canadian goods we should like to see them buy. In this connection he referred to our very direct and definite interest in the proposals for an International Monetary Fund and an International Bank for Reconstruction and development recently put forward at Bretton Woods. He felt that the successful application of the principles underlying these two proposals could do much to encourage and facilitate the flow of international commerce upon which the fortunes of all nations of good-will so greatly depend.

Banks and Their Reserves
In referring to the decennial revision of The Bank Act, Mr. Spinney dealt particularly with the subject of Inner or Contingent Reserves which occupied a substantial part of the hearings of the Banking and Commerce Committee. He referred to the custom of setting up such reserves as having been recognized from the very inception of banking legislation, and said: "The history of Canadian banking indicates clearly that many of the banking difficulties of earlier days would have been avoided if proper provision had been made for unforeseen losses. This applies not only to bank failures but to bank mergers, which in many cases would have been unnecessary if adequate reserves had been set up."
The Bank of Montreal had followed the practice of setting up such reserves and the speaker expressed doubt if "we could have weathered all the storms of the past 127 years, and continued to play our part in serving the community, if the management in good times had not prudently set aside reasonable sums to meet the inevitable change in business conditions." Without reviewing in detail the long discussion in Committee, Mr. Spinney said that it was made clear that reasonable provision for losses must be considered as an expense of doing business, and, therefore, as a charge in computing taxable income.

Tax Adjustments and Earnings
B. C. Gardner, General Manager of the bank, dealt with the accounts and referred to the effects on its operation of the Bank Act revision.
He pointed out that, while gross earnings for the past year had shown an increase, net earnings after federal taxes (which amounted to $3,725,000) were somewhat lower than for previous year at $3,194,000 as compared with $3,303,000. The reduction in net earnings he pointed out, was a result of the adjustments in taxation to which the President had referred. Gross earnings had increased, he said, despite a lower average yield on investments and a reduced level of commercial loans.
The General Manager pointed out that, although increased volume of business had caused somewhat crowded conditions in some offices, the Bank had adhered to its decision against extensions to the buildings in wartime, but that interior alterations had been made in some branches to provide more space.

vide the same high type of banking service to which the Canadian people are accustomed and which they accept as a matter of course. "The banking system, like all other fields of human activity," he saw in this connection, "is always capable of improvement and must change with changing times, but it is a system that has served the country well and I am confident will continue to do so in the days that lie ahead."

Reconversion Problems
In pointing out that business activity in the country continued at high levels throughout the past year, Mr. Gardner stated that the business outlook is influenced by uncertainty as to the extent and nature of war production requirements. It is probable, he said, that in the ensuing twelve months, major problems of reconversion of industry from war to civilian output will become an important element in the business picture.
The General Manager concluded his address by paying a tribute to the staff of the Bank and reviewing plans for re-absorption of those employees now on military service. It was planned, he said, to provide for refresher training for all for readjustment to civilian life.

"Briefly," he said, "it is our intention to place these officers on the salary and, within a reasonable time, in the position which they would normally have expected to attain had they been in the continuous service of the Bank. Our object is to see that they have not lost ground through their service to their country."

LOCAL CHINESE GIRL

some instances of the Chinese people's terrible will to live. She has witnessed acts of self-preservation which the plight of the country has made common.

She is a veteran of air attacks. In the village where she lived with her mother, the citizens had all dug air raid shelters under their houses and were compelled to use them often.

While awaiting air transport from Chungking, Bernice visited the nearby city of Kun Ming. Both this city and the capital had been targets of periodic air raids for years, but the raids had decreased somewhat while she was there.

Only Passenger Over the "Hump"

When she did obtain room on a plane to Calcutta she had lots of it. For some unknown reason she was the only passenger on one of the huge transports that haul supplies into China and carry refugees and officials out.

At 13 Bernice crossed the "roof of the world" and glided down the valleys to Calcutta. There she was destined to wait another two months to obtain steamer passage. Then she went to Bombay. At the western port of India a large American liner loaded troops and civilians and headed with many intervening stops, for San Pedro.

The kindness of the many Chinese aboard was one of the bright spots in Bernice's journey. These friends, Chinese Americans, turned out to be angels of mercy when, as a Canadian, Bernice was held at the immigration office at San Pedro.

Two of them not only rescued her from the clutches of officialdom, but made it possible for her to celebrate her 14 birthday on November 22 by visiting Earl Carroll's night club in Hollywood. Later, they went out of their way to accompany her to the Canadian border at Blaine, where she was met by her sister, Violet.

It won't be long, either, until Bernice sees Albert again. The family has received word that he has obtained leave from flying transports over the "hump" and is now in New York. They expect him home for Christmas.

Bernice just missed seeing her other brother, Cedric, in the Orient. After serving as an R.C.A.F. civilian flying instructor, he arrived in Chungking to pilot C.N.A.C. transport planes a week after she left.

Six Candidates File Nomination Papers Friday

Nomination papers of five aldermanic candidates and two school board candidates were filed with the city clerk yesterday.

Shortly before noon four Civic Labor Federation candidates—all of whom hold seats on the present city council—presented themselves along with their sponsors and seconders and filed formal intention of competing for re-election.

They were: Alexander Sinclair, sponsored by T. H. Sorenson, seconded by H. M. Daggett; George E. Hills, sponsored by K. F. Harding, seconded by Barney Roald; W. H. Brett, sponsored by D. S. Snidal, seconded by W. J. H. Deane; J. S. Black, sponsored by Leon Sandvar, seconded by J. J. Gillis.

Earlier, J. H. Mair, Non-Partisan candidate for alderman, filed his papers. He was sponsored by C. H. Elkins and seconded by W. F. Stone.

Norman Bellis was first of the Civic Labor Federation candidates for the school board to file papers. He was sponsored by W. H. Brett and seconded by J. S. Black.

Mrs. Emily Rothwell, another school board candidate sponsored by the Civic Labor Federation, is proposed by Mrs. Alvina Dickens and seconded by Constantine Michaloff.

A third seat on the school board will not be contested by the Labor Federation, it is understood.

COMEDY IS ROMANTIC

Donald O'Connor, Susanna Foster, Peggy Ryan Star in "This Is the Life"

"This is the Life," which comes Monday and Tuesday to the screen of the Capitol Theatre, is comedy romance strengthened by a warm and appealing human story. The film stars Donald O'Connor, Susanna Foster and Peggy Ryan, with Louise Albritton almost as fully important in the story's telling.

Basic plot of "This is the Life" concerns a foolishly romantic young girl with bright prospects for a singing career who becomes infatuated with an older man, in the person of handsome Patric Knowles, and of the ingenious ends to which her small town boy friend, O'Connor, goes to restore her to himself.

The youth incidentally propels Knowles into the arm of his divorced wife portrayed with striking effect by the statuesque Miss Albritton.

Situations are developed plausibly and the dialogue is bright giving the film excellent pace. Miss Foster's singing is of the quality which made her a sensation in the "Phantom of the Opera" recently.

A competent supporting cast includes Dorothy Peterson, Jonathan Hale, Eddie Quillan, Frank Jenks, Ray Eberle and Bobby Brooks.

Information About Pigeon Is Wanted

VANCOUVER, Dec. 9 (C)—The Western Air Command has requested that anyone knowing the route of a carrier pigeon from a missing Canso flying boat which arrived exhausted at the air base here or anything about a message the bird might have been carrying contact air force headquarters at the soonest possible moment. It was thought that the bird might have visited a pigeon loft enroute back here to obtain food and water and a message container might have been removed by someone unaware of its importance.
