Canadian Pacific Should Not Freight Into British Columbia, Says Tom Reid

Ottawa Talks Differential

Province Penalized Because Bad Grade Chosen

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Pacific Railway should not be allowed to haul freight into British Columbia, Thomas Reid, Liberal, New Westminster, contended today before the House of Commons committee on railways and shipping. He told members that he was "taking this stand" in an effort to end situation which "penalized" British Columbia because "the C.P.R. took a wrong grade" when it built its line to the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Reid's words brought up in the committee the thorny question of mountain differential rates which bear heavily on the

A grim tug-of-war in Italy between Russia and the West was reflected in a bitter and often violent campaign and accounted for the heavy turn-out of voters.

Threat of violence, which hung over the two-day voting, never materialized. The government had 330,000 armed watchers on duty. Heavy police detachments guarded the streets. Some of the soldiers actually acted as baby sitters while mothers went out to vote.

Sowing the Wind

GROWING SOBERNESS is marking the warnings of the men in power. War is no longer a distant and all but impossible eventuality. It is something that is brooding over a world with a dreadful imminence. There are some indications that Russia is becoming more conscious of this possibility and that her leaders, as far as they may do without losing the face that is so vital to them, are attempting to minimize the threat.

No one wants war. No one is ready for it. The stern methods of containing Russia, evidenced in the five-power military defence pact, the arraigning of Russia before the U.N. Security Council for her part in the coup in Czechoslovakia, and in President Truman's request for the necessary force to counteract Russian expansion, may influence Russian policy without doing more than qualify the threat.

The danger now is not so much from an open breach between principals, but that some of the minor actors in the world drama may have absorbed Russia's teachings too literally. It might easily be that a minor incident might plunge an unwilling world into a new catastrophe. It happened at Sarajevo in 1914 and started the First World War. It could happen again.

That is the danger of arrogant and irresponsible minorities that have grown drunk with seeming power. It is the judgment on those who would encourage minorities to usurp power. They cannot always be controlled. It is something for our own agitators and our own people to remember. Aggressive minorities may acquire a power for evil quite out of proportion to their own merits or influence. No subversive minority is free of the potential for harm. The murder of a none too important Austrian Archduke plunged the world into one world war. Some minor incident in a puppet state today might easily mean that history would repeat itself. Though you sow only the wind, you may still reap the whirlwind.

WELCOME HOME, CHAMPS

DRINCE RUPERT all-star basketball players are returning home this afternoon after bringing honor and glory to themselves and the old home town by winning the provincial senior B championship at Port Alberni. Like the rest of folks we are glad to join in saluting them.

They played not only proficiently and skilfully but as gentlemen and good sportsmen. More important than the victory, unprecedented and satisfactory as it may be to their hometown friends and supporters, is the fact that they carried the name abroad of being a good, square-shooting group of fellows who were out for the game rather than the name. But winning as they did and in the way they did, they also got the fame.

So, champs, welcome home and congratulations on your achievement!

A WONDERFUL SHOW

THOUSAND Prince Rupert people on Friday and Saturday evenings saw practical demonstration at Rup-Rec's annual mass display of what might well be considered the most valuable and far-reaching of the myrial of functions that are going on at Prince Rupert's Civic Centre. It is only too bad that the rest of Prince Rupert's nine thousand or so people could not also have seen.

It is appropriate that Neil Ross and Miss Margaret Slinn, the directors of these activities at Civic Centre, should be heartily congratulated and commended not only on the display itself but on the season of careful organization, hard-working effort and finely co-ordinated instruction and drill that led up to the impressive show.

Of course, it should not be necessary to remind the people of this community that, without their civic centre, all this would have been impossible. These hundreds of people of all ages would not have been able to have the benefits and pleasures to be derived from such activity—an activity which it is only a wonder hundreds of others are not striving to participate in.

It makes us wonder again, as we have done before, just how Prince Rupert ever got along before without its Civic Centre and how it could possibly do without one again.

And the physical and recreation educational training which the existence of the Civic Centre and its facilities make possible, while most important, is only one of so many activities, too numerous to mention, and, in some way or other, affecting beneficially practically every citizen of Prince Rupert.

There is this to be said of last, and that the community, Prince Rupert. One thought of has recovered its poise. Meanit the other morning when while spring continues to be on broadcasts were telling about the way. headaches and high water along the Ohio and other rivers bringing the usual spring floods. Here, as a rule, is an abundance of excellent water. It is above reproach, yet never shows above the door step. Nor is it ever seen creeping upstairs. Utilizing canoes or boats is always restricted to the harbor.

Winston Churchill has sold his story of the Second Great War to a United States magazine at, one may easily suspect, a good round figure. It will appear in six different issues. No editor is going to flourish any blue pencil over that copy.

Rousing indeed should be the welcome home to the winning basketball team back from Alberni this afternoon. "Nothing succeeds like success," and "ain't that the truth?" Incidentally, the reception could lack much without a band but there is one and it will arise to the occasion. Without it, there could be the flatness of a flap-
