Canadian Press Correspondents Tell of Important Part Our Men Played in Smashing of Gustav Line Which no Longer Exists Now

NAPLES, May 18 (CP) — The British Eighth bombers took part in today's Army captured Cassino, Nazi stronghold on the road raids on Rumania and Serbia, to Rome, and the Americans took Formia, further south, headquarters announced today. Both Cassino and the ruined monastery overlooking it were captured. A substantial part of a defending German parachute divisison was wiped out. "The Gustav Line has now ceased to exist," said a special Allied commentator. The British carried out the final assault on Cassino, Polish troops took the monastery. The first announcement of the final fall of Cassino, Nazi fortress which had stalemated the Allies' march on Rome for more than five months, came from Berlin and it was some time before confirmation came from Allied sources. The Germans said that the Nazi troops had withdrawn from the town without interference and evacuated all heavy equipment suc-

Cassino fell following a twoway surrounding drive, British forces from the southwest and Polish from the northwest. There was great artillery bombardment. The evacuation of the town and the monastry by the Germans took place late yesterday as did the - withdrawal from Formia before the Americans. The remnant of the first German parachute division was trapped in Cassino.

The Canadian Armored Brigade played a prominent role in the smashing of the German's Gustav Line after a lunge across the Rapido River, Doug How, Canadian Press war correspondent with the Eighth Army in Italy reported today. Canadian tanks, together with infantry of an Indian division, advanced more than two miles in two days after attacking last Friday and captured the villages of Santangelo and Pignataro, Canadian casualties were light. A few of the tanks, put out of action by mines or bogging, were totally lost. Douglas Amaron, another Canadian Press war correspondent, reported that the British Eighth Army has maintained a INVASION steady advance toward the Hitler Line and, in the face of bitter German opposition, the struggle has been bloody all along the front.
