The veteran steamer, Prince George, thirty-five-year-old coastal liner and one of ritish Columbia's best known and most popular ships, perished today on Pennock land in Tongass Narrows near Ketchikan in one of the greatest marine disasters in ast history. The ship, which left here at midnight last night for the Alaska port nder command of Capt. Neil MacLean, took fire from the stokehold soon after arving there at 8 o'clock this morning. ### Home Builders-

Association Organized

To group prospective home builders in Prince Rupert for the purpose of better availing themselves of the advantages of the National Housing Act, the Prince Rupert Housing Association was officially formed at a meeting of interested persons in the city council chamber last night. There are thirty-five members so far enrolled. Most of these formally expressed their interest in the possibility of building homes in a new subdivision just beyond Borden Rupert, coalition candidate for Street on the northern slope of Acropolis above Park Avenue and a short distance from the centre of the city. Negotiations will be opened with the city with a view to obtaining the property for distribution in fifty-foot lots to members of the Association.

One Thousand Men Still Working

Although the work of building big 10,000-ton freighters at the local dry dock has been finished, the local yard is still being kept active with the construction of two China coasters and general repair work. There are about 1000 men employed and the work now in hand should keep the payroll up to that strength until the end of the year by which time it is possible some other work may be lined up to provide a continuation of the operation. One of the principal objects of a local mission, which is now in Montreal and will be in Ottawa next week is to urge the continuation of work at the local plant either in shipbuilding or some other postwar activity.

The shipbuilding accomplishments of the local yard in World War II were really notable. Early in the war building ships were rushed into being and the yard otherwise hastily put into full commission. First four Bangor class mine-sweepers were built and then the ways were altered for the construction of the 10,000-ton freighters, thirteen of which were built.

During the height of wartime ship construction there were three eight-hour shifts per day on a full weekly basis with a payroll which reached a peak of two thousand. With the completion of the freighters, work started on the construction of the two China coasters which is now proceeding.

In addition to the new construction, the yarn was also handling a large amount of repair work including overhaul, refitting and repairing of naval vessels. More recently three large Russian freighters received extensive renovation at the Published every afternoon except Sunday by Prince Rupert Daily News Limited, Third Avenue, Prince Rupert, British Columbia. # Let's Give Rupert a Break . . .

Let's face the facts. Let's talk turkey. Prince Rupert has a big merchandising problem on its hands at the moment. And the Public Relations Committee needs the help and assistance of every citizen of the community to meet this problem.

Hardly a day goes by that a stranger doesn't ask whether it is possible to farm in this district, whether one can work outdoors the year around or whether one can go to catch big fish. The answers the stranger receives from a dozen or so different persons might average up into the truth but it is doubtful. So many of the citizens have so many views about the weather, the prospects, the prosperity, the living conditions and the way of life in Northern British Columbia that it is difficult for a newcomer to find out what it's all about up here.

To solve such a situation, which is a common one, several semi-public agencies in the United States and Canada have organized annual clinics for persons who cater to the public. At these clinics they have told waitresses, service station men, transportation employees and hotel clerks what is the proper answer to the 100 most common questions asked by visitors. Naturally there is a note of propaganda in the answers but there is also an effort to tell the truth and to explain the unfavorable aspects in a favorable light. This is what may be called merchandising.

The citizens of this area travel far and wide and by their actions and words leave indelible impressions on other people. To the south, millions of people are yearning for knowledge of the great Northwest and for a taste of the real north. This makes it possible for a person who has spent only a few days in the Pacific Northwest riding up and down the inside passage, or over the Skeena Highway, to go south and lecture or write on any and all phases of the north.

All of this makes the mind of the stranger to this country open to favorable or unfavorable impression. Some have a rude awakening when they arrive here and are told that the climate is tough, fishing rotten. the people pessimistic and the cost of living high. But if it happens to be a beautiful day, the trip north has been excellent, and the visitor has run into the right people here, he is apt to go away believing that Prince Rupert is an ample portion of Valhalla.

What Prince Rupert needs for its own welfare is a little of the California booster spirit. We have lots of things to be proud of and few to be ashamed of. So why not be fair to Prince Rupert?
