Encouraging Signs

WE MAY be credulous but it does appear that there is a new and encouraging attitude of conciliation between the nations as exemplified in recent utterances and statements emanating from Russian quarters and in the United Nations Day speech of President Truman yesterday.

Probably the most noteworthy feature of President Truman's speech was the apparent change of American attitude in regard to the banning of atomic weapons with the adoption of a stand somewhat more along the line that the Russians have been advocating.

As the President said, the possibility of reaching effective agreements may seem still somewhat remote but hope should not be given up.

After all, there can only be world peace with Russia's co-operation and we cannot go on suspecting Russia's co-operation and we must some time anticipate her good faith. It could be possible for her to have a change of heart too.

As Trygve Lie said, the fifth birthday of the United Nations founding was marked with a more promising atmosphere towards the possibility of world peace than it had at any time since the organization was formed.

UP TO MUSIC LOVERS

WHEN the Calgary Range Riders came to town last week the people who like that kind of entertainment evinced their support and showed their appreciation by attending the shows which were a financial success for all concerned.

This Thursday high class music is coming to town with the joint recital by two celebrated artists—Luiga Silva, famous cellist, and Maxim Schapiro, eminent pianist. We shall see whether the cultured people of Prince Rupert who profess to be lovers of good music and are heard to complain sometimes that there is not enough of the intellectual and cultural in Prince Rupert will rise to the occasion and really show their support.

So far the response to the advance sale of tickets for this show is said to be disappointing. In fact, the trend away from the more high class entertainment—at least as far as attendance is concerned—has been rather sharp of late and the Civic Centre management is becoming discouraged.

It is quite reasonable to suppose that, if high class cultural entertainment has not enough customers here to at least permit an even break financially in bringing the artists, they will just have to stop coming.

This is no lecture or criticism. It is just a straight business observation.

CHEERS FOR SCUBY!

Editor, Daily News: Three cheers for Scuby! It's about time Rupert's business men got behind their community and tried to do something to provide proper entertainment for teen-agers such as an arena for all sports. You say we have a Civic Centre, yes, so we have but what is there for teen-agers outside of basketball? The bowling alley has proved itself successful. They say be a Rupert booster. How?

Look at cities in B.C. with similar population. Rupert leads in one thing—liquor consumption. Until the business men start thinking a little more of teen-agers instead of the almighty dollar, Rupert teen-agers will grow up to know one thing—how to drink.

Activities of P.T. Council

The regular monthly meeting of the Prince Rupert Parent-Teacher Council was held in the Civic Centre on Monday evening with the president, Mrs. R. E. Mortimer, in the chair.

Reports from the different schools indicated that activities for the year had got off to a good start. The membership drive had just begun with King Edward reporting 151 members to date.

The Traffic and Safety Committee, under Convenor R. G. Moore, will hold a meeting to organize their plans for steps necessary to make parents as well as children aware of the need for safety practices. The hazard in the vicinity of Booth Memorial High School where various avenues converge is a particularly severe one. The need for the extension of the sidewalk on Seventh Avenue will be stressed.

Reports were heard on the possibility of having arrangements made for the proper care of the teeth of the children in the city.

A letter from Conrad Street P.T.A. stated their strong objection to the issuance of a licence to operate a pin-ball game concession and the council will continue to press for its removal.

The P.T.A. library shelf in the City Library is available for citizens generally. R. G. Moore was thanked for his donation of ten books to the collection.

Considerable discussion centered round the possibility of a visit to this district of Mrs. Mellish, a past provincial Parent-Teacher Federation president. Further details of the date and other arrangements planned will be requested from the Federation headquarters to enable the local groups to take advantage, if possible, of her visit.

Members present included Mrs. A. J. Dominato, Mrs. M. Hansen, Mrs. H. M. Lindseth, Mrs. J. Denning, Mrs. L. M. Greene, Mrs. J. Bowman, Mrs. R. Mark, Mrs. K. Hardy, Mrs. H. C. Flood (secretary-treasurer), Mrs. E. W. Becker and Messrs. H. C. Blair, W. D. Griffiths, J. S. Wilson and R. G. Moore.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Bill, who have been on a month's honeymoon trip which extended as far as South Dakota and included a visit to the home of the bride near Calgary, returned to the city on last night's train. The bride was formerly Miss Ruth Jacobsen, N. of the nursing staff of the Prince Rupert General Hospital.

Regular monthly meeting, Prince Rupert Burns Club, Broadway Cafe, Friday, Oct. 27, 6:30 p.m. Guest speaker, F. E. Anfield, Superintendent, Indian Affairs. (14)

SPECIAL MEETING—Trades and Labor Council at the Carpenters Hall, Fraser Street, Thursday, October 26th. Time 8:00 p.m. sharp. Business: Nomination of candidates for Civic Elections. Delegates to be sure to attend.

Rt. Rev. James B. Gibson, Bishop of Caledonia, returned to the city on the Prince George this morning from Vancouver where he has been attending sessions of the House of Bishops and the Anglican Synod of British Columbia.

Miss Noreen Beamish of Vancouver, recent graduate of the Vancouver General Hospital training school for nurses, arrived in the city on the Prince George this morning from the south and will proceed by the evening train to Terrace to join the staff of the Red Cross out-post hospital.

F. J. Gemmill-Smith, public relations representative of the Canadian National Railways in London, England, who is making a tour of Canada, arrived in the city on the Prince George this morning from Vancouver and is spending the day here before proceeding East on this evening's train. He was met by C. A. Berner, divisional superintendent, and Ed Mussellam, chairman of the Prince Rupert Public Relations Council, who are conducting him to points of interest of the port and city.

U.N. Day at Local School

The birthday of the United Nations was appropriately referred to at the weekly assembly at Borden Street School on Tuesday. The annual report of the British Columbia Division of the Junior Red Cross had been received and in congratulating the pupils on their splendid showing in the list of schools which donated during the year, Principal J. S. Wilson suggested that, inasmuch as many children of different nations had been helped by the Red Cross, these children, their families and their friends would have the kindest feelings towards the people in other parts of the world who had helped them. This surely would help pave the "way to peace."

Of the 750 schools which had contributed to the B.C. Division of the Junior Red Cross, Borden Street School, with total donations of $228.24, ranked sixth. The ranking was particularly good as many of the schools contributing were high schools or elementary schools with a much greater enrolment. It is probable that, on a per capita basis, the record of the Borden Street School equals or even exceeds that of any other school. The children found the story of the help given to children in Britain, France, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, India, Pakistan, Korea and Greece an interesting one. The National Junior Red Cross had expended $56,250 for these overseas services. In addition the British Columbia schools had contributed $15,227.01 towards the B.C. Junior Red Cross Fund for Crippled and Handicapped Children.

Mr. Wilson suggested that the daily remembrance of the needs of children in this province and other countries would develop the sympathetic understanding of other people's problems and, in that understanding, lay the road to international friendship that would make the United Nations the agency to make a realization of the hope, "There shall be Peace."

Kuperi Girl is Bride in South

The Chinese United Church, Vancouver, was the setting of a pretty wedding on October 18, when Margaret Sym, only daughter of Charles Hew Lee and the late Mrs. Lee of Prince Rupert, and Daniel Gay Shiu, eldest son of Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Shiu of New Westminster, exchanged nuptial vows.

Rev. Chow Ling officiated at the double ring candlelight ceremony. The groom was attended by his brother, David Shiu and the ushers were Chong Quan and Sam Shiu.

The bride was lovely in her period gown of white satin featuring a fitted bodice, shirred puffed shoulders and lily-point sleeves. A coronet of seeded pearls and tulle beads held her fingertip veil of Chantilly lace. She carried a white Bible adorned with a mauve orchid and stephanotis.

Her three attendants were Miss Peggy Wong, of Vancouver, maid of honor, who chose blue satin and matching bonnet; Miss Esther Shiu, sister of the groom, and Miss Betty Wong of Vancouver, bridesmaids, who wore dresses, styled alike, of blush rose satin and matching bonnets, trimmed with seed pearls. Their fan shaped bouquets were of white chrysanthemums, Tallim roses and matching carnations.

John Bong was soloist and Miss Marian Lowe, organist. At the reception held at the Blue Dan-

Lee of Vancouver proposed the toast to the bride.

For her wedding trip to California, the bride donned a navy blue tailored suit and a muskrat coat. When they return, the young couple will make their home in Ladner, where the groom is stationed with the Canadian Army Signals Corps.

George Green, district manager of Imperial Oil Co., returned to the city on the Prince George this morning from a business trip to Ocean Falls.

Chose Stage To Church

Al Jolson's Father Wanted Him to be Cantor

Al Jolson was born Asa Yoelson, sixty-four years ago. The blessed event occurred in what was then St. Petersburg, Russia, and on May 26, 1886.

Asa was a child—a mere child—when the family migrated to America and made its home in Washington, D.C. His father, a Jewish cantor, entertained high hopes that Asa would be the seventh in the direct line of the Yoelson cantors, and he taught his son to sing the chants in Washington. But the ambition was not shared by the child. The lad, while yet in knee breeches, ran away from home, made his way to New York, had his shoes stolen from his feet while he slept, and then was shipped back home by brother Harry Jolson. Next time he ran away from the old homestead he became self-appointed mascot to a regiment in the Spanish-American war, sang little ditties to them, was patted on the back, given an apple, and again shipped back to father.

At this time he made his first appearance on the stage, in Washington, as one of the mob in Israel Zangwill's "Children of the Ghetto." Then he ran away again—trip No. 3—with Al Reeves' burlesque troupe, only to wind up, as ever, in the bosom of his fond family after this new and stranger interlude. He sang for a time in a Washington cafe. But, when little Asa, now in long pants for the first time, went off with a circus as ballyhoo man, his father gave up hope of ever making a cantor of him. With his brother and another friend, Asa went in vaudeville under the name of Jolson, Palmer and Jolson. He was now Al Jolson.

The vaudeville tour across the country was hard work, meals were never certain, and bookings were problematical. They reached San Francisco shortly before the earthquake and Al Jolson continued to sing in cafes above the pounding hammers that were rebuilding the city. It was here he introduced his informal manner: he would sit on the piano while he sang his songs, he invented the method of talking the second verse and chorus of his songs, turning singing into conversation and then back. He got a vital, emotional quality into his voice, especially as he talked his verses; there was punch in his delivery now.

An old negro dresser gave him a tip, while he was playing in a little theatre in Brooklyn. Why didn't Mr. Jolson try blackface? It would make the audience laugh, add to the effectiveness of both sob stuff and laughs. Jolson got some burnt cork and blacked up his face, then rehearsed in front of the old negro, who exclaimed, "Yo' is as funny as me." Thus came into being the greatest black face comedian in the world, the "Mammy" singer who made millions out of a bended knee. He was an instant success.

IN PICTURES

Jolson had many offers to appear in silent films, but his first motion picture work was done for Warner Brothers in "The Jazz Singer." It is not generally known that during the making of that film he became discouraged and tried to buy back his contract, but the picture upset the entire industry, did more than any other single factor to popularize talking pictures, and made Jolson the first great star of the new medium. The story of "The Jazz Singer" paralleled his own life: the son of a Jewish cantor who broke away against his father's wishes that he become a cantor, in order to seek fame on the stage. In his second film, "The Singing Fool," he sang "Sonny Boy," his phonograph record of which was purchased by more than one million people. The film was an enormous financial success, even greater than "The Jazz Singer," and it made a fortune for Warner Brothers as well as for Jolson. "The Singing Fool" broke the record of almost every theatre in which it played.

After "The Singing Fool" came "Say It With Songs," "Mammy" and "Big Boy" for Warner Brothers. Then he transferred to United Artists, making "Sons O' Guns" and other pictures.

He was married to Ruby Keeler, New York musical stage star. The marriage culminated a romance that began on Broadway. They were divorced and Jolson married again three times.

No one could accuse him of dissipating. The nearest he came to habits were smoking cigarettes and chewing gum. He never drank.

His personal employees were intensely loyal. He kept them for years at a time and only an inexcusable blunder would cause him to dismiss anyone.

He was President Harding's favorite entertainer. President Wilson invited him to the White House as his guest.

THAT GOOD 5-CENTER

It was Thomas Marshall, U.S. Vice-President, who said in 1917: "What this country needs is a good 5-cent cigar."

Terrace Scouts Are Re-activated

TERRACE—Field Commissioner J. L. Watson addressed a meeting of the Terrace Boy Scout Association in the police station last Friday evening and said that he was here once again to do what he could to help the local Scout and Cub movement.

The two local groups had been brought together for this meeting. There had been too many boys for the First Terrace Cub pack so a Catholic group had been started.

Mr. Watson stated that it was a busy time throughout the province with more boys wanting to join Cubs and Scouts than could be handled. Since the war, membership had gone up by leaps and bounds and the provincial headquarters are hard pressed to keep up with the demands on them. Last year, there was a 1700 increase in the ranks of Scouts and Cubs and for the first six months of this year the increase was 1400. At the end of June the membership stood at 14,000. This increase is typical of the whole of Canada, the membership being 115,000. There are many boys who want the chance of being Scouts or Cubs but they cannot be enrolled because of the shortage of leaders. Otherwise the Canadian membership could be doubled.

As an effort to solve the problem, Canadian headquarters brought out "Plan Achievement," a plan to be followed for the next three years for the further development of Scouting in Canada. With the rapid growth of the organization, provincial headquarters could give all the supervision and work needed.

Extra help was needed.

Three years ago there was just the provincial executive commissioner and field commissioner. Later, another field commissioner was added. Now the province had been re-divided and a third commissioner stationed at Prince George to be responsible for the northern, central, Cariboo, Peace River and Yukon districts. Mr. Watson will be staying in Vancouver and covering the lower part of the province.

Mr. Watson was here to explain this Plan Achievement which is a pattern to improve Scouting by: (1) Service; (2) Leadership; (3) Supporters.

A target will be set for each year for the next three years and the success of the Plan depends entirely on the co-operation of Group Scouters and group committees. At the conclusion of each year's achievement, proper recognition will be to the groups. Good Turns being a feature of the Boy Scout program, both individual and group good turns will be fostered and developed. Public service should attract leaders and supporters. An aim should be made to have a leader for every ten boys.

Mr. Watson stressed that no one in the movement should have more than one job. Good Scouters in sufficient numbers are needed in the group. There is a correspondence course and district training courses for Scouters. Within the next three years every leader should take a course. The group committee should be built up to take a personal interest in the work and the leaders.

REQUISITES

Mr. Watson stressed public relations and publicity. Also smartness in scouting as there is neither discipline nor spirit if there is no smartness in the boys. Each boy must have his uniform and it is part of the boy's training to earn the money to buy that uniform.

Following Mr. Watson's talk the 1951 targets were set. Individual and group good turns will be stressed. The Cubs of the first Terrace group will clean up the Kin Park and Swimming pool. Both the first and second groups of Cubs and the Scouts will clear the beaches of all broken bottles and glass at the north end of Lakelse Lake and at the hotel landing.

Chairman of the meeting was Constable Ted Brue who welcomed the commissioner and later, thanked him for his talk. On being asked, Mr. Watson explained that even though the Cubs and Scouts had to meet in another hall because the roof of their present meeting place, the Anglican Church Hall, was leaking, the Anglican Church would still retain the charter.

Others present at the meeting were Dr. G. May, D. Collins, John Haaland, R. Edwards, M. Wightman, M. Dubeau, Father Racette, C. Bissonnette, John Normandeau, Mrs. Norrington, Mrs. Harper, Mrs. Newhouser, Larry Somerville.

With an electric range, the heat goes into the food—where it should be. There's no excess heat escaping from the oven to make your kitchen hot and unpleasant.

3. It's Clean!

Electrically produced heat is clean. No soot... smoke... or fumes. Pots and pans stay shining bright. You'll enjoy a spick 'n' span fresh-air kitchen. It's wonderful in the summer.

4. It's Safe!

Your electric range is safe as an electric light. With children in the house you'll appreciate this even more.

5. It's Economical!

With electricity, there's no waste heat—it's accurately measured and controlled. Electric cookery is low-cost cooking—only a few cents per day.

KILT-LEG MYSTERY

LIKE THOUSANDS of others, I heard the Scottish troupe headed by Robert Wilson. I like Robert Wilson's tenor ballads and can well believe what many experts say, that he is Scotland's finest living tenor. Certainly he is as handsome a male specimen as I have ever seen on any stage. But that, of course, is because the Highland dress is most flattering to the male. And Wilson's uniform is like a tailor's dream. Offstage, relaxed and unfussing, he strikes you as just a fine young Scottish gentleman—to use that word in its true, not snob sense, and not snobbish connotation.

OF COURSE any show would be a success with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Finlay in it. She is an ideal Master of Ceremonies—and North American M.C.'s might well study from her how not to loom too large or to tilt in the picture.

Alice was genuinely shocked when I told him he was BETTER than his hero, the late Harry Lauder. But in my humble opinion Lauder in all his long life never put over a characterization as good as Finlay does in the Old Kirk Elder. But he does remind folk, and demonstrates to us, just how great a heritage of happiness Lauder did leave to us.

TAMMAS FISHER is the best accompanist for popular concerts that I have ever seen and heard in action. He was really grand in the two public performances I heard. But when he really let loose was at a private party when someone outraged every Scottish tradition by trying to put ice in his whiskey!

AND NOW THOSE legs. I first saw the legs of the lovely soprano singer, Frances Derry, at the Press Club Ball.

In the big auditorium Miss Derry came out in a lovely shimmering long dress. I forgot all about her legs, especially when she sang one of my favorites, Jerusalem (which reminded me of Jock, who, ten years before he was killed in France, used to sing like an angel straight from heaven—even if he did have a snotty nose).

But then when Miss Derry came out in her tartan kilt I said to myself again: "Those legs don't look Scottish to me." I was in luck. We got invited to a grand private party. In came Miss Derry and sat down right by me. (She never did know that I wrote for papers.) But I hope she'll forgive me for this.

"Where were you born?" I asked. "Londonderry," she replied, looking around at the room full of almost 100-per-cent Scots half fearfully.

"Aha! Irish! I knew it." She laughed when I told her that her legs were not Scottish. (Not that I like Scottish lassies' legs the less—far from it. They are just different.)

She fell in love with her husband when his unit in the Royal Navy was based at Londonderry. He is now in the Pacific and gets home only once a year or so. She looked so sad at this that I hoped for a moment that she was going to cry on my shoulder.

But then she laughed when she told how a radio announcer had said "the map of Scotland is written all over your face."

She told me how her church-loyal mother had great misgivings about the effect of her going on the stage. But when she went back home and Mum saw that she did not even smoke, all was well! But even on lemonade, Miss Derry was doing an Irish jig quite as lively as the braw Scots lads and lassies were whirling out when we left for home after one a.m.

Blackwood On Bridge

By Easley Blackwood

Here is a fact you may find it hard to believe. When you are vulnerable and opponents are not, you should bid small slams even if the odds are slightly against you. In this situation you gain 750 points if you make the slam and lose only about 600 points if you don't.

That is, if you go set the opponents score a 100-point penalty, and you also lose the trick points (about 150) and the value of the game (350 points) which you would have made if you had stopped short of the unmakeable slam.

In today's deal Mr. Dale pushed the bidding very strongly, probably counting on his distributional advantages to make up for his high card deficiency. He wasn't far off the mark in this thought since, if the two outstanding trumps are divided, the hand is a lay-down.

"Pupsy" Can't Stand Pity

If there is one thing "Pupsy" can't stand, it is pity. He knows nothing about women's veils but his large brown eyes speak plainly that his veil of hair is something more than style.

So if you see a dog with a red nose strolling with hair in his eyes, it's probably "Pupsy" — don't kill him with sympathy. "We don't know who it is," says "Pupsy's" mistress, Mrs. E. N. Feero, 245 Fourth Avenue West, "but someone tries to do him a good turn by cutting the hair from off his eyes."

"It was the same thing when we had 'Laddie,' an 84-pound English shepherd dog. He had hair down over his eyes. Someone clipped his face—then he bumped into a car," said Mrs. Feero.

The veterinary told Mrs. Feero that these long-haired dogs are quite able to see past their nose. "They seem to look around the hairs," suggested Mrs. Feero. "But when their face is clipped their eyesight becomes weak," explains Mrs. Feero.

Now "Pupsy," named by Mrs. Frank Feero's grandchild, Jerry, is quite sensitive. Perhaps it is because he is so small. He is 64 pounds lighter than "Laddie," Mrs. Feero believes he is a cross between an English Shepherd and a spaniel.

However, "Pupsy" will welcome strangers and bark at dogs. He keeps off the carpet and on these cold nights likes to sleep in the bathroom.

There is only one habit that has got him into trouble. And he brought it upon himself, like all dogs do. One day Mrs. Feero gave him a bone from the butcher's. As was his custom he buried the bone in muskeg. But he scratched his nose and it swelled very much.

"Pupsy" had cedar poisoning of the nose. But he recovered. And soon "Pupsy," with hair down over his eyes and nostrils, was again enjoying the sights and smells in his walks with Mr. Feero.

But now with his hair clipped, "Pupsy" doesn't see half so well and he doesn't smell nearly so good and besides—his red nose shows.

Coalition Boat Rocking Again—Transferable Vote Announcement Causes Squall

VICTORIA.—The Coalition boat, always so easily rocked, took another header into a dangerous list when Attorney General Wismer told the Young Liberals at their Harrison convention that next session the Government will have the Legislature make the single transferable vote a B.C. law.

Liberal and Conservative rank-and-file for long have been pressing for this, as a way out of Coalition. Under it voters would mark their choices—1, 2 and 3—instead of one X as at present. With the single transferable vote Liberals and Conservatives would go to the polls as separate entities—and take their chances. If the CCF again became so strong that neither old-line party could form a safe government, well—presto—there could be another Coalition.

But the single transferable vote is a matter of high government policy. It's up to Premier Johnson and his co-leader, Finance Minister Ansbomb, to make such announcements. But Johnson was on the flat of his back in hospital and Ansbomb was in Toronto on financial business—and so Gordon Wismer jumped the gun.

This annoyed Messrs. Johnson and Ansbomb got in touch with Johnson and, in effect, said: "Look here—one of your Liberals has no business making announcements like that." Boss Johnson promptly got Mr. Wismer on the phone and bawled him out.

Mr. Wismer may have been speaking out of turn but there's little doubt he's right. Both parties want the single transferable vote. The public wouldn't approve if it was brought in the session before the next general election. That would make it appear there was some political hanky-panky about it. So, the sensible thing to do is to bring it in next session and then let it rest until it's needed when the next election rolls round.

This observer would say there's absolutely no use continuing Coalition, as long as so many people are unhappy about it. It's a good government, as long as times are fairly prosperous, and there's no doubt the vast majority of the people approve it. But Liberal and Conservative Associations don't like it. And, like it or not, they're the people who are interested enough in the welfare of the province to keep at politics year in and year out.

Politics and politicians are often scoffed at in our democracy—which is a shame. True, often it's the politicians' fault. They sometimes appear to pay no attention to the public welfare. But, in the long run, that's the public's fault. Politicians know most people don't care what happens between elections as long as they have good jobs and social security. However party; one who dabbles in public affairs; (3) a man of artifice or deep contrivance.

Former Premier Pattullo was in the Press Gallery workroom the other day. He was talking about politicians. Said he, as he always said, in the hey-day of his public career: "Politics is the science of government—therefore a politician is a scientist."

Silver Tip Is Looking Good

STEWART—Development work on the Silver Tip mine was vigorously prosecuted during the past summer with very encouraging results. 119 feet of tunnel being driven in addition to open cut; and stripping.

Surface samples taken from an open cut over 30 inches gave values of $121.29 in gold, silver, lead and zinc. From another open cut 251 oz. silver, 08 gold, 12% lead and 32% zinc, a total value of $319.72.

At 60 feet in the main tunnel a blind vein was encountered, samples from which ran 6 oz. silver, 39% lead and 18% zinc, a value of $182.18. Samples taken every six feet from an average width of 46" ran from $142 to $110.90. These samples were taken over a length of 66 feet.
