Prince George Finale PRINCE GEORGE WILL BURNING

Superstructure Caved in Yesterday—One Member of Crew Missing

KETCHIKAN, Sept. 24—The abandoned Canadian National passenger liner Prince George, which caught fire from an undetermined origin in the stokehold Saturday morning, still smoldered at her dock here, east side of Gravina Island, which she was towed and beached, apparently a complete wreck. One member of the crew, Verduin McDaniell, a fireman, is missing and it is feared may have been trapped and perished in the stokehold of the dying vessel.

When it was seen that the fire was completely beyond control and the burning mass was becoming a menace to the docks and the town of Ketchikan, the coastguardmen towed the flaming hulk around Pennekock Island to Gravina and away from shipping and property. So severely did the fire blaze even here that trees ashore took fire. Yesterday the superstructure of the ship fell in but still the oil-burned fire burned on.

Because of lack of hotel accommodation, the coastguard extended hospitality to the Prince George's crew of 95 members and a dozen round trip passengers.

MALAYAN MYSTERY

Fate of 7,000 Civilian Internees Should Be Known Soon

LONDON, Sept. 24—One of the war's great mysteries—the condition of perhaps some 7,000 civilian internees in the Malay jungles—soon will be solved, anxious War Office officials say they hope.

Mystery always has surrounded the fate of captives taken by the Japanese, mainly because local commanders have not been required to report to headquarters on prison and internee camps, and the number of persons held. But, through the Red Cross and other agencies, some information has been obtained about internees in Japan, China, Hong Kong, and other Pacific areas.

From Malaya there has been almost nothing.

"We have no information whatever on large number of civilians who, according to the best of knowledge, were in Malaya when the Japanese overran it," a spokesman said.

"The best figure we have is that some 7,000 persons were involved. We know nothing of the conditions under which they have lived."

"One of our first tasks, now that peace has come, will be to look for these people and give them all possible assistance."

Loss of Income—

Labor Man Sees Drop

Departure of Americans and Possible Closing of Dry Dock Cause of Reduction—Need "Booster" Spirit

Prince Rupert within the next few months is faced with the loss of extra wartime income of more than $10,000,000 a year when the American military and civilian personnel move out and if the dry dock should drastically reduce its activities, according to figures contained in a letter by Fred Kempton of the Electricians' Union and read before local labor unions.

Describing the estimates as "conservative" Mr. Kempton's letter does not give the authorities for them but calculates that the annual reduction in business turnover caused by the withdrawal of the Americans is $8,190,000 a year.

Expenditures by the sub-port of embarkation have totalled $16,381 a day, or $6,000,000 a year in goods and services purchased through local firms or agencies.

Money spent by military and civilian personnel totals $2,190,000 a year, Mr. Kempton's letter says.

Should the dry dock return to its pre-war status, the letter continues, it would cause a yearly reduction of income of $1,080,000 by conservative estimates.

"This makes a grand total of $10,270,000 a year—a staggering loss which is facing us in the next few months," the letter states.

To offset these reduction every organization and citizen should seek ways of stimulating existing business and industry and bring in new ones, the letter urges.

Prince Rupert's major native industry, fishing, cannot take up the slack left by this drop in business, and the solution as seen by Mr. Kempton is a civic "booster" campaign which will establish confidence in Prince Rupert, both in its residents and outside businessmen and workers.

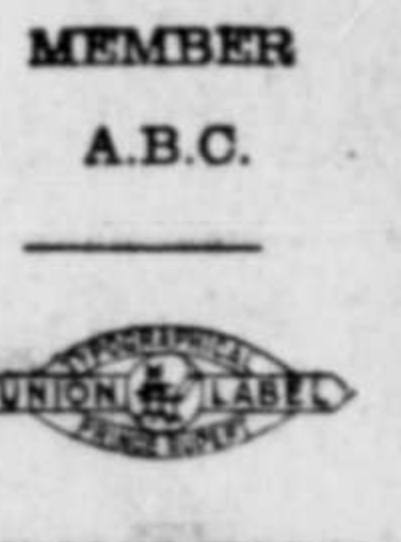

"If we all pull together, labor, and service organizations, the Chamber of Commerce, and others, we can partially offset this loss by boosting and advertising our own community. By offering constructive criticisms instead of grouching and ridiculing it will lead to something worthwhile in the end," Mr. Kempton's letter says confidently.

Fortunate Solution to Dilemma

The much to be lamented and untimely loss of the good ship Prince George, which has served so long and so faithfully along the British Columbia coast and into the waters of Alaska and Pget Sound, brings about a real crisis for the Canadian National Steamships as far as the service on this coast is concerned but the company is lucky to have a quick way out.

Should anything happen to the Prince Rupert, sole surviving member of a once fine fleet, and the tendency might be to crowd her in view of the emergent situation now existing, the company would be completely out of business as far as active primary operation is concerned. While Canadian National Steamships does have its Vancouver Island and Okanagan Lake ferries, the coastal service between Vancouver and Prince Rupert and incidental ports has already been its main function.

So if the Canadian National Railway is to remain in the steamship business on this coast, it is now faced with making a very prompt decision on the matter of new ship construction. With that decision will go the necessity of immediately building at the very least two new and up-to-date passenger vessels adaptable both to the requirements of a summer tourist traffic, which, in the coming years, will probably be greater than it ever was before, and the growing demands of coast travel and shipping. There can be no delaying longer the construction of these ships if the company is to stay in the steamship business.

In view of the fact that time is the essence in having these ships built and that the company has available the yard and organization to carry out the work at once in its own shipyard at Prince Rupert, which achieved such fine accomplishment in war shipbuilding, the completion of which program will have been reached within the next two or three months, it is logical to assume that there will be no further delay in the decision to get this vital ship construction work under way here at once.

The company is on the spot today but, fortunately, the Prince Rupert dry dock, its own plant, offers the quickest and best way out of the dilemma which embarrasses not only the company itself but the shipping and travelling public generally.

Priest's Life Story—

JOSEPH ALLARD, ONCE COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER, TURNED TO GOD'S WORK

Father Joseph Allard, O.M.I., the young French-Canadian commercial traveller, who turned priest because he felt he could better serve in bringing true happiness to the world and the crowning climax of whose ecclesiastical career was the founding of the Lejac industrial school, was in Prince Rupert as the personal representative of Bishop M. Lajeunesse of Le Pas, Man., to assist at the installation of Bishop Jordan of Prince Rupert.

Father Allard lacked no company here during his short stay. Both old-timers and newcomers to the country enjoyed the pioneer priest's talks about his experiences during 37 years of practical missionary work in the Yukon, Northern B.C. and Alaska.

He told of his three years with the Yukon miners on the creeks, building a log house the day after his arrival, at night teaching English to his 'Canayens' on Dominion Creek, for three years, going into two different mining groups to get his noon and evening meals. One of the early accomplishments was in 1904—building a church on Sulphur Creek which cost $1500 and which was paid by the miners of the Creek three days after its opening.

In 1906, he went to Southern Yukon and built at Conrad a church which Capt. Fitz-Horigan and Kate Ryan helped him to pay for. But the Conrad mines having closed down, he moved the church 12 miles on the water to Carcross where it still stands.

In 1907 Father Allard went to Atlin, saw 12 Catholic miners and 60 non-Catholic Indians at his first religious service, got $20 each from 10 miners, bought a house in the Indian town for $200 and used it as boarding school and chapel. This he filled up with Indian children and for three years he monopolized all the jobs of teacher, cook, baker and fisherman, meanwhile learning the Klingle language which enabled him to teach the old Indians Christianity in their own tongue. For one and a half years, the Atlin boarders and teacher lived on the charity of a handful of miners and of the Indians. Then the Indian Department gave him $75 a month which enabled him to have potatoes and butter.

From 1929 to 1936, he was back in Atlin to finish the evangelization of the Indians and lecturing to many tourists. He sat in the church on his bread box, lectured for an hour and wound up saying, "For three years I taught here and fed a house full of Indian children and made bread for them. I have been sitting on my bread box. Look at it. I still have the bread box but I have no dough. I use it for a collection box. The collections were sufficient to make the Atlin and Carcross missions what they are today.

From 1910 to 1915, Father Allard was in charge of Dawson. He built a church at Lansing, over 300 miles up the Stewart River. He started a kindergarten and music school with a large hall where regular weekly card parties gathered, the old-timers playing progressive whist and solo. "This is the happiest night I have spent since I came to the Yukon," said old Billy Irish from Aylmer.

The Moose organization followed the priest's example and opened a larger hall for the same purpose and soon there were few old-timers "chewing the rags" in the lobbies of the 22 saloons. Only two of them kept going.

In 1913, the Yukon Council voted to close the Sisters school, the first and only school in 1898 which was frequented by all the Dawson children. A petition was signed by the citizens demanding that the oldest Dawson school be maintained. Their request was granted by the commissioner and the school is still on the job.

Sisters' School In Prince Rupert

In 1915, Father Allard was in Prince Rupert when the church administration of Bishop Bunoz and Fathers Coccoia and Allard voted the erection of Sisters' school in the city. In 1916, he was in charge of the district from Hazelton to Burns Lake. He added a sanctuary to the Hagwilget church and had an elaborate out-door religious celebration in Hagwilget which was attended by whites and natives from far and near—Hazelton, Glen Vowell, Kispiox and Moricetown. An Indian Department artist made a moving picture of the procession.

In October Father Allard met Bishop Bunoz on the train. The latter said to him: "The Indian Department refuse to build an Indian school on account of the many expenses caused by the war but they will grant so much per capita if we build it ourselves. What do you think of it?" "Let us build the school," said Father Allard. "I agree with you," said Bishop Bunoz. "The other member of the council is opposed to it, but you and I are the majority. Go and build and take charge."

On October 10 Father Allard went to Fort St. James and built the school with the help of one white man carpenter and several Indians. A local sawmill provided the rough material. All the rest was freighted from Vanderhoof. On February 4, 1917, the Fort St. James School was opened for 37 boys. The school staff was composed of local men; a Polish teacher, a Swede factotum, a Chinaman cook and the Father. The teacher and his wife bathed the 37 boys in the largest tub available. The Father, clipped in hand, shaved the 37 heads. There were only 25 beds ready. The partition separating the Father's bed from the boys was torn down and 12 bunks built on the walls and thus did the 37 boarders each have a bed for their first night in the school.

In July, the pupils went home for one month's vacation. Then the Father brought to the school 55 boy boarders. He found that the teacher had enlisted in the army and left him alone with the factotum and the Chinaman. He wired Bishop Bunoz who promised to send him four Sisters. A month later, alone with the 55 pupils, he cleared land to extend his garden and grain field. This work was combined with the spiritual care of 350 souls on the shores of the 40 mile long Stewart Lake. McAllan, the Indian Agent, said to the Bishop: "That priest has too much work."

"Ah, the more the better, he likes it," said the Bishop. The Sisters arrived in September. Already was started an additional building for Sisters and girl boarders. By the middle of January, 1918, the new building was occupied by the Sisters and 14 girls.

On the first of July 1918, all pupils went home and the principal of the school went to Upton, P. Q., to make his first visit after spending 15 years in the country. He assisted at the ordination of his young brother, F. Elphege Allard and brought him back to the school as his assistant.

Soon after the re-opening of the school, the Spanish Flu struck the country. Spanish Influenza Takes Heavy Toll. One morning the young Father two Sisters and all the pupils, except two, stayed in bed sick with the flu. The two boys helped the principal to pack the water from the lake and the wood for all the stoves and to attend to all the needs of the sick.

On November 11 two adult girls were dead and the village was full of sick and dying. The Hudson's Bay manager was told to kill a steer and give a piece of meat to every home. A man accompanied the priest who ministered to the sick while he went to the lake, got water, started the fire and got the pot of meat boiling. Pete, the carpenter, used all the lumber and tore the wood-shed down to make coffins. Fifty families had cut 50 cords of wood at Easter for the church. Two men with a team brought that wood before every man's door. No doctor, no nurse could go and help although two villages nearby were crying for help—at Tatchi and Pinchi 10 and 25 miles away on the lake shore and at Grand Prairie, 15 miles back of the mountain. The priest had to abandon the sick, the dying and the dead to go to their rescue. When, after two months, the flu ceased to make any more victims, the Fort St. James missions had lost 78 persons.

Then the Vanderhoof doctor came and told the principal of the school that he was a sick man and had better get out of the country. The Prince Rupert and Victoria doctors told him the same thing. He went to a Montreal hospital where he had a hemorrhage of the lungs. He was sent to Gabriel Sanatorium in the Adirondack Mountains. Bishop Bunoz went to see him and was told by the sanitarium doctor that a year's rest in the place would put the school principal on his feet. At the end of September, Bishop Bunoz wrote to the sick principal, saying his younger brother and the Sisters newly arrived were inexperienced in the management of a school which had already called for so much work and suffering by its founder and said he would consider it a personal favor if he came back to take his year's rest at the school. The principal left the sanitarium, stopped at the Indian Department to suggest modifications to a plan drawn out for the erection of a new Indian school to be built on the shore of Fraser Lake Back at Fort St. James in October 1919, the sick principal cut short his year's rest.

In May 1920, he went with the Indian Agent and selected the spot for the new school on the shore of Fraser Lake. It was a timber land, fire had gone through it but had left many trees standing and many stumps to pull and fallen trees to burn. A large crew of Indians was hired to do the work.

Added to this work was the charge of administrator of the whole vicariate during the long absence of Bishop Bunoz who went to Rome. The administrator visited Ocean Falls, Anyox, Whitehorse and Atlin. At this last place, a dissipated man met him with a gun in hand and a dagger in his belt. He had it against the cloth that his love affairs had been interfered with. Larry O'Connor disarmed him.

Back from Atlin to Fraser Lake, Father Allard joined his crew, piled and burned stumps and trees till the snow drove them away. At Christmas in Fort St. James, he received a letter from the Indians at Fort Graham at the head of Finlay River, saying: "Old men and women long time cry, no water yet (meaning baptism). He promised to send a priest who would meet them at Fort McLeod the last Sunday in the next month of August.

Early in the spring of 1921, he went to Fraser Lake and started a large crew of Indians to finish the clearing of 40 acres of land around the school under construction. He went again to visit the northern missions and, on his return to Prince Rupert in August, he met Bishop Bunoz and told him of the engagement to send a priest in 10 days to Fort McLeod. As the Bishop seemed puzzled, his administrator told him: "If you have no priest to go there, I'll go myself."

"Well, Father," replied the Bishop, "if you go there I don't think anybody will be jealous of you." So Father Allard went to Vanderhoof, then 40 miles on horseback to Fort St. James, then, with two Indians and three horses, went 100 miles through the woods to Fort McLeod, arriving there on the day appointed. Three days after, four Indians arrived from Fort Graham. They had paddled 67 miles on the Finlay. They had poled upstream 135 miles on the Paspin and 17 miles on the Park river—all that to get the water of baptism. Eight days to come and eight days to go back with the priest. One Fort McLeod and two Fort St. James Indians brought the priest back after three weeks visit at Fort Graham.

No time was lost at Fort St. James. The Father had to be at Fraser Lake to see that the school was ready for its opening in the beginning of 1922. Too many winters had been spent in the fire-trap school at Fort St. James where, in the cold nights, the priest went with a stick in hand trying the red-hot stovepipes to see if they held together for the lives of over 60 persons were in danger. When putting the last touch on the new school, the principal received a letter from his brother saying that the Fort St. James Indians objected to sending their children to Fort Fraser.

Moving School Was Big Job

So Father Allard went to Fort St. James, sent his sick brother to the Edmonton hospital and moved the staff of five Sisters and 80 pupils from Fort St. James to Fraser Lake on January 16, 1922. Fourteen Indian rigs deposited at Vanderhoof the whole school personnel. At 12 p.m. the train took all the travellers to Fraser Lake and unloaded them in front of the new school at 2 a.m. January 17, 1922.

On this date, the Fraser Lake Indian School had within its walls seven Sisters, one engineer, one boys' guardian, one farmer and 80 pupils with the principal. The agent was asked to bring 50 more pupils to the school. On the following first day of March, the school had 130 boarders.

The principal requested that the school be called the Lejac School. The agent thought that the name of a priest for the new school would not be acceptable. The principal obtained permission for a station called Lejac to be built near the school. He obtained also a post office called Lejac. After a year of getting on or off the train at Lejac and of writing to Lejac, the school became the Lejac School. So the name of the first missionary who had gone through great trials and sufferings in teaching Christianity to all the natives of Central British Columbia, remains as an example of fidelity and devotedness to God's service. In the month of August 1922 the principal and founder of the Fort St. James and the Lejac schools was succeeded by the late Father Coccoia.

Father Allard was sent to build the priest's residence at Smithers and to take charge of 11 missions from Hazelton to Burns Lake and beyond to Ootsa Lake, Cheslatta and the Ebbines. He was given the help of one young priest. He instructed many converts in Old Hazelton, at Round Lake and in several railway stations.

In 1926 Father Allard was sent as a delegate to a general Oblate Chapter held in Rome in September and October. He spent the winter of 1927 in Eastern Canada and the United States lecturing on the missions.

At the end of May, he returned to Smithers, made the Moricetown priest house habitable and repaired the foundations of that church. He acquired a car and went to visit his scattered flock.

His first call was at the Hazelton hospital where he made use of a privilege granted to him by the Pope. He gave the Pope's blessing to a non-Catholic girl and to her mother standing by her bed. That was the beginning of 25 conversions who were received in the church on June 2, 1928 when the Silver Jubilee of the priest F. Allard was celebrated in the Hagwilget Church in the presence of Bishop Bunoz, his brother F. E. Allard and a church filled to capacity with people from far and near.

Christmas and January were spent in Babine, where he induced five young couples to get married. He returned to Smithers with 10 double teams and 40 Indians on the new 40 mile road made by the Indians with financial help from the Smithers citizens.

In the spring of 1929, Father Allard went to Atlin. There he instructed the rest of the Indians who were not yet Catholics and he received them in the church. He lectured to the tourists in the Atlin Inn and in the church and he received many substantial donations which he spent on the Atlin, Carcross and Whitehorse missions. He spent his winters in southeastern Alaska, teaching in all the villages as far as Sitka and Seward at the foot of the Aleutians. He begged a good friend, the Skagway priest, to build a school for the native children of Alaska. No better builder could be found for the Skagway priest, made school which is today the pride of the country.

In 1936, Bishop Couderc sent Father Allard to build a church at Wells in southern B.C. In 1937 he was again back at Smithers. After nine years absence, he found in his old district 43 boys and girls averaging 13 years who had not received the sacraments by Bishop Couderc in the presence of the largest congregation that Smithers had ever seen, completed the Smithers residence which became the home of the Vicar of Missions, Bishop Couderc.

The latter part of 1928 and of 1929, Father Allard resided in the Moricetown Indian mission. In the school newly opened, in the church and in his residence, he instructed the Indians, taught them to sing Mass, Benediction, hymns, etc. to pray in their own language.

A corrupter was ruining young girls, he found him out, put him in the hands of the police, from whom he received three penitentiary and 15 lashes. Being escaped the corrupter, Father Allard was told that he had done more than his share of work in vicariate and he could go. Bishop M. Lajeunesse of St. Manitoba invited him to spend his old days in comfort in episcopal residence. There he now lives.

HONESTY AND RELIABILITY

Editor, Daily News:

I notice in your advertising columns an advertisement for reliable and honest boys. How can you expect honesty and reliability in others when you are both dishonest and unreliable yourself?

On your front page of Saturday's paper you print in large type "One thousand men still working," presumably at the dry dock. You know as well as I know, or you ought to, that there hasn't been 1000 men working there for a year. Any dry dock workers can verify that. Last week's total was less than 600. Also you printed some time ago in your paper that only men from the prairies were being let out which is another inaccuracy because I am personally acquainted with one or two who are residents of this town, taxpayers, and hired from here. So when you ask for honest and reliable people it would be a good idea to practise what you preach eh?

Yours for truth,

J. ARNOLD,

Most of Thirty-Five Members Interested in New View Subdivision

Now that National Housing has given official notification that it is prepared to make loans available here and Canada Life Assurance Co. has announced that it will handle the loans, W. Nicholls, director of National Housing, and W. P. Kirkpatrick, Vancouver, mortgage branch manager of Canada Life, have been asked by the Prince Rupert Building Association to come here at an early date to inspect possible sites and get the planning machinery in actual motion so that building of homes may proceed with a minimum of delay.

At Friday night's meeting of the Association C. H. Collins reported on suitable property that was available in the existing waste for National Housing building, the most of this being in Westview.

Maurice Brydges reported on the proposed new building area on the western slope of Acropolis Hill. Possessed of a fine harbor view, it already had the nucleus of road, sewer and water services but there would have to be further extension of these facilities at a possible cost of $500 per lot.

D. C. Stevenson intimated that there was little likelihood of the city giving financial help in opening up the new subdivision.

E. A. Phillips, city engineer, did not give much encouragement as far as the prospects of having the city extend services to the new area when in all other parts of the city services were breaking down.

Indications are that it will be some months before the way is clear for building under National Housing Act here but arrangements may be made in the meantime for group purchase of building materials should favorable opportunity arise.

Public Relations Council Favors Suggestion of Aid, Arnold Regarding City Beautiful

Idea of Aid N. E. Arnold that the Prince Rupert Public Re-

Mrs. Arnold believes that favorable publicity should begin at home among the citizens themselves and that city beautification is one of the best means of making people proud of their home town and good boosters for it. "And," says the lady alderman, "there is nothing more than gardens that can make a town beautiful. Let us make Prince Rupert again a city of beautiful gardens."

FRIENDSHIP MEANS A HELPING HAND

"Behold... the harvest": said Calvert 300 years ago

The Future of the World Depends on Friendship

EARLY in the 17th Century, Calvert, famous English statesman and Secretary of State to King James I, pioneered mutual understanding between England and America by establishing colonies in Newfoundland and Maryland.

It is our birthright as Canadians to foster the friendship between England and the United States for the benefit of world security.

It was truly written of this great pioneer: "On Anglo-American relations, Calvert was the best informed man in the Old World."

Close neighbour of America, key member of the British Commonwealth, we are the friend of both, the link that joins them in common understanding. We of Canada have an important responsibility in the preservation of this great partnership.

NEW MINISTER ACTIVE WOMAN

Most Attractive Member of Britain's Labor Government Is Physician, Mother of Two

LONDON, Sept. 24 (P)—Dr. Edith Summerskill, parliamentary undersecretary to the ministry of food in the new Labor government, will not be able to work on all of her pet subjects while she is in the office.

Her interests range from wages for housewives to venereal disease and birth control. Currently she is pushing an anti-queue campaign.

"You have your wings clipped a bit when you take office, you know," she said a little wistfully as she sat in her room in the ministry gazing out at the trees on Portman Square. "Some of the things I've been working on I'll have to leave for a while. But queuing, which as a doctor I consider very damaging to women's health, is something which is definitely concerned with us here."

To help expectant mothers escape the shopping queues she suggested that special ration books could entitle them to preferred service, saying: "It's dreadful to see these poor women with their heavy baskets, standing for hours to get their rations."

Ardent feminist, brilliant gynecologist, pioneer in birth control and a tilter at almost every special evil, Edith Summerskill still manages to combine a happy family life with a most active career, and look extremely charming while she does it.

Very tall and slim, with short dark hair carefully waved and a well-cut beige suit decorated with an old-fashioned clip, she looked what she is renowned to

HAIR FASHIONS SWEEPING UP

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (P)—Hair fashions for fall are still on the upswing with a multitude of styles that include braids, buns, twists and poufs.

The vogue hit a peak during wartime when war workers found it a neater proposition and less dangerous than the long bob. Not that the modern miss has not retained her long bob—she has. But it's tucked away neatly.

One of the most interesting things about the upswing is that it can be done at home so easily for times when it is impossible to reach a hairdresser.

Braids are easily accomplished by parting the hair neatly from the brow to the neckline, gathering all hair on each side and braiding. Then cross the braids along the top of the head.

If your hair isn't long enough to braid, you might try winding it around a hair roll band that is stretchable and washable. The band will keep the hair from slipping.

Before you try any hairstyle, however, make sure your hair is washed thoroughly with one of the conditioning liquid shampoos and rinsed until thoroughly clean.

be—the most attractive woman member of parliament.

Dr. Summerskill is 44 years old. She is the only woman in the last parliament who gave her age in "Who's Who." The new undersecretary for food brings a physician's knowledge to her work, knowledge which the ministry made use of when she was a member of one of Lord Woolton's advisory committees early in the war.

"I've got medicine in my blood," she said. "My father was a doctor and I am a doctor and my daughter, who is 13 now, is going to be a doctor. The health of the country has really been wonderful during the war, but there are signs of increasing anaemia, especially among married women, who give the best part of their rations to the children. You can't stop them; they always have—it's maternal instinct, but it's not good."

Although the new government has taken over at a pretty difficult time, she says, with the whole of Europe to be fed, Dr. Summerskill is not pessimistic about the coming winter.

"We can't stand by and let Europe starve," she said emphatically, "and the women of England wouldn't want it. We've got it easier. Think of all the fish which have been lying in the ocean for five years. And fish is full of protein."

Married to another doctor—Jeffrey Samuel, who has come back from five years military service, mostly as a psychiatrist at Aldershot, Dr. Summerskill has a boy 17 and a girl of 13.

Besides her parliamentary work, Dr. Summerskill has a thriving medical practice and is regular advisor at a birth control clinic. She is keeping her practice, but says she will have to have somebody to help her do the routine work now that she is in office.

KEEP LINES SLIM BY BELLRINGING

LONDON, Sept. 24 (P)—Hundreds of Britons now are enrolling as bellringers, an official of the Central Council of Bellringers reports, and soon there may not be enough bells to give all the new enthusiasts practice. "Young girls and older women especially are enrolling," the officials aid. "The public missed the bells during wartime and ringing masters everywhere now report a boom."

G. A. Lunn, of Lea, Lincolnshire, who has travelled thousands of miles through England, Scotland and Ireland to ring bells, says women ringers think it good for keeping the figure slim.

HOW CAN I ???

By ANNE ASHLEY

Q. How can I drain food that is fried in deep fat?

A. When frying anything in deep fat, keep a piece of brown wrapping paper close to the stove. When fried to the desired brown, lift the food out and place on the brown paper to drain. The paper will absorb every bit of the fat.

Q. How can I prevent rusting when putting away a stove, or pipes, for the summer?

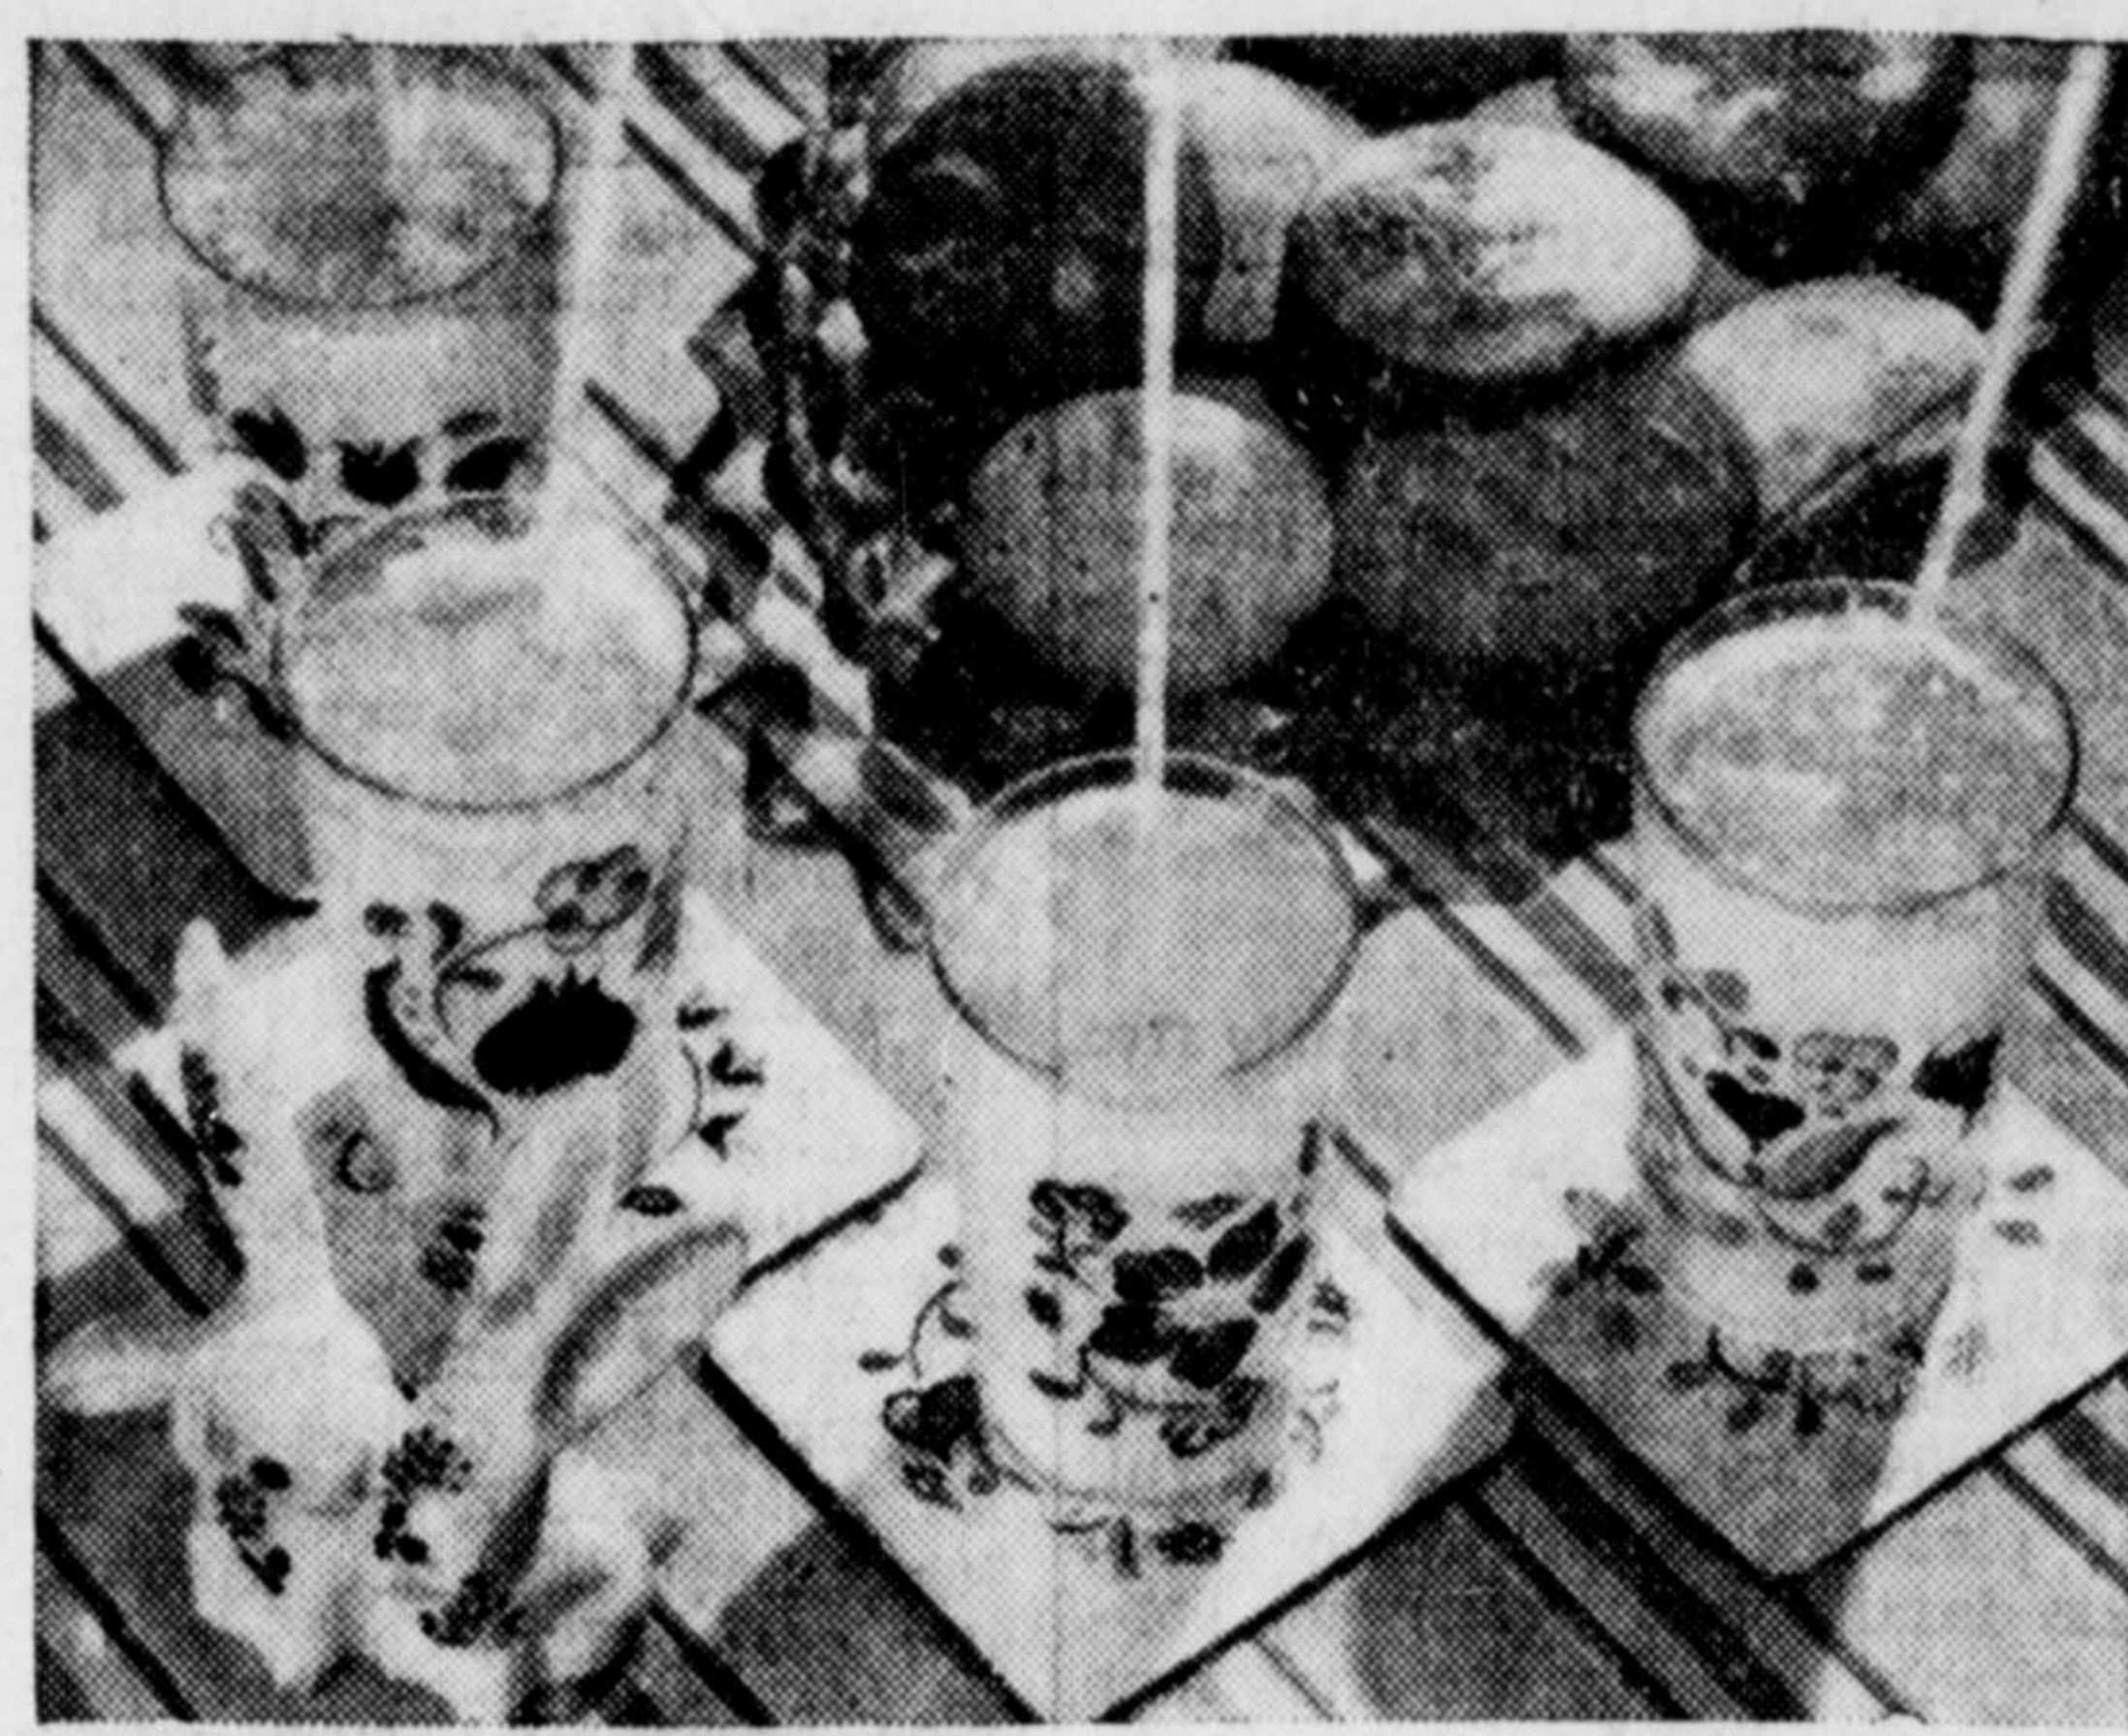

A. Before putting them away, give them a good application of linseed oil and it will prevent rust. When fall comes, polish them without trying to remove the oil.

Q. How can I keep the custard pie a nice even brown?

A. It will be even and brown when baked if a little sugar is sprinkled over the top just before putting into the oven.

Seasonable Ideas for Housekeepers

THE DRINK MAKES THE PARTY

Parties are always a delight to the youngsters and it doesn't take any excuse or any effort for an impromptu party. Let them have their friends in and let them have little parties without fuss.

They'll like setting the table themselves, using a colorful cloth and gaily decorated glasses for a festive air. A plate of cookies and long, cool drinks fill the bill for refreshments. Drinks made with sparkling water are delicious, and they are so easily prepared the children will love mixing their own. Fruit juices, of course, are a natural base for these drinks, but liquid extracts, powdered flavors and jellies can be used, too. Lemonade or orangeade have added zest when made with sparkling water. Grapejuice and sparkling water, half and half, is good, and needs no sweetening. Put 1/4 teaspoon liquid flavoring and 2 table-spoons sugar syrup in a tall glass with ice, and fill with sparkling water for a refreshing drink.

With a few bottles of sparkling water among your supplies, and same flavorings, coolers can be whipped up in a few minutes and without any fuss. If you happen to have ice cream in your refrigerator, place a scoop in each glass before serving and you have a soda that meets with favor and is as good as those the corner drug store makes. Peaches make a good soda, and here's how.

Sparkling Peach Ice Cream Soda

1/2 cup mashed, sweetened ripe peaches
1/4 cup light cream
1 scoop peach or chocolate ice cream
Sparkling water

Combine peaches and cream in a tall glass. Add ice cream. Fill glass with sparkling water; stir gently. Serves one.

Blitz Hero Dies From Operation

SHOREHAM-BY-SEA, Eng., Sept. 24 (Reuters)—Capt. Charles Morris Cann, 27, one of the 14th bomb disposal corps, Royal Engineers, won the George Medal in 1941 for "conspicuous gallantry in carrying out hazardous work in a very brave manner." He died recently in a Shoreham hospital—while undergoing an operation for removal of his tonsils.

FAIR PLAY FOR CHILDREN ASKED

LONDON, Sept. 24 (P)—Shocked by disclosures of maltreatment of children in Britain, the 1,070,000 members of the Transport and General Workers Union are planning an anti-cruelty campaign.

The present plan, after discussions at union meetings, is to have "guardian angel" centres set up all over the country. In addition, representatives of 280,000 labor women are meeting in Leeds to see what can be done about fair play for children in homes, boarded-out and adopted orphans.

Mrs. John Ford, a Brentford, Middlesex, factory worker, said, "We want teams of more and better inspectors, always on the lookout for undesirable conduct by people in charge of children."

"We want no more slip-ups like those we have read of lately; no more exploitation of child labor by people who adopt children merely to get work out of them. We want increased penalties, too."

Ambulance Wedding For Toronto Groom

COMBE DOWN, Eng., (P)—An ambulance took paratrooper F. N. Deluca of Toronto to church in this Somersetshire village for his marriage to Joan Haywood of Portsmouth. Wounded in France while serving with the 1st Canadian Parachute Battalion, Deluca has both his legs in casts, but he did not let this interfere with his wedding. His bride is in the Auxiliary Territorial Service.

"I met Joan down here just before D-Day," said Deluca when he returned to hospital. "I proposed to her about six months ago and had the two rings sent from Canada. She came to see me in hospital every chance she had."

"Fortunately," she works in a lab not far from here. I expect to get back home soon by hospital ship and I think Joan will be able to get priority. We plan to live in Toronto."

Deluca, aged 20, enlisted in 1943 and came overseas last year. He was wounded by shrapnel from a 88 mm. gun shell.

The Experts Say - -

CAREFUL WITH SUGAR—With a limited amount of sugar, home-made jellies must turn out perfectly this year. No one can afford to waste a particle of sweetening. Home economists vouch for these jelly-making tips:

Use a broad flat-bottomed saucepan when making jelly, and always work with small quantities of juice, not more than eight cups at a time.

To take the guess-work out of jelly-making use the pectin test on the fruit juice to know exactly when to add the sugar. If the sugar is added before the juice is concentrated and the pectin is not in the right proportion to the acid, jelly will not set, no matter how long boiling is continued after the sugar is added.

The pectin test: Boil the fruit juice for three minutes. Into a cup or saucer measure one tablespoon of alcohol (rubbing alcohol may be used) and one tablespoon of fruit juice. Blend quickly and allow to stand half a minute. Do not taste, and do not return mixture to juice. If a clot of jelly forms, the juice is ready for the addition of the sugar. If not, continue boiling the fruit juice and testing it every few minutes, so that the sugar may be added at just the right time, and a perfect jelly result.

GRAPES—The grape crop is coming through this year with flying colors, but by this time of year most of us haven't much canning sugar left. To meet this situation, an Agriculture Department testing kitchen has developed this recipe for making grape juice without sugar . . . the sugarless juice will make excellent jelly next winter or it may be used for delicious pudding sauces and desserts.

To make grape juice, wash, stem and crush the grapes. Add water, allowing one pint per six quart basket of grapes. Simmer 15 minutes. Strain through moist jelly bag. Reheat juice to boiling point, pour into clean, hot containers and seal. Process in boiling water bath allowing 10 minutes for pints and quarts.

BAKING SODA AND VITAMINS—Tests just completed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture have exploded the old theory that when baking soda is used in cooking green vegetables vitamins are destroyed. However, say the research workers, it is only when a minute quantity of the soda is used—about 1/16 of a teaspoon or a very skimpy pinch—that the effect is beneficial.

GIBLET GRAVY—To make giblet gravy, simmer the giblets (liver, gizzard and heart) and the neck in a quart of water for an hour, or until tender. Drain and chop the meat finely. Leave about 1/2 cup of fat in the pan after removing the roast chicken. Stir in 1/2 cup of flour. Gradually add cool broth and enough cold water to make a smooth thin gravy. Cook five minutes, stirring constantly. Add the chopped giblets. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Distinctive Flavour of Grape Adaptable to Unusual Desserts

The glowing colors of grapes make them a decorative centerpiece for the dinner table as well as a delicious dessert fruit. Prospects are for an ample grape crop. While everyone is familiar with grape jelly and juice, home economists believe they have something new to offer in the way of grape desserts. For those who want to make a grape jam, they also recommend the following recipe which may be used with either the purple or green varieties.

Grape Jam

Wash and stem grapes. Press pulp from skins. Cook pulp 10 minutes and put through a sieve to remove seeds. Add skins to pulp and measure the mixture. To 1 cup of pulp allow 2-3 cup of sugar. Bring skins and pulp to boil and cook about 10 minutes or until skins are tender. Add sugar and boil, stirring frequently, until liquid shoots from the spoon, about 20 minutes. Pour into hot sterilized jars, cool and seal.

Grape Velvet

3 cups blue grapes
1/4 to 1/2 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 tablespoons gelatine
1/2 cup cold water

Wash grapes, place in saucepan and crush slightly, bring to boil and boil gently for 5 minutes. Rub through sieve. Add sugar and salt to grape pulp and reheat, stirring constantly, until sugar is dissolved. Add gelatine, which has been soaked in the cold water, to grape mixture and stir until dissolved. Chill until firm and serve as dessert with custard sauce, or as a salad on lettuce with cottage cheese.

Grape Sauce Pudding

Grape mixture:
3 cups grapes (preferably blue)
1/2 cup sugar
1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
Dash of salt

CHRISTIANITY TO FLOURISH

Local Pastor Sees Signs of Growing Power Even in These Difficult Days

Christian belief is deeper and wider than the power of nations and empires and, while there have been periods in history, such as at the present time, when it seems to be overshadowed and languishing, it will surely rise again in full flower, declared Rev. A. F. MacSween in his morning sermon at First Presbyterian Church yesterday. While some might be inclined to see an attitude of discouragement and frustration as far as the acceptance of Christianity was concerned in these difficult times, it was only necessary to look at the picture more broadly to see unmistakable indication of the acceptance of Christian standards as a measure of worth. In Russia for instance, the church, in spite of the vicissitudes to which it had been subjected, was stronger today than it had ever been—16,000,000 in a census actually professing Christian belief. In India two great Hindu leaders were to be seen arguing whether Gandhi was a "most Christlike" man. Christianity, which implied the true principles of democracy, was bound to move forward in a new and better world.

Next Sunday the First Presbyterian Church will celebrate the completion of its thirty-fifth year as a congregation with special services in which a former minister, Rev. J. L. McLean, now of St. Andrew's Church, Victoria, will be the guest speaker. On the following Monday evening there will be an anniversary banquet.

RAY SMITH TO SEATTLE

Alaska Welterweight Champ Has Been Inspiration to Local Boys

Corporal Ray Smith, Alaska welterweight champion, will be leaving Prince Rupert tomorrow morning to take up a United States Army assignment in the Seattle area. During his stay here, this young Californian has proved to be an inspiration to several of the pugilistically inclined Prince Rupert youngsters and his co-operation in coaching Canadian military personnel for various tournaments was outstanding.

Boxing fans of the Pacific Northwest first took note of the 24 year old scrapper from San Francisco when at Ketchikan he left-hooked himself into a second round knockout over the Coast Guard middleweight champion, Red Knox, in July 1944. Two days later the boxing fans of Prince Rupert watched that same left-hook blast the way into an eight-round decision over Pte. Tommy Burns, popular Canadian welterweight contender.

Later that year, fight promoter Harold Blanton of Ketchikan arranged a match between Smith and Billy McCann, the Alaska welterweight champ. Ray captured the crown in this match and successfully defended it against McCann in a return engagement on Acropolis Hill. Since that time, as boxing coach of the Prince Rupert Sub-Port of Embarkation, he has played a great part in training fighters and organizing boxing shows, the most recent being the Northwest Service Command tournament held here last April.

Corporal Smith, a booster for Prince Rupert and the Pacific Northwest, will drive from Prince Rupert over the Skeena Highway to Prince George and thence to Seattle. He is accompanied by his wife. Upon discharge from the Army, he plans to reside in Ketchikan where he will direct the city's youth athletic and recreational program.

LEAVING HERE—Corp. Ray Smith, Alaska welterweight champion who has been popular in local sporting circles during stay of Army.

DAR-ES - SALAAM, Tanganyika, —The second largest diamond ever found in Tanganyika was recovered at the Williamson mine in the Mwanza area on the day the new governor, Sir William Battershill, was visiting the mine. It is a 67-carat stone and has been named the Battershill diamond.

LONDON —Air Commodore Lord Stansgate, former director of public relations for the R.A.F., has retired from the air force to resume his parliamentary duties.

SHORT SPORT

When, as now seems likely, the Chicago Cubs swing into World Series competition, American League fans are going to have something to marvel about when they see Charlie Grimm's outfield of Bill Nicholson, Andy Pafko and Harry (Peanuts) Lowery in action. Probably more so than a well-balanced and fast infield, that trio of fly-chasers is more responsible for the Cubs' pennant drive than any other single factor. True, the Chicagoans have had good pitching, in fact have had the best pitching staff in the league with such a first line as Claude Passeau, Hank Wyse, Hank Borowy, Ray Prim and Paul Derringer, and with Paul Erickson, Hy Vandenberg, Bob Chipman, Lon Warnecke and Ray Starr to handle not only relief duties but an occasional starting assignment.

But Charlie Grimm places a lot of emphasis on his outfield. He rates those three ahead of the great Cub outfield of 1939—Riggs, Stephenson, Kiki Cuyler and Hank Wilson—on the defensive side. "They cover as much ground, and they whip the ball in quicker with deadlier throws. That's important. It cuts off many extra base hits," Grimm says. They cut off many extra runs, too. All season long players were left stranded on third base when one of the three took a fly ball for a second out, and then with a fast, accurate throw prevented the runner from scoring after the catch. And others have been nipped at the plate trying to score on that play, too.

Nicholson, of course, is the veteran of the outfield. But this World Series will be the first for all three. Bill came to the Cubs in 1939 and has been playing right field since. While he has been in a batting slump this year, he led the league both in runs batted in and homers in 1943, and runs scored, runs batted in and homers last year. Lowery came up from Los Angeles in 1943, and played both second base and shortstop before he finally wound up in centrefield. Then he went into the service, came back this year to find Pafko planted in the middle garden, and has been playing left field since.

Pafko has been rated by many as the best centrefielder in both leagues this year—his second in the big time. The 23-year-old Wisconsin native, as Manager Frankie Frisch of the Pittsburgh Pirates puts it, "steals hitters blind," by pulling down line drives or coming in to take Texas League flies that are base hits in almost any game. His speed afoot, his fast, accurate throws from the outfield and his batting, all combined, make up one of the most potent factors in the rise of the Cubs from fourth place last year to first this year.

"That's an outfield any manager would rate first," Manager Del Bionette of the Boston Braves said on his last trip to Chicago. "It would put almost any team at least two notches higher in the league." And that, combined with a veteran infield

JURORS WERE EACH POLLED

Unusual Procedure Resorted to at Assize Court Here

John Moorehead and Louis Johnson, charged jointly with assaulting Robert Morison and Archie Hedstrom, each received six months on each of two charges from Mr. Justice Coady following jury conviction at the Assizes here. The sentences are to run concurrently.

The jury found that the two men had assaulted Morison and Hedstrom on Third Ave. on May 24, using broken beer glasses for weapons. Morison received severe cuts on his face and Hedstrom received lesser injuries.

In passing sentence Mr. Justice Coady said that he was inclined to leniency because Moorehead and Johnson were working men with families and could not be classed as criminals.

Prescribed sentences for such offences are three years in penitentiary, Mr. Justice Coady said.

Moorehead and Johnson were defended by T. W. Brown while the prosecution was conducted by W. O. Fulton.

When the jury declared its verdict of guilty, Defence Counsel Brown asked that each member of the jury declare his individual decision before the court. All affirmed the verdict.

While this procedure is sometimes employed by counsel in capital cases, it is rarely done in secondary cases. It is believed that it is the first time that it has ever been done here.

Some men are born good, others wait until they get old.

and a top pitching staff, is what Grimm relies upon to bring him his third pennant and first world title.
