The Cost of Fear

IN THESE DAYS when all prices seem to be getting out of reason, fear still remains as the costliest commodity that any of us can know.

Men and women and children are starving in this world. Probably half its people have never known what it was to have all the food they needed. Our world needs almost everything to help it get on its feet again so that it can achieve even that meagre way of life. Yet every year that same world now at peace, is spending $27.4 billions for armies and armaments to give us what? Nothing but protection from fear of one another. There are still 19 million men in the armies of the world. That is more men under arms, and twice the expenditures for armament that obtained in that ominous year 1939, when peace was rocking on its foundations. Now, when we have fought things out to a finish, we are still afraid. And that fear is costing a starving world $16 for every man, woman and child living anywhere in the world today. Any way you look at it, does it make sense?

HONOR THE FISH

CINCE 1914, hundreds of millions of pounds of J halibut have been shipped through Prince Rupert. Thousands of families have been supported, because of this industry. Freight charges have aided the railways. Fish-mainly halibut-has given this city more than a local fame. It has long for your crack about Russia I left this situation is going from been the master meal-ticket. The fleets that come and go mean something substantial and enduring. But has Prince Rupert ever performed a service that could rightfully be called recognition? Boston, Massachusetts, an old and rich city, is not too venerable or wealthy not to pay a fitting tribute to codfish on which Boston's commercial greatness was founded. In the State House can be seen the enlarged figure of a cod. It has been there for generations as a permanent reminder to all New Englanders of what the species signified to them in the past and does to this day.
