Fails To Run China Coast

Aboard SS Flying Arrow (CP)-Chinese Nationalist warships riddled this American freighter with shellfire today in international waters off Communist China. There were no casualties but the captain said the vessel was no longer seaworthy. Captain David Jones said the Flying Arrow had been hit with thirty or forty shells as she attempted to run the Nationalist blockade of Chinese Communist ports off the mouth of the Yangtse River. He said that the ship had become unseaworthy and that he will ask Isbrantsen Lines, owners of the vessel, to request United States Department of State to intercede for safe passage to the nearest port for repairs. That would be Shanghai, the destination port to which the vessel was original, headed when she left Hong Kong early Saturday with $1,000,000 of eargo for Red China.

The Scene Changes

The war of nerves has died down in Europe for the time being at least and the theme of Soviet propaganda is peace and a professed fear of attack by "Western Imperialists". Even the expected attempt to coerce recalcitrant YugoSlavia has come to curiously little.

The reasons for this complete change have been two. First, there has been the steadiness and consolidation of the West. Western European countries have made it clear that they would not be intimidated into a policy of appeasement and that they would certainly resist any further aggression. And the United States has made it plain that if conflict came American aid would be "without stint". If the Ber-Imairlift was the first decisive counter-action, the signing of the Atlantic Pact was the second. In 1947, at the founding of the Cominform, Russia declared a cold war between the "two" camps. In 1948 and 1949, the West accepted the challenge; and Stalin wisely had more cautious second thoughts.

.But there has been another and by no means unimportant reason for the change. If the West has proved stronger, the Soviet empire has proved weak er than Stalin foresaw in 1948. The revolt of Tito has succeeded beyond expectation. And the rest of the satellite countries are riddled with discontent, with nationalist resurgence, and with a growing hatred of Russian domination and Russian exploitation. Stalin is forced to think not of extending but of consolidating his empire, of repression instead of aggression. The purges and treason trials are most dramatic symptoms. But the trouble is widespread and deep-seated. The satellite Governments have to threaten ruthless action against all opposition. Even the Communist parties are unreliable. A Soviet Marshal has to be put in charge of Poland's armed forces. And there are signs (as in Malenkov's Pravda article on Stalin's birthday) that there is no little discontent and unrest in the Soviet Union itself. made Prince Rupert and the res It is no time for adventure or risky foreign policies.

But what of the Far East and the great Communist victory in China? The victory of the Chinese Communists is an event of tremendous world significance. Mao Tse-Tung at the Moscow birthday celebrations spoke of Stalin as a "teacher and friend". suggesting independence and equality, rather than status of a satelllite.

There are now in the world two great powers whose governments profess devotion to Marxism. One is Russia and the other China. Just as the one is now very Russian, the other is and will be very Pass is the point west of Jasper flames which were bursting Chinese. But the essential point is that they are two -not one-working together of course.

ARBON MONOXIDE

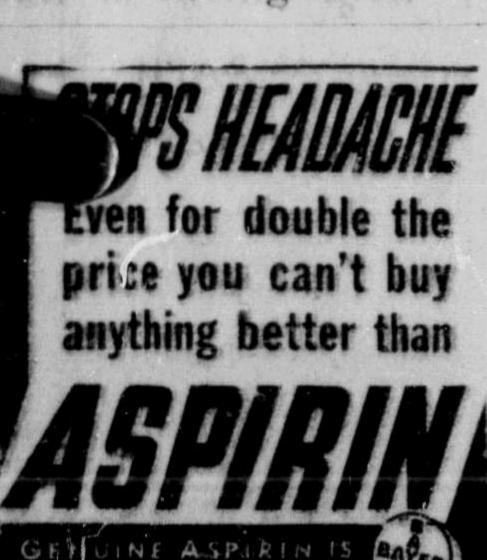

A SILLUSTRATED by an incident in Prince Ru-\ pert last week, extra precautions against carbon monoxide poisoning are in order at this season. The number of accidental deaths from this cause increase as the weather grows colder.

Since the exhaust from automobile engines always contains carbon monoxide a car engine should never be allowed to run in closed garage. Large garages and repair shops should be equipped with mechanical ventilation that can capture exhaust fumes at their source and carry them outside the building. These precautions are necessary to prevent accidents, possibly fatalities.

At home furnaces and stoves require particular attention before being fired for the winter. Ill-fitting pipes, worn and corroded parts, clogged chimneys and improperly operated dampers can permit dangerous amounts of carbon monoxide to accumulate in the living areas of the house.

When carbon monoxide contamination of interior air is suspected, the doors and windows should be opened to permit complete circulation of air.

An individual overcome by poisonous gas should be moved out of doors covered with warm blankets, and given artificial respiration until the physician arrives. Careful attention to precautions can result in saving lives.

Following a vote of thanks to Mr. Applewhaite for his address, Dudley Little welcomed C. J. Norrington to the chair. The new president thanked all for the 35 honor bestowed on him. He had previously considered it an honor to be a member of the Board let no is its president. He was very hapmal of a good year having a good executive to work with. Fine Drama In "Doctor And Girl"

Dramatic story of a young doctor who has to choose between assured wealth, fame and success or working out his career the hard way in the tenements of new York is unfolded in 'The Doctor and the Girl," feature offering at the Capitol Theatre here this Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. It involves a conflict between the young man and his father who opposes the son's marriage to one of his patients. Glen Ford, Charles Coburn, Gloria De Haven and Janet Leigh are starred.

Glenn Ford nas the role of the young interne who starts out on his career with the advantage of being the son of ene of the country's most brilliant neurologists, played by Charles Coburn. Taking the part of the young bride is Janet Leigh, a girl of no family or position. The plot becomes further involved when the young daughter's sister runs away with a married man and it is when tragedy befals her that the lonely and disappointed old man is reconciled to the son's romance and is brought to see that a doctor working for the sake of humanity in the districts of the poor is really greater than the one who achieves fashionable success.

Need Publicity-

The Queen Charlotte Islands are suffering from the wrong kind of publicity, says W.N. Gieggerich, pioneer of Tiell, who was in the city aboard the Chilcotin at the week-end returning home to Cape Ball, some six miles along the beach from Tlell, where he lives a life of comparative ease with his son, Jim, raising all the vegetables and fruit required in his garden and finding principal meat supply in his poultry flock

There is a tendency to overrate the rainfall on the Islands and to call it a land of fog and cold which it certainly is not, Mr. Giegerich says.
