

Soviet Union Is Aiming To Become World's Greatest Hydro-Electric Producer

By TOM WHITNEY

The last month has seen important developments in the field of hydro-electric power in the Soviet Union. It has recently announced that the immense Farkhad power dam in central Asia was completed and had begun to generate current. This immense development begun during the war will be little less than the largest hydro-electric power station now operating in the Soviet Union. It will, in addition, irrigate an immense area of 500,000 hectares (more than 1,250,000 acres) of some of the richest cotton land in the world and also announced that construction of a tremendous new power station and dam on the Volga River at the large city of Gorka had begun. The dam will be 11 kilometres (about seven miles) long, and will produce hundreds of millions of kilowatt hours of electricity for the central industrial region of Russia upon its completion. The excavation work for this dam alone will be several times as great as that for the Dnieper dam in the Ukraine, the biggest hydro-electric installation in Europe. Another tremendous new dam and power plant are under construction in the Altai region of eastern Kazakhstan. A Soviet magazine has reported that "the day is not far off" when the first hydro-turbine of the plant using the water-power resources of the Irtysh river will give current. Little information is available on this dam but it is clear that it is a development of first importance for one of the newer industrial areas of the U.S.S.R. A four power turbine—with a capacity of 55,000 kilowatts—has been installed at the Shcherbakov (Rybnski) power station near Moscow. This is a further step in the realization of the electric power of the Volga which at Rybinski is dammed back into one of the biggest artificial lakes in the world. The current will flow to the industries of Moscow.

more turbine-generator units to be installed before the plant has surpassed its pre-war capacity. It has been announced from the Caucasus that construction work is progressing rapidly on a great project for harnessing the power of Lake Sevan in Armenia in a series of cascades and hydro-electric plants. The largest hydro-electric plant in this series is now being built and work is in an advanced stage on lengthy tunnels through mountains which are to bring the water to the turbine blades. These are only some of the more important of dozens of hydro-electric projects in the Soviet Union now in the process of being realized. But they alone are sufficient to show that the U.S.S.R. is determined in the not distant future to become the greatest producer and consumer of hydro-electric power in the world.

Battle of Berlin

THE DIPLOMATIC BATTLE of Berlin should be carried to Moscow. It is one which the Russians would doubtless prefer to see settled as a skirmish, with the advantages of a local victory falling to them.

But the local victory would have ramifications anything but local. The Russian effort to squeeze the western occupying forces out of Berlin is being felt all over Europe. In a shooting war the Western Powers could hardly hold their position in Berlin. In the "cold war" they can hardly afford to give it up.

Soviet intentions are plain. They are, in fact, so thinly disguised as to indicate that Russian leadership wants all the world to recognize them. They need to be dealt with at the top level.

The Russian reasons for blocking roads and insisting on inspection of trains—like the alleged overloading of highways and charges of looting by the Western Powers—only add insult to injury.

What the Russians are trying to do in Germany is to create something that looks like a showdown—under conditions in which the Western Powers have to seem to back down.

As the Russians would have the world read it, the significance of these very limited tests would seem to be this: that when confronted by Soviet action the Western Powers will hesitate to reply in kind.

What the Western Powers now need to tell Moscow—the Politburo rather than the Soviet occupation authorities in Berlin—is that the war nobody wants could come over just some such heavy-footed management of inter-Allied relations as this in Berlin. Certainly peace cannot be got by Russian pushing there, nor by Western Powers retreating.

NEUBERGER ON P.G.E.

THE WORLD CRISIS has brought Canada's Pacific Great Eastern Railway to the attention of important people in Canada and the United States, according to Richard L. Neuberger, writing in this week's Saturday Evening Post. The article, interestingly illustrated by Ray Acteson, publicizes in a big way another section of Central British Columbia.

Recalling plans made by the U.S. in 1943 to extend the P.G.E. to Fairbanks, Alaska, when the Japs were in the Aleutian Islands, Mr. Neuberger says the War Department is studying survey maps which thrust the P.G.E. on through the "Rocky Mountain Trench" to the headwaters of the Yukon River. "At Bering Strait only 55 miles of water separate the headlands of Alaska and the Soviet Union," the Post author points out. "American commanders in the north will not feel secure until Alaskan garrisons and outposts are joined to the United States by a railroad. The P.G.E. is the pin to anchor the coupling."

The P.G.E. is called the loneliest, most spectacular railroad system on the North American continent in the Post article, "North Country Limited." It goes places that would be shunned by a prudent bighorn sheep, according to the author, and it is the biggest headache and brightest hope of Canada's vast western seaboard.

American and Canadian railroad systems have shown considerable interest in acquiring control of P.G.E., Mr. Neuberger declares. "This attention undoubtedly stems from the fact that should the United States lay a railroad to Alaska along the hospitable grade between the Rockies and the Coastal Range, any outfit in control of the P.G.E. would enjoy squatter's rights to an annual trade worth at least $150,000,000. And were the P.G.E. to tap the Peace River coal lands on its way to Alaska, one of the continent's biggest fields of semi-anthracite would be potential cargo."

ENGINEERS DUE SOON

To inspect Work On Celanese Project and Line Up Field Engineering

To inspect progress of excavation work on the Port Edward mill site which is nearing completion and to advance plans for the current year's development on the multi-million dollar celanese pulp project, C. H. Klotz, project engineer for the Celanese Corporation of America, and S. B. Roberts, chief engineer, are expected in Prince Rupert towards the middle of May. It was learned at Columbia Cellulose Co. Ltd. local offices today. George Schneider of New York, vice-president of the Celanese Corporation, is also expected on the coast soon but he may not come to Prince Rupert on this occasion.

Meantime, consumation of the great project is proceeding according to original plan. The excavation work at Port Edward is expected to take about another month to complete. At present B.C. Bridge & Dredging Co. has eighty men continuously employed on this work.

During the coming season there will be much field engineering work to be carried out leading up to the actual construction for which engineering and designing is in progress in Montreal. The field engineer has to do with the water line construction between Port Edward and Prudhomme Lake as well as on the actual mill site itself.

Timber cruising parties will be operating out of Terrace and Prince Rupert during the season but there will be no active logging this summer, it is stated.

THEATRE PRICES

Editor, Daily News:
Regarding theatre matinee prices, I agree with the parents. Why should we have to pay these prices for such a picture as "Henry V" which is as old as Adam. Other places go in for the same prices whether it is a good picture or not. Plenty of school children would have liked to have seen this last picture but not at the 50c price.

Reminiscences

By W.J. and Reflections

If the late Arthur Little, who sold the first copy of a daily paper in Prince Rupert over 40 years ago, could take a look at his old news stand on Second Avenue today, he would square off, stick his hat to one side, take another squint at all that light green and white paint and say "Well, by Judas."

When a man resolves to move north it will take more than scare stories to stop him. Somehow, the trend from the United States to Alaska continues full tide. Some profess to believe that, when discouragement is broadcasted, it's done for a purpose or to hide something. And that will make the migration stronger than ever.

While it does not necessarily follow it always happens in Prince Rupert, nevertheless its being said most automobile mishaps occur Saturday and Sunday, thus proving it is a great life if you do not week-end.

It has become a matter of record that, during the past year, Canadians consumed more beef than in any other form of meat eating. Which reminds one of the late Dr. S. D. Scott, for many years editor of a Maritime morning daily. Being informed of the arrival of a new proof reader, that his name was Veal and that he was English, Dr. Scott remarked he was not at all surprised, seeing he was a son of John Bull.

When tourists stroll up town this summer they will thank you when you start the conversation first. They are all primed to ask questions. They talk with one another which tells them nothing. Local folk, knowing what it is about, having plenty of timely pamphlets and making them feel they are glad to be here—meet and mingle with them—can do a lot when they get right down to it. Any other way is the wrong way. Strangers out to see new scenes and places like the personal touch.

LIFE in this Prince Rupert

by BIDDEE JINKS

It would seem that spring, by itself, would be enough to take a prospector into far away places. But Joe says it is not. He says many ingredients go into the call that comes to draw you away from civilization.

With winter gone and every living thing waving her glad farewell there is bound to be the pull of springtime, he says. But there is more. There is the contentment that comes to a man who goes through a day and a week of his own, at his own speed. There is a quiet holding the softness of hush; the moment when you turn a rock and watch a big black beetle scurry away, frightened, but knowing exactly where he is running. And after sitting a bit, you too move off, unlike the beetle, knowing not where but confident you are following something that holds at its end a pair of gold glittering with your name.

Joe is the little man who showed me the easy way to clean walls. He is a quiet man. He is quiet all through, his speech, his eyes, and the way he moves—easy-like, yet getting a lot done.

He arrived that morning with all the paraphernalia necessary for the job at hand but there was no fuss. Watching him, I thought wonderingly: "He's never spilled a bucket of kalsomine in his life."

There was something different about Joe—an air of satisfaction and patience and waiting that explained itself when he said he was a prospector. Re-decorating was but a winter's sideline that bought shoe-laces for high boots and filled a knapsack, come spring.

It is in his blood now, but Joe wonders why when his introduction to the game was so cruelly gruelling.

He was out sixteen when he went into Death Valley with an old prospector who had staked a rich claim and could find it with his eyes shut—only he didn't have the wherewithal to get to it. So... Joe made his first investment in lieu of nuggets. He bought three burros and all they could carry and himself went with them.

Going into Death Valley is like exploring an oven. It lies 276 feet below sea-level. It is but 150 miles long by 20 miles wide and protected from any small breeze by mountains standing 11,000 feet high. These guardians also hold in the heat, so the temperature is often 125 degrees in the shade for days. Clouds may form high over this valley of dried heat but they seldom drop rain. And dew never forms. It is said to be one of the hottest places on the earth and, after the first day, Joe agreed with statistics.

Everyone, including the burros, kept their eyes wide open but nary a speck of gold was found. It was the first of three trips and the project was abandoned only after Joe learned that he was very young, that the sand in Death Valley moves so that land marks are buried forever while men go crazy hunting for their lost treasure.

He learned to respect a donkey. That a crystal clear pool of water might be deadly with copper poisoning; that a man, swollen from thirst may dive head first into a spring to drink—and die, but a burro will die beside the water, yet never drink.

So you offer your burro the first drink. If he refuses, you sip a few drops from your near-empty water-bag, and keep the small pebble in your mouth while you hunt further for water.

Sometimes it is not necessary to test a spring. If one of your own kind has been along the trail before you he may have thrown a bean tin into the water. Providing it was more than a year before, the tin will no longer be tin, but copper. It is an omen of death and you curse it bitterly.

In the north it is unusual to find bad water, and these many years the northland has been the haunts of Joe. He still is not rich, but he's still looking. Once, many years ago, he found a rich vein, and thought he'd found his fortune. It lasted only a few days... but 'twas good gold.

There is more of it somewhere.

FOOTBALL PLAN EARLY SEASON

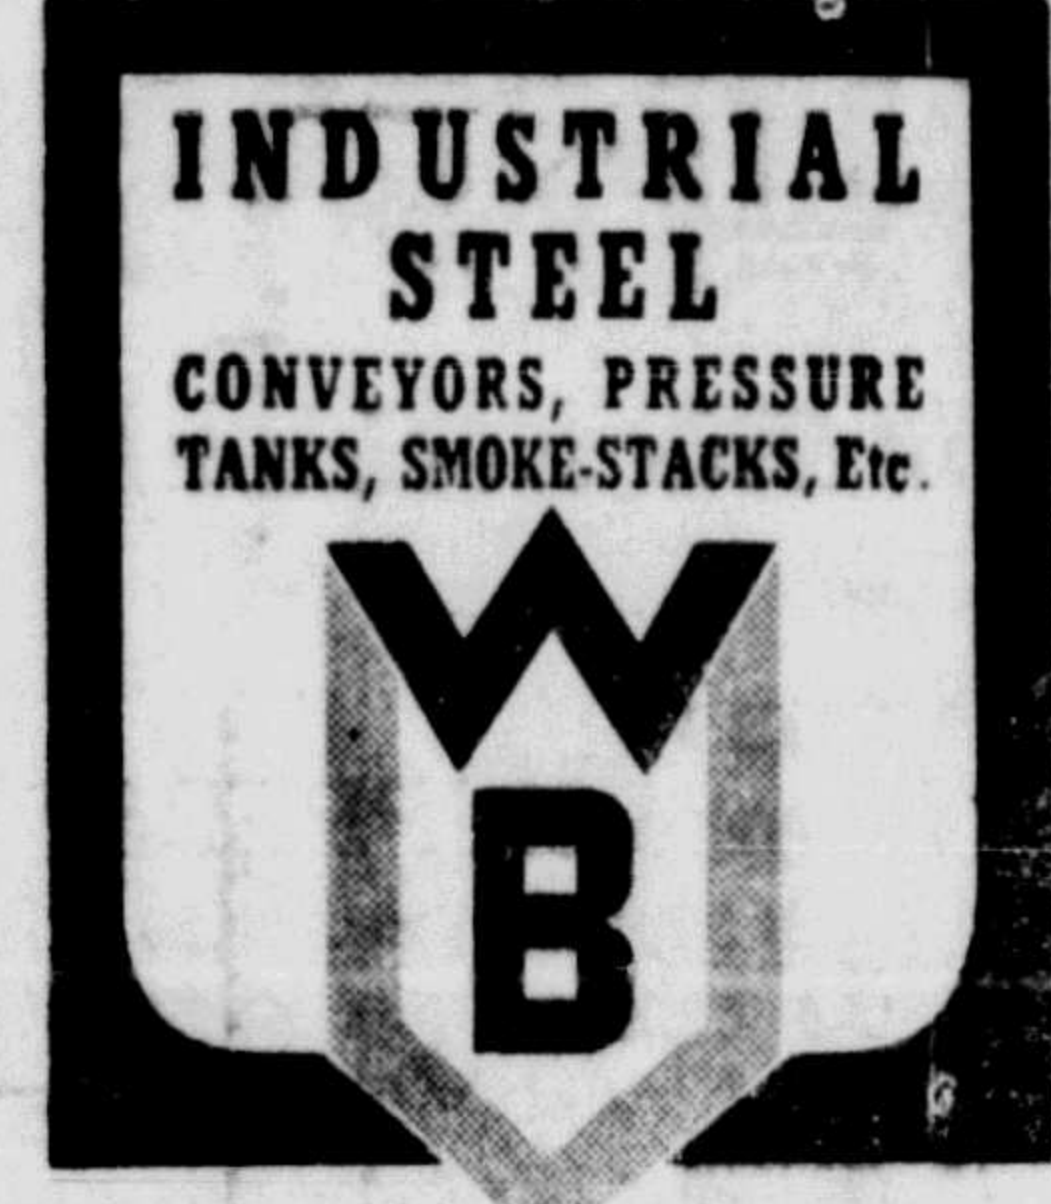

Prince Rupert's first organized football league since the early years of the war will trot out on the Roosevelt Park field this summer as four teams battle it out for four venerable trophies. A meeting of the newly formed football association held in the Canadian Legion Hall Friday night, received entries from Booth Memorial High School, Canadian Legion, Army and Navy to compete in the summer schedule.

At stake during various parts of the season will be the Mobley Cup, the Stuart Shield, the Dominion Day trophy and the Gillhuly Cup.

The league hopes to get in several games before May 24 when, if possible, they will play for the Mobley Cup and they plan to organize working parties to prepare the field in the near future.

City Engineer Stewart outlined the city's plan for pre-

Physical Prowess of Rup-Rec Trainees Thrills Spectators

Six Hundred Attend Second Annual Rup-Rec Display At Civic Centre

Prince Rupert got a glimpse last night of the wide front of recreational activity which goes on inside its Civic Centre when more than 600 spectators packed the gymnasium to witness the second annual Rup-Rec display with participants totalling 300.

For some in the bleachers it was an enlightenment to know that, behind the glamorous front of basketball, diligent training in physical education has been carried on for age groups ranging from pre-school youngsters to creaking adults.

The mass display showed a cross section of the work which has been led by the Civic Centre staff aided by volunteer workers both in co-operation with the city schools and as independent Civic Centre programs.

BARBARA TO BECOME PRO

OTTAWA — Barbara Ann Scott, Ottawa's Olympic figure skating queen, said today that she had made no definite decision to turn professional. Questioned concerning a Prescott, Ontario, report which quoted Herbert Caldwell, wealthy manufacturer and friend of Miss Scott, as saying she expected to turn professional at the end of a series of benefit exhibitions now under way. Barbara Ann said there is no "change in the situation. She is still considering offers but has not definitely decided to turn professional, she said.

Caldwell made the "announcement," ostensibly on behalf of the comely 19-year old women's figure skating champion, that she had decided to turn professional and would probably enter moving pictures. Caldwell said he was directing Miss Scott's business affairs. She had had, he said, good offers from two movie producers from Hollywood who wish to star her in pictures. He added that a leading United States ice show promoter was also bidding for her services.

to know that, behind the glamorous front of basketball, diligent training in physical education has been carried on for age groups ranging from pre-school youngsters to creaking adults.

The show lost nothing in spectator interest because of that policy.

The show was opened by Mayor Nora E. Arnold who recalled that last year's display had given her "a great surprise" because she had "no idea of the gymnastic ability and physical prowess of Prince Rupert's young people."

"I feel certain that with another year of training behind them, they will do even better," she said.

LUCKIES WIN LADIES' FIVE PIN SCORING

Lucky Strikes walked off with practically all the scoring honors in this week's session of the ladies' five-pin league, taking both team and individual high scores among the 20 teams involved. Team aggregate score was 2,644, well above any of the other teams.

B. Vuckovich, of Luckies, howled the highest score both for the single and three-game totals. Her score for single game was 301 and her three-game total was 674, averaging 225.

Rec she attributed credit for the "almost complete lack of juvenile delinquency in our city. The Civic Centre is the greatest thing for the public good that we have."
With Principal R. G. Moore of King Edward School as announcer, the program opened with a display of group games by the Rup-Rec junior boys, directed by Miss Margaret Slinn, then moved on to singing games by the "tiny tots" class, composed of more than 100 pre-school boys and girls.
As was the case the year before, these youngsters threatened to "steal the show" with their unaffected naturalness as they marched and joined in children's games.
Co-operation between the schools and Civic Centre was shown when the Grade Five girls of King Edward school and the Rup-Rec junior girls put on two dances, dressed in colorful crepe paper costumes. School physical training classes are as much a part of the Rup-Rec program as are the Rup-Rec classes themselves. Miss Margaret Slinn directed both groups.
King Edward boys of Grades Five and Six demonstrated a "human ten-pin", a variation of mat tumbling that was done with precision under direction of Neil Ross. Then boys and girls of Grades Five and Six of Borden Street put on a rhythm drill with Indian clubs and balls.
One of the most charming displays of the evening was a demonstration of square dancing by the Rup-Rec intermediate girls and the ladies "keep fit" class. While Miss Slinn called the turns, four groups of girls and young women went through the dance forms with grace and rhythm.
There was little bashfulness displayed when the Grades Five and Six boys and girls of Borden Street danced the French minuet in near-period costumes. This presentation made an attractive display and was directed by Mr. Ross and Miss Slinn with music by staff pianist Miss Frances Moore, A.T.C.M.

Grades Five and Six girls of King Edward School gave a brief but rhythmic demonstration of a skipping drill with music by Miss Eleanor Moxley at the piano. Trim figures and well balanced muscles could not help but result from the fundamental gymnastics routines demonstrated by the ladies' Keep Fit class. This demonstration indicated perhaps as clearly as possible how the modern trend in physical training has departed from the "physical jerks" and has embraced the principle of rhythmic movement. This class, too, was directed by Miss Slinn.
Wearing colorful red-and-white costumes, the Rup-Rec Intermediate girls then gave a demonstration of marching drills.
Climax of the show were the final two displays by the Rup-Rec leaders, both men and women. These groups have arrived

Uncertainty and Pessimism Shrouds Opening of Halibut Season—Initial Lumber Shipment From Juneau Is Made

The 1948 halibut fishing season, which will open in less than two weeks, will do so amid an overture of gloomy predictions that, as well as being the shortest season on record, it will be the most economically hazardous in years.

A large carry-over of 1947 halibut, said by some to be as high as 20 percent of last year's catch, is depressing the eastern market to a point well under price levels of the 1947 season. What will happen when this is over-laid with the 1948 production is the subject of much unhappy forecasting.

Some predict that prices will be well under the healthy 1947 levels and that the short season, coupled with depressed returns, will create a situation unheard of in Canadian industry since the depression years.

Certainly, with their large carry-overs on which they are now taking a loss, the marketing agencies will be extremely sensitive about bidding the prices of the 1948 fish to any great altitude. Top grades of western halibut are wholesaling on the eastern market for as low as 27 cents a pound and this downward trend has been in effect for many weeks. Chicken halibut, once a top-grade delicacy, seems to have lost favor on domestic tables and is reported as retailing for as little as 14 cents a pound. This is only a little more than the fisherman was paid for it and takes no account of handling or shipping costs.

However, since the first landings of halibut will be shipped fresh to market, it is believed that the price scale will take an initial spurt, then level off at a figure probably several cents a pound below the 1947 scale.

Another situation that is puzzling, but not particularly worrying local halibut men, is the attitude of fishermen in some coast ports in regard to the usual division of the fleets for the first trips. Prince Rupert fishermen and owners want to follow the usual routine of dividing the fleet into two sections, one leaving for the grounds before the other.

This has the result of allowing the first landings to be divided and not overburdening the shore handling facilities and creating no threat to the price structure by having vast quantities dumped on the wharves at one time.

However, certain ports, among them Petersburg and Vancouver, want to go out all at once so as not to risk the loss of a trip during the extremely short season that is expected. In a situation like this, all that is required is for one group to refuse to abide by the custom and it is destroyed. That, incidentally, is why many thoughtful fishermen are urging that the International Fisheries Commission take steps to bring in controls for the good of the industry. Voluntary controls, they say, have not, and apparently cannot, be effective.

Like the fishing business itself, any embarrassment that might be caused by the fleets going out all at once is dependent on the weather. If the month of May is a fine one, millions of pounds of halibut may be unloaded in a short space of time and may justify the fears of the fishermen. However, if it is bad, fishing will be held up to such an extent that it will not make any difference whether or not the vessels left all together or in sections.

Whether or not they have a good or bad season, Prince Rupert halibut men are going to employ the latest devices in their search for fish. In the past few weeks, almost a score of them have installed electronic depth sounders to find halibut. More are planning to have the devices installed.

Some are going first class and installing machines with paper recording devices that show the bottom of the sea and anything in the way of fish that may be near it. Others are settling for the indicator type which flashes instantaneous signals, but which does not record on paper. However, the latter type can be fitted with recorders later if the owners wish.

Vessels which in recent weeks have been fitted with depth sounders are the Pride (formerly Stalin), Anker A., Dovre B., Signal, Selma H., Strafen, Tramp, Parma, Helen I., Myrtle B., Takla, Henry Wahl, Skeena Maid, Endovud and Advance. The Morris H. and Oldfield are to be fitted later this year, perhaps in the fall.

Union steamer Coquitlam, which has been proudly sailing the coast in a coat of white paint on her hull, underwent a transformation during her latest overhaul. The ship, now relieving the Cassiar on the Queen Charlotte Islands run, now has a black hull with white superstructure. Her red and black funnel is unchanged. The Coquitlam is making her fortnightly voyage to Massett Inlet today and is due back here tomorrow morning to sail at midnight tomorrow night on her return to Vancouver via south Queen Charlotte points.

Having discharged at the pier of the local dry dock 631,000 board feet of spruce and hemlock lumber from Juneau which is to be transhipped on order to the Eastern United States over the Canadian National Railway, tug Santrina and barge left during Thursday night for the Alaska capital to pick up the next similar consignment for Prince Rupert. Considering it was the initial shipment, the lumber was handled with dispatch here in just about twenty-four hours. Next shipments, it is anticipated, will take less time to handle. The discharging was concluded at 11 p.m. There were about twenty-five carloads in all.
