Defence of Alaska Is Being Centred; Withdrawal From Rims

A special article in Time Magazine's "Background for War" series describes the withdrawal of the great defence installations from Nome in the Far North to Ketchikan, Sitka and Juneau on the south into a new tight defence net in the heart of Alaska. The new defence heart, illustrated with a graphic map, centres on the Anchorage area and includes such points as Kodiak, reaching as far east as Fairbanks.

Says Time's article: "The heartland is a 500-mile-long loop of sea, plain and jagged mountain, notable because—in Alaska's trackless central land mass—it is stitched together by year-round transportation. It begins in the southwest at the island naval base of Kodiak, encompasses the ice-free ports of Seward and Whittier, fans up along the 471-mile Alaska Railroad, and then hooks on to the Alaska (Aleut) Highway, last segment of the 2350-mile overland route from the U.S."

"Here, and only here, the Joint Chiefs of Staff had decided, could the U.S. build a base that 1) could be supplied through the paralyzing winters, 2) would be strong enough to defend itself, 3) would be central enough to defend Alaska against attack. In any future world war, Alaska would be a prize in transpolar air warfare. Here the U.S. would first intercept Russian planes curving eastward out of the Chukotsk bases (where the Soviets were building up fuel supplies), bound for such atom-worthy targets as the Hanford plutonium plant in eastern Washington, or the West Coast aircraft plants—or possibly industrial targets in the upper Midwest. Offensively, Alaska was a strategic refueling point for transpolar B-36s."

NON-GLOBAL WAR "Why, then, was the U.S. falling back to Alaska's inner core? It had been different in World War II. The Japanese, landing on Attu and Kiska, had tied up ten U.S. divisions. The Navy, hard-pressed at the crucial battle of Midway, had nonetheless spared five cruisers, 13 destroyers and six submarines to defend the big peninsula against a diversionary raid. Air bases were strewn along the coast and down the Aleutians at enormous cost: in 1942 the Army diverted desert-camouflaged planes intended for Africa to defend the very areas where the U.S. was now closing out bases."

"The answer was that the Joint Chiefs had taken a second look at Alaska and this time had seen it through airman's eyes. To fireside strategists, equipped with an armchair and a globe, the Aleutians might look like neat steppingstones from Asia up to the North American continent's front door, islands to be defended one by one. But the steppingstones had to be seen. The globe, for instance, did not show the masses of empty tundra stretching inland from the western coast like slosy, moldy pudding. No map could hint the subzero temperatures that could cripple an army, taunt it with frostbite, hold it to a mile-a-day advance through roadless mountains and plains."

"Alaska is a battleground for airmen, the Joint Chiefs decided; in 1947, it turned command of the theatre over to the Air Force. The primary enemy thus became enemy airplanes, the primary defensive position, U.S. air bases. Let Russia or anyone else slip ground troops—airborne or seaborne—into such "islands of tundra" as Nome or Point Barrow, said the airmen, and you could isolate them like the mighty Japanese bases of Truk and Rabaul were isolated in the Pacific war. You would bomb the planes and shelters and leave them all shivering in the cold with no place to march to. Don't make U.S. airplanes vulnerable by scattering them through the wilderness, they said. Let them range from bases in the heartland."

The largest overhaul of British telephones ever undertaken was started in London in 1947.

LETTERBOX

UNKIND STATEMENT

Editor, Daily News: I am sorry to admit that your remarks in Saturday's paper escaped my notice. In fact, I had to have it brought to my attention on going to work at the plant on Monday.

Being a worker out there, and shall I say, a local man (of course, I may be wrong there also, as one never knows just how long one has to reside in a community such as you describe).

Mr. Editor, my own personal opinion of your statements expressed are that you certainly lack a great amount of the milk of human kindness, as you sit in judgment of your fellow men and women—yes, we have some women out there too, and hard-working ones at that.

It has been my privilege to work amongst these (so called by you) boomers and floaters and floaters from the inception of construction work and really, Mr. Editor, if you could only take time to come out once in a while and see this wonderful transformation that has taken place, you would, I am sure, have the same opinion as myself, that here, have some of the most highly skilled people that one could meet anywhere from the top of the town down to the bottom.

You know Sir, a plant such as you no doubt will see when the Rotary or some other organiza-

"THE CONNORS CASE" is a 36-minute film of true-to-life murder mystery that gives an exciting description of the work of the RCMP as a law enforcement body. From the time that an implement salesman is missing from Regina, through a hunt half across the continent for his murderer, this dramatization of an actual case shows the modern methods used by the RCMP in criminal investigation, reaching a fast climax as the murderer is caught.

"EYEWITNESS" is an 11-minute film on Canada's third political convention of 1948—"Progressive Conservative meeting" in Ottawa. At Frohisher, Sask., bird dog champions are trained. Delegates from all over the country debate a new platform. Finally the new leader is chosen—Ontario's George Drew. Scenes at the International Field Trials demonstrate perfection in quartering the ground and standing on point in this best bird dog country in the world.

Regal Unbending— Royal Family Likes Picture

LONDON.—King George VI, accompanied by Queen Elizabeth and the two princesses, have seen a bodily intimate portrayal of the King's great-grandmother, Queen Victoria, by the screen actress Irene Dunne.

The occasion was the annual royal film performance, when a big movie is given its first showing in aid of charity. This year's choice made some film people who knew the script of "The Mudlark" raise their eyebrows in surprise and say, "I wonder what the King and his family will think of it?"

They were thinking, among other things, of the scenes showing the veteran Highland gillie John Brown, who has become Queen Victoria's servant and friend but who dares to stand up to her, even bullies her, calls her "woman," and describes her in his rich Scottish brogue as "stubborn as a mule."

But it seems the doubters need not have worried. King George and Queen Elizabeth told Irene Dunne after the performance how much they had enjoyed it. The King showed keen interest in hearing about special latex cheekpads which Miss Dunne used to give that pudgy look to the venerable Queen's face.

WARMHEARTED

Miss Dunne gives a beautiful and sentimental rendering of the Queen—perhaps a little too warmhearted. Her voice and accent are more than a masterly adaptation of the American to fit the English. She speaks with the voice of a great Queen, and one becomes unaware she has any accent at all.

This gala film show was a big occasion. London film fans massed in Leicester Square in a steady rain to watch arrival of the Royal Family and film stars, including some 30 top-rank British and American actors and actresses, including Irene Dunne, Claudette Colbert, Marlene Dietrich, Montgomery Clift, Gloria Swanson, Ray Milland, Michael Wilding, June Haver and Margaret Lockwood.

MEMORABLE MOMENTS

After the film's showing the stars gave a cabaret show on the stage which would have cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. But the stars gave their services free and allowed themselves to be pushed around in an all-day rehearsal just like chorus girls. As a result, British film charities benefited to the extent of about £50,000.

There were many memorable and enjoyable moments in the showing of "Mudlark." For instance, when an old night watchman was describing England's King George III—"poor old George—but he went potty"—the audience giggled and glanced at King George in his box. He seemed amused, too. It was a kind of family evening

SAVE COSTLY GARDEN TOOLS
BY CHECKING WINTER RUST

Every gardener takes care of his tools and knows that the most serious time for them is the winter. Careful cleaning, oiling and storage over the winter will prolong their useful life.

The greatest enemy of tools is rust. It attacks the metal parts of tools in the winter when the tools are stored and does more damage then than in the summer when they are in constant use.

To check the rust, first clean the metal parts by washing thoroughly. Caerol must be softened and removed. Then, cover the metal parts with a thin film of lubricating oil. All bearings of tools should be oiled. It is better to obtain new handles, if the old ones have broken, than to set in place old handles.

Washing and dusting equipment should be cleaned thoroughly of all old spray materials.

Take the nozzles of sprayers apart and clean. Oil the pumps of sprayers, and set them away without screwing down the tank caps, so that the rubber gaskets are not compressed. Dusters should be cleaned and the outside metal parts oiled, but instead of oil, powdered graphite should be used on the inside.

Make a resolution when your tools have been cleaned to keep them cleaned in the future. A rack in which every tool has its place will be found well worthwhile.

Big Men and Little Ships

This is the time of the year that brings tragic news from the sea comments the Vancouver Province. This is the season when the little ships, the fish boats and the tugs we see peacefully chugging out of our mountain-protected harbor, do battle with the winter storms on the gulf or the west coast of Vancouver Island, or on the savage waters around the Charlottes.

This is the season when the big men on the little ships face their greatest danger. This is the season when the women at home wait anxiously for the call that ends another dangerous voyage. Snug under our mountains we in Vancouver may not always realize the savage intensity of the winter storms "outside." The southeasters that whistle around the chimney leave our protected waters calm. But it is different "outside." Facing the full force of the open Pacific, or on the more exposed waters on the inside passage, the men of the little ships fight bitter winter battles.

The little ships, the tugs and the fishing boats, carry on our coastal commerce. They bring the fish, they deliver the logs to keep the sawmills humming. Through the pea soup fogs and the wildest assaults of the great Pacific they do their job.

When the wind whistles around our safe chimneys we should remember the big men and the little ships that keep the wheels turning.

New Steamer Prince Rupert—Prince George to Carry On

Final OK is being awaited from headquarters in Montreal before work starts in Vancouver of installing a new sprinkler system aboard the veteran Canadian National Steamships steamer Prince Rupert which has been in Vancouver for several weeks undergoing annual overhaul. The work will take a few more weeks and it is understood that the steamer Prince George, now on the run, will continue until the Prince Rupert is again available. There has been considerable speculation as to the future of the Prince Rupert, which is now over forty years old, but installation of the sprinkler system would indicate that she is to have a new lease of life. Eventually, it is expected she will be replaced with a new vessel possibly about her own size and adaptable particularly to winter service with plenty of freight and automobile carrying capacity.

Charles Guy, traffic assistant for Union Steamships Ltd., at Vancouver, will arrive in the city on the Chilcotin tomorrow afternoon from the south in the course of a northern tour on company business. He will remain over here until Sunday night when he will connect with the steamer Camosun to make the trip to Stewart and return to Vancouver.

C.N.S.S. Prince George, Capt. Caldwell, arrived here at 9:45 a.m. Wednesday en route from Vancouver to Ketchikan. She sails at midnight. Disembarking here were Mr. Kristest, W. G. British Incomes Are Really Cut LONDON (Reuters)—Only 86 persons in Britain are left with yearly incomes of more than £8000 ($16,800 after taxes, government figures show.

In 1939 there were 6560 persons in this category, the annual report of the Island Revenue Department showed.

Names of the 86 were not revealed, but most were believed to be persons who made their money long before the war.

The majority of Britain's 20,000,000 workers were left with the equivalent of between $14 and $28 a week, the report said.

Most businessmen in the upper grades pay income tax of 19s. 6d. on the pound sterling—97.5 per cent.

A man making the equivalent of $3000 a year pays 45 per cent of it in income taxes.

Freight Boost Bad For Coal

VANCOUVER — British Columbia and Alberta coal will be shut out of Ontario markets under the proposed freight rate increase, Hon. N. E. Tanner, minister of mines for Alberta, said yesterday at the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy meeting here.

"I do not think the proposed rates are justified or in the interest of Canada," Mr. Tanner said. "If they go up to the maximum indicated, British Columbia and Alberta coal will be shut out of Ontario."

Canada Could Handle Hundred Million People

LONDON — George Drew, leader of Canada's Progressive Conservative party, said last night that Canada could feed, clothe and house a population of 100,000,000 people.

In prepared text for a Canadian Club meeting in Britain, Mr. Drew said he believed it would be years before there is a Canadian population of that size.

The population is expected to hit 14,000,000 by the end of the year.

We're Just Starting

BRITISH COLUMBIA is described by a writer in a special section of the Financial Times of Mont-real dealing with this province as Canada's "Emerging province out to the west of the Rocky Mountains. This is a happy reference of particular interest and significance to the northern part of the province, tributary directly to Prince Rupert. All others, if not all the residents of the area themselves, realize that the great potential from the point of natural resources required for industrial development and new population exists here. That is apropos of Canada's west coast provinces as a whole is also appropriate to this particular part of it and the great hinterland all around. The content of the eastern financial paper is, therefore, directly applicable when it says that no limit to growth here is recognized. Of all the provinces, "only British Columbia has the feeling that it can expand into many directions, many fields and, with the eye on the sea, it just naturally regards its own future as limitless as the sea that feeds and washes its shores. Capital undoubtedly is moving to British Columbia. The basic industries which have characterized the province's history in the first half of this century still form the backbone of the industrial structure of the future. However, these basic industries are so divergent in themselves offer so many possibilities of diversifications, that the only question which remains to be answered is "when" rather than "where" now.

Roads into newly developed areas, facilities for the creation and operation of additional communities for the development of local industries, a year-round local population, the opening of the rich hinterland to accommodate settlers from abroad—these are the things which will measurably British Columbia's progress henceforth."

WHY WON'T BUILD TOWNS

CANADA would be a happier, healthier and safer country for future generations if we had fewer cities and far more prosperous towns. But we are not going to get very far, at least in building up towns, unless many business leaders in these places sharply change their tunes and get a more faith in their own communities. In its "Canadian Sample" the Midland (Ontario) Free Press Herald makes this charge: "Very often he (the visitor) finds that the majority of merchants would rather grouse than do anything else. They suggest that business is not as good as it might be that the industrial outlook is not so bright, that it is not like the good old days. There are exceptions, and when there are any of them, you find an exceptional town or

"But unfortunately too often the grouse . . . are in the majority."
That attitude on the part of local businessmen may ruin the growth chances of even the best situation. Sometimes visitors are looking for a likely place to set up a new business, or they know someone who is or will be looking. Sometimes they may represent a financial institution interested in investing money. One doesn't need to be told what their opinion is of Blankville's future after Main Street's pessimists are through with them.

As I See It

By ELMORE PHILPOTT
SUPPOSE YOU lost your arm or leg in an accident.

Suppose you woke up tomorrow morning in a hospital bed and discovered that one of your limbs was missing. Would you be like 90 per cent of all other such unfortunate, at such a time, and wish that you had lost your life instead?

If so, the luckiest thing that could happen to you would be to have an expert in the room with you.
Bill Gray of Vancouver is such an expert. Not only has he surmounted his own loss of one arm. He has made a scientific study of the psychological and physical and occupational problems of similarly afflicted Canadians.

He has published an invaluable little booklet, "Who's Handicapped?" which any amputee or similar person may obtain free of charge by writing William Gray, 1550 Charles Street, Vancouver, B.C.

IN A FOOTNOTE to William Gray's excellent booklet, Dr. John Ray of the Workmen's Compensation Board of British Columbia points out that "we are not all gifted equally in the ability to make use of what we have left . . . (but) so much is to be gained by discussing problems with others who understand the difficulties."

WILLIAM GRAY has some extremely useful tips about how to get rid of the bugbear of all amputation cases—that is, "phantom limb."

I remember Mr. Gray telling me years ago, when I once interviewed him on the radio, that the absolute necessity is to educate the subconscious mind that the physical limb is no longer there. Such education will help the person to avoid the numerous falls, etc., which come from involuntary movements, taken before remembering the handicap. He also claims that much of the pain from "phantom limb" aches can be eliminated.

ONCE ASKED William Gray to help me in a small research. My personal experience is that no crippled person ever sees himself or herself in a dream as crippled, but always as straight and whole. I asked Bill Gray to inquire among his acquaintances and ask whether this was so. His answer was exactly what I had also found: In the "spiritual form" there are no cripples. In every case we have discovered no one-legged

Ray Reflects and Reminisces

How did you happen to come to Prince Rupert? Everyone must have had a reason! Particularly was this true of the days when the prospective city was young. Thousands had the notion that here was a chance to make easy money once lots were on sale. This, verily, was getting in on the ground floor. Seize it! And you sailed north? Yeh!

Most of the boats going in that direction in May, 1909 had but little surplus space. It was true of the C.P.R. coastal liner Princess May, with her graceful lines and trim look.

Captain John McLeod was the seasoned skipper. Passengers appeared to be from anywhere in the west. Many were free to confess that gazing at the blue inlets, unbroken forests and towering shores was a new experience.

PIONEER OF PIONEERS
Our table companion was a rangy old gentleman who said he was Frank Hart, who had pioneered it in Yukon ten years before. He was an undertaker but interested in other lines, as well. He'd helped welcome the first train into Vancouver. He would also do his part in greeting the first train into Prince Rupert.

"There is no cemetery in Prince Rupert," he mentioned, "but person ever dreams of himself except as with both legs."

STUDENTS OF MYSTICISM will smile at the above—for it is mere confirmation of truths taught by such schools for many centuries.

There is an outer physical body, or material form, which is subject to laws of matter. But there is an inner being too, indelible and (I believe) immortal.

Bill Gray's little book, of course, has nothing to do with this sort of thing. (That's MY baby.) It is down-to-earth teaching about how to live fully, despite the kind of accidents which afflict us physically.

there will be. For the present, burials are on an island, just across the harbor."

Plainly, he was a man of experience, and well informed. Incidentally, he seemed interested in where I was going and why. Learning it was a newspaper job in Prince Rupert he drew a tiny paper from his pocket, spread it out and said:

"Houston's Bulletin. Know him?"
THE NEW NORTH
I did, within the next few days. Early one afternoon, the Princess May tied up at a small but busy wharf . . . I'd never heard of Port Essington, long the Skeena's chief business centre. Neither did I know about the wide and swift river, though looking at it. (Continued on Page 9)

Aluminum In B.C.'s Future

One of the greatest projects to determine B.C.'s industrial future, comparable in scope only to the Trail smelters operation, is presently being surveyed in the wilderness of Tweedsmuir Park by Aluminum Company of Canada. The idea is to establish on the Nechaco River a power dam capable of producing close to a million horsepower and at sea level 150 miles away at Kitimat an aluminum production site comparable to Arvida with an annual production of 250,000 metric tons of ingot aluminum. The cost of the project is estimated at 500 million dollars.—Financial Times.

Miller Bay Couple Wed

Annunciation Church yesterday morning was the scene of a pretty double ring wedding when Mary Louie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Louie of Smithers, became the bride of Albert Birkstock, son of Mrs. C. Birk of Vancouver. Rev. Father F. M. Rayner, O.M.I., officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in floor-length dusky pink satin with a halo headdress and finger tip veil. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses and white baby chrysanthemums.

She was attended by Mrs. George MacDonald, matron of honor, who wore a floor length gown of powder blue taffeta and carried a corsage of yellow roses and gold chrysanthemums.

The groom was attended by George MacDonald.

Following the service was a reception at the Broadway Cafe banquet room with a buffet lunch. A toast to the bride was proposed by Father Rayner and responded to by the groom. William Daley was master of ceremonies.

Out of town guests were the bride's mother and father, Smithers; the Misses Elsie, Louie and Janette Holland, Telkwa; Mrs. E. Davis, Miss D. Holt, Mrs. E. Daly, Miss E. Stephenson, E. Green, L. Lobsinger, Mrs. C. Welton, Miss M. Ross, Mrs. Alice Good, Prince George. From Prince Rupert were William Dale, Mrs. B. Gearing, Mrs. E. Journeay, Mr. and Mrs. A. Davey and Miss B. Gallogley.

The couple, both on the staff at Miller Bay Hospital, left on the train last night for a wedding trip to Prince George. They will continue to live at Miller Bay.

Prince George Making City Hall Better

Prince George could not build a new City Hall so it did the next best thing. It is making $10,000 renovations and improvements to the present one. When the job is done, it expects to have a smart civic home which should meet requirements for the rapidly expanding municipality for some years to come.

The improvements will include an office for the mayor, a new general office, and offices for the city clerk, the assessor, the city engineer and city electrician, with committee rooms and other amenities not hitherto provided.

The mayor's office, located in what is now the basement of the city hall is being equipped in the most up-to-date fashion. Plywood panelling runs round the walls to a height of about four feet. Above that is a smooth white plaster finish. Adjacent to his office is the new office for the city clerk.

Also on the ground floor (what is now the basement) is the large new general office.

The steps in front of the city hall are to be removed and entrance to the upper storey will be via a doorway erected near the basement of the present steps. A staircase will lead from the basement to the upper floor.

On the upper floor, what is now the verandah will be enclosed to become the office of the city engineer. The council room will remain but the rest will be subdivided into offices to house various city officials and the Board of Trade.

The City is, in effect, obtaining a new city hall for approximately a third of the price complete re-building would cost.

Biggest Diesel Engine Order

MONTREAL—The largest order ever given by the Canadian National Railways for diesel-electric motive power was announced here by E. A. Bromley, vice-president purchases and stores.

Bringing the total cost of new equipment ordered by the railway in 1950 to about $57,500,000, the new purchase consists of 40 road freight locomotives that are to be built by the Montreal Locomotive Works and General Motors Diesel Ltd. for delivery early in next year. They will be operated in both long and short haul services between Halifax and Winnipeg.

With this large order the Canadian National now has 38 diesels scheduled for delivery late this year and in 1951 and their receipt will bring the system's diesel motive power fleet to 265, of which 143 will be switchers. 84 road freight engines and the remaining 38 road switchers. The latter type are used in either switching or road service.

The 28 units of the new order from General Motors Diesel will be of 1500 horsepower and almost identical to the six original road diesels of the C.N.R. which were built by the same company and placed in the Montreal-Toronto freight service two years ago. However, they will be equipped with an automatic gear shift to replace the manual control and changes have been made to the electric system to give them a greater hauling capacity. They will be equally divided between "A" units which are the lead units with engineer's cabin and "B" or booster units.

The 12 to be built by Montreal Locomotive Works will be 6 "A" and 6 "B" units of 1600 horsepower. Each type are similar to similar to a previous order for eight placed in September and those now operating on C.N.R. lines between Montreal and Janquiere, Que.

CNR Industrial Official Retires

WINNIPEG.—Industrial commissioner for the Canadian National Railways since 1930 and immediate past president of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, Frederick V. Seibert retired from railway service here Wednesday.

At a meeting in the CNR board room with his fellow officers, J. R. McMillan, vice-president, described him as "one of the best public relations officers the railways has." Reference was made to his nation-wide travels on behalf of the institute and the CNR. F. H. Keefe, general manager, made a presentation on behalf of Western Region officers.

An RAC veteran of the First World War, Fred Seibert joined the federal department of the interior in 1919 and conducted surveys in the three prairie provinces. He was supervisory mining engineer at The Pas in 1929, coming to Winnipeg the following year where he joined the CNR as superintendent of the natural resources department. He was made industrial commissioner in 1940. He is leaving this week-end to make his home in Edmonton.

Plant To Be Built Next Spring at Interior Mine

VANDERHOOF—Construction of a crushing plant on the Perlite property of Western Products Ltd., three miles east of Francois Lake Landing, is virtually assured for next spring according to H. F. Baker, vice-president in charge of mining and production. Plans for the new plant, which will be constructed at a cost of approximately $40,000, were made known at Vanderhoof.

Mr. Baker predicts a bright future for Perlite once its merits are more widely known by the building industry. Due to the lightness in weight of Perlite-gypsum plaster—the architects will be able to specify lighter weight structural steel which in turn will effect a considerable savings in construction costs. Its toughness in comparison with ordinary gypsum plaster, plus its soundproof, fireproof and other superior qualities are features that are consistent with present trends in the building industry. Once the perlite product is familiar to architects and the plastering trade the demand is certain to be great, according to Mr. Baker.

Perlite, a mineral of volcanic origin, is processed for commercial use through the use of temperatures ranging from 1900 to 2500 degrees Fahrenheit. From solid form the mineral is expanded to a light fluffy substance by the high temperature, and after expanding must be removed quickly from the heating chamber to prevent fusing. At the present time Perlite from a de-some time, is expected to be in operation for the first time in the spring of 1951.

The Columbia Cellulose plant, on Watson Island, just outside of Prince Rupert proper, will be an additional heavy user of B.C. logs. Many feet of logs are now assembled up and down the British Columbia coast, to provide an operating inventory for the plant which will have an initial capacity of better than 200 tons of cellulose fibre per day. This is about equal to the current consumption of cellulose in the acetate rayon industry alone.

Jurist Deplores Lenient Handling Of Old Offenders

LONDON — A "get tough" campaign against lawlessness, with punishment that strikes fear into the hearts of criminals, is advocated by Lord Oaksey, who presided at the Nuremberg trials of the Nazi war leaders.

Addressing the annual meeting here of the Magistrates' Association, Lord Oaksey deplored the trend towards lenient treatment of habitual offenders and the easing of discipline in prisons. Neither, he said, had the deterrent effect of protecting society nor preventing private vengeance.

The only categories of punishment at present were imprisonment, corrective training and preventive detention.

"Does anyone," he asked, "really believe that these forms of punishment are appropriate for those who beat old men and women within an inch of their lives?"

MUST STRIKE FEAR

"To me it appears that some form of imprisonment should be so hard as to strike fear into the hearts of the most hardened criminal."

Rather than impose one form of imprisonment, Lord Oaksey suggested there should be sufficient grades of punishment to enable a judge to decide what appropriate sentence should be imposed, both in time and quality. It was a mistake, he submitted, for the prison commissioners to determine what form of punishment a criminal should undergo.

Lord Oaksey asked why prison officials were protected by forms of corporal and dietary punishment which were not applied in the protection of the public.

"The reason is, it seems to me, that members of the public who have the misfortune to be beaten up are organized in no trade union and cannot make their views felt," he said.

Miner Sanctuary Again Welcomes Migrant Geese

By ALAN DONNELLY
Canadian Press Staff Writer
KINGSVILLE, Ont. (CP)—The geese that Jack Miner loved have come back again.

The great, grey squadrons from the north, led by wise old ganders who have known the way for years, have once again found the tiny pond-dotted oasis near here that was begun 56 years ago by the late Jack Miner.

Now at their migration peak, between 50,000 and 60,000 will have rested and fed this fall at the sanctuary he built for them. Here they are kept safe from hunters until the United States hunting season ends in mid-November, when they will continue their rush to winter grounds along the Gulf of Mexico.

Visitors at the sanctuary stand amazed at the sight of 8,000 wild geese blackening a five-acre field, and at the wild sound of whistling wings as the big birds swarm into the sky.

The phenomenon hasn't yet become commonplace to residents of this Essex County district, who knew Jack Miner and his work. That work is being continued by his three sons, Manley, Jasper and Ted.

Jack Miner, who died in 1944, dreamed of this year's giant migration when in 1904 he stopped hunting wild fowl, bought seven wild geese and put them, with their wings clipped, into a pond near his house. It was North America's first bird sanctuary.

He waited four years until the first flight of 11 geese, came honking in. Since then the flocks have grown. Manley Miner reports a 30 per cent increase in birds in the last two years.

This year's geese, many raised last summer on Hudson Bay, are believed to have made a non-stop 1,500-mile hurdle from feeding marshes on James Bay.

Jasper, youngest of the three sons who feeds and bands the birds, expects to band about 2,500 this year. The birds who come to Kingsville in the spring follow the Atlantic flyway. Those southbound in the fall follow the Mississippi flyway.

The Canada geese, blue geese and snow geese need fattening in the spring on their way to Arctic nesting areas. "They have to get up there safe and fat so as to reproduce well," Jasper said.

The importance of the bird sanctuary here is seen in the fact that the geese following the Mississippi flyway — the most heavily hunted of four flyways they follow — are increasing.

"The sanctuary acts as a nest egg supply for the continent," Manley said. "We have banded 45,000 Canada geese since 1915 and more than 6,000 of them have been reported killed in the United States. Only six were killed west of the Mississippi. At least one-quarter of each group caught for banding has been banded before. Last year we found one banded 24 years previously."

The bands are unchanged from those devised by Jack Miner, a deeply religious man who saw the hand of providence guiding flights of birds. Each carries a verse of scripture. One of several strapped to the legs of geese this year is the simply: "Have faith in God."

SANCTUARY VETERANS

There are some permanent boarders at the sanctuary — like four whistling swans. They are the survivors of nine swans rescued one winter by the late Red Hill from ice below Niagara Falls after they went over the cataract.

No one knows how old the four swans are, but they have been at
