OCTOR CECIL H. HANKINSON who, min-U istered patiently, kindy and effectively to the medical and surgical needs of thousands of people in Prince Rupert, Smithers and elsewhere in Central British Columbia during a third of a century of unselfish service, has passed away. Nothing would have pleased him more than to be paid the simple tribute of being one of the best citizens of this city and district—and such he was. Ironically enough, he was the victim of a malady towards cure from which he had during his career of outstanding usefulness been able to assist many who called upon his skilful succour.

The professional success of a physician and surgeon can be judged from the layman's standpoint only by the testimony of trust, confidence and appreciation recorded by grateful patients-and Dr. Hankinson had this in large abundance.

But, apart altogether from the standpoint of his professional stature, we can add our tribute to the excellence of his citizenship and friendship. He was an understanding and kindly man and, while unassuming and not seeking the limelight of publicity or wide acclaim, his works and citizenship will be long remembered. In quieter and less obstrusive circles, he played his role and achieved a wide circle of personal friends and admirers.

His passing is a grievous loss to his immediate family, to whom full sympathy will be extended by a commounity which also keenly mourns his leav-

You can go where towns. There are certain streets and avenues in Prince Rupert where the gardens take second place to no other city-and that makes me think of the need of more people becoming property owners. Returning to the soil a little every year, putting in a few more plants and shrubs, at the end of another decade or two our waste spaces shall indeed bloom.

My greatest happiness has been achieved not from the results I have obtained in plants and shrubs but in the hopes that I entertained in making the hillside blossom with color from season to season—from spring to fall.

Of course to some, gardening is a real burden and bore but the development of our Yacht Club by those whose hobby is boating has a distinct place in the community life and is no mean effort to make Prince Rupert attractive.

Much has been said about the beauty of our harbor-that is a $ heritage which no one can take from us. Looking into the future, one cannot but feel that it much of necessity fill a great place in future commerce.

Mrs. Richard Harris Smith, Truro Dietitian

Mrs. Smith knows a lot about Carnation - she's a graduate dietitian with teaching experience, AND the mother of a sturdy young son who was a Carnation baby. But millions of people — experts and "just folks" — go right along with Mrs. Smith on "Coffee and Carnation".

Carnation's double-richness and homogenization give coffee a deeper flavor, a tempting color. Just try it. And remember that double-rich, homogenized, heat-refined Carnation, undiluted, adds to the appeal of the breakfast cereal or the supper dessert. Try Carnation in your cream jug regularly. And use it in all your milk cooking - one-half Carnation, one-half water, for whole milk consistency and food values.

Make Your Own Test

Try coffee and Carnation for a week. Vary the amount of Carnation till you find the combination that suits you best. Millions prefer Carnation to cream for coffee - yet Carnation costs only about half as much as the lightest
