RARE NORTHERN FISH CAUGHT OFF GRAHAM ISLAND

A rare catch of Kodiak herring—a fish usually found only in Alaskan waters — was brought to port recently by the halibut boat Alcan. The Alcan, skippered by Andrew Hansen. was fishing black cod off the west coast of Graham Island when its crew sighted indications of the northern fish.

Setting nets at a 20-fathom depth the crew allowed the boat to drift all night. In the morning they were rewarded by a sizable catch, much of which they later gave to their friends around the city.

Mothers might not hold with the suggestion that buying Johnny something that "won't show dirt" suggests that you don't care how dirty he is if it doesn't show.

MAKE IT PERMANENT

The fine spirit of co-operation being shown by the newly-established Highway Celebration Committees in towns along the line is a precious thing that should be maintained after its immediate purpose has vanished into Time.

When civic and business leaders in Prince Rupert, Terrace, Smithers, Hazelton, and even as far away as Prince George can recognize their commonality of interest sufficiently to make the success of the celebration a joint concern, it opens the way to a permanent co-operative effort such as has not been attempted so far.

In definition, the Daily News suggests that these temporary celebration committees be given permanent status in their communities as district booster committees, and that their heads, or some other member, be delegated to act on co-ordinating committees with members from other towns along the line.

In making the suggestion we do not ignore the co-operation already displayed by individuals and service clubs, but merely hope that this could be expanded.

Obviously all the towns named, and others, dangle from the same string. What benefits one helps the others. A solid north-central booster committee could do a lot of good in the effort which must be part of Northern British Columbia's quest for recognition and prosperity.

An anxious young officer over there asks, "Are the people at home getting tired of it?" Why should they? Actually, what have they done to be tired of?
