Portland Breeze of Kincolith Unreported For Week

Three or more men in the "Portland Breeze, a 45-foot Kincolith fishing boat, are reported missing in Portland Canal area.

The boat, under Captain William Stewart, 25 years old, left Kincolith November 15 for a winter supply of logs in the Portland Canal.

Search parties from the village have been turned back by strong storms, assistant Indian Superintendent W. B. Bailey reports.

The police patrol boat, the PML-15, left last night to join the search, the Indian agent said. Two other Kincolith fishing boats, working in Prince Rupert district, left to look for the missing men. Solomon Doolan i Mrs. Ernest Fisher, with captain of one of the two fish

Prince Rupert Least Understood and Most Unappreciated Port

Chief of Railway Development Points to Advantages as Gateway to Alaska

TORONTO. - "The northern Pacific coast of Canada, with its great harbor and port at the gateway to southeastern Alaska is, perhaps, with the exception of the Arctic regions, the least understood and most incompletely appreciated area of the continent," M. W. Maxwell, chief of development, Canadian National Railways, told the London, Ont., branch of the Would Probe Engineering Institute of Canada last evening. Mr. Maxwell spoke on the subject "The North Red Actions Pacific Region of the North American Continent."

"This vast territory has potentialities of national and continental significance," Mr. Maxwell continued, "which have been obscured partly by lack of popular understanding. ## Casualties of War

Army's first casualties in the Korean campaign here is a new one which feeling comfortable, and itches to as usual paints a picture. should have occurred on a quiet hillside in the says: Canadian Rockies where the terrible train wreck took place yesterday. Sixteen soldier died there and many others sustained injuries, some serious.

As the minister of national defence was quick to comment, the casualties were just the same as if they had occurred on the front line of battle and the victims and their dependents would be treated on the same basis as if they had been. Indeed, the soldiers were in the course of moving up to the front line. Had they reached their destination at Fort Lewis, Washington, safely, they would soon have been embarked for Korea and the theatre of war.

Had it not been for Korea, the special brigade, fee and now the price is much of which these men were a part, might not have been raised. They might not have been in the army but at home in their civil and peaceful avocations. As it was they were on their way to war in defence of our way of life against the evils of aggression. They were war heroes even if they did die on that quiet hillside in our own Canadian mountains.

A SKATING RINK?

DETURN of winter, and judging from the early I start of real cold weather it may be another one like it has been the past two years, brings its unhappy and its happy thoughts.

It may be an unhappy thought to wonder, after the troubles of past winters, if everything will be all right with the water and power, and if steps that have been taken or are in process of being taken to prevent recurrences of unpleasantnesses of the past will meet the situation. We can imagine the righteous indignation there will be if there are any repetitions.

But this freezing weather also makes us think of the pleasures of winter—the skating, the curling, the hockey and such things. Prince Rupert over the years has been so accustomed to mild and rainy winters that we have almost come not to expect much outdoor skating-or very little to say the

However, if the sort of thing we are getting now is to be a permanent institution of the Weather Man here, we might as well prepare ourselves for it and get organized. It is interesting to hear that a move is on foot to get a rink sheet going at some such handy spot as the Gyro Ball Park on McBride Street. It should not take much organization, or much effort at that, to get something done along this line-some timbering around the sides and then some flooding and you have it.

It could be a handy job for some of our local service organizations or some person or persons willing to take the lead. Or how about the teen-agers who have been so berated and so defended of recent days? Here's a chance for them to demonstrate their nitiative and their willingness to do a little work or their own pleasure and that of the public.

How about getting together, now that we have sonable prospect of a long and cool winter, and P O'g something about it?

Hutchison states boldly and flatly that Sir James Douglas was born in Lanarkshire. The Douglas family has always said this—but there is no proof—and some historians are sure he was born in the West Indies. Hutchison would have been better advised to just state Douglas was a Scotsman. Hutchison says Dr. J. S. Helmcken was the leader of the annexationist party-implying he wanted B.C. to join the U.S. Helmcken took no such standhe didn't want B.C. to join Canadian confederation, true; he wanted B.C. to remain as a British Crown colony, responsible to the British government in London, not to the Canadian government in Ottawa.

Hutchison's book is good reading, if one can overcome the feeling of annoyance at the mistakes. The gold rush days are vividly described and make one feel as if living in those days of excitement, when B.C. was young. Certainly a picture of the great river is given and one feels Hutchison's love of it.
