Serious Question of Rats . . .

Due to the increasing incidence and wider distribution of rat-borne diseases — notably typhus fever, plague and tularemia, the federal, provincial and local health departments have been making surveys of rat conditions and studies of the various methods of rat control and extermination. From experience over a number of years, it is found that rat exclusion and continuous extermination, both must be applied, to obtain appreciable control of these rodents.

The ideal objective, of course, would be rat-proof buildings, protected garbage containers and properly operated incinerators for disposal of all combustible refuse. This goal cannot be reached until the public realizes the immense economic losses incurred by these pests and that their presence in a community is a constant menace to the public's health and welfare. Therefore, extermination must be carried on until the public wakes up to the dangers of rat infestation.

In addition to huge economic losses caused by rats, they are known to be the causative factors in the spread of several serious communicable diseases — bubonic plague, typhus fever, infectious jaundice, tapeworm and rat bite fever. These diseases are not unknown in B.C. and this northwest coast. A recent news item appearing in the press tells of the presence of plague in the Port of Tacoma, Washington, where the public health authorities were forced to enact special quarantine and fumigation measures for the protection of the health of the people. Such a condition of affairs might easily be brought about in Prince Rupert, where, according to a recent authoritative estimates, there is a rat population of at least 6,000. With an increase in shipping to and from foreign ports, Prince Rupert must be on guard against any potential or actual serious outbreak of rat-borne disease.

DRY DOCK DISPLAY

Fine Painting, Two Cups Depict Dry Dock Accomplishments

A display that is attracting a considerable amount of attention and arousing very favorable comment is the oil painting of the "Westview Park" in the window of the city ticket office of the Canadian National Railways on Third Ave.

The painting is the work of Frank Bird, an employee in the dry dock who has a wide experience in such work. His drawings are a regular feature of the dry dock and shipyard plant magazine "Builders for Freedom." Mr. Bird also was an illustrator at one time for "Purple and Gold," the publication of the famous Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The picture on display is a realistic view of the "Westview Park," one of the many 10,000-ton cargo ships built in this dry dock.

Flanking the picture are the two Devenish cups won by the Prince Rupert Dry Dock and Shipyard in the Seventh and Eighth Victory Loan campaigns. These trophies were awarded for competition among the 13 divisions of the western region of the Canadian National Railways by W. R. Devenish, vice-president, C.N.R. western region. The division gaining the highest number of points awarded on the basis of percentage of quota subscribed and percentage of employees subscribing wins the cup. As the Prince Rupert Dry Dock and Shipyard led the whole western region in both campaigns they are now the proud possessors of two cups. Incidentally, when the cabinet holding the two cups was on display in the shipyard the most frequently heard comment was that there seemed hardly enough room for the next cup.

The local dry dock and shipyard is proud of its record of achievement in the building of minesweepers and cargo ships as well as in the repairs to hundreds

The local workroom will be open every afternoon next week except Saturday. More workers are urgently needed in order to meet the above emergency.

More Than 1,000,000 Pounds of Halibut Landed Here Each Week Since Season Opened—Season Closed at Midnight Last Night After Week of Storms On Coast

More than a million pounds of halibut a week were landed at Prince Rupert during the six-week Area Two season which closed at midnight last night, making the season one of the busiest experienced here in years. While a few of the larger boats will continue to fish halibut from more distant Area Three, the bulk of the Prince Rupert fleet will scatter to an assortment of marine tasks, some dog-fishing, black cod fishing, trolling, and a few packing. All will continue busy during the good summer weather.

Total landings at this port for the six-week period were 6,790,500 pounds. Only during two weeks of that period were there arrivals of less than a million pounds. Landings from

A large school of halibut which was in Hecate Straits at the beginning of the season was responsible for a feverish scramble in which fishing boats scuttled in and out of Prince Rupert to unload and return in the shortest possible time. Because of this, the more distant ports received far less halibut than in other years, their crews not wanting to take the time to make long runs to port.

On three days during the early part of the season, landings here were well over 400,000 pounds a day and, on the peak day, arrivals totalled 524,000 pounds. This heavy flow of halibut was responsible for the International Commission announcing on May 31 that the season for Area Two would end on June 12.

However, the ideal weather which favored the coast during May, did not hold in the early part of June and the fish which had been so plentiful at that time also began to run short. For this reason, the Commission announced on June 8 that the season would be extended three days to June 15, allowing three extra days to fill the 24,000,000 pound quota.

Extremely bad weather last week tied up fleet operations for three days and Prince Rupert fishermen, feeling that they had been cheated out of the extra period allowed by the commission, made a bid for a further extension. This bid was backed by the Prince Rupert Fishermen's Co-operative and the Canadian Fish and Cod Storage company but was turned down by the Commission. The Commission explained that, in spite of bad weather, landings at all coast ports brought the total up to the quota.

The storm which swept the coast last week-end was one of the most violent June outbreaks in years caused the loss of several vessels. Last week a boat known as the Eight Bells was lost in Alaska waters, and Tuesday the Vancouver boat V-196 B foundered off the Percy Islands and two of her crew of four died of exposure. Missing in Hecate Strait is the Prince Rupert boat Awaje with a crew of three.

Spring salmon fishing has been good on both the Naas and Skeena rivers and an increasing number of boats are trolling. Last week there were 46 boats on the Skeena and this week they were augmented by several more, some of them from the south. The run on the Skeena this week was described as very good although figures will not be available until the inspectors return with their reports on Monday.
