Governor Gruening gave his unqualified approval to the bills. The American ship service had been conspicuously "unsatisfactory and inefficient." ## Thanks, Mr. Fairweather!

THE CASE FOR PRINCE RUPERT, as a seaport for Alaska trade, was pleaded by S. W. Fairweather, C.N.R. vice-president, before the U.S. Senate in Washington, observes the Vancouver News-Herald, whose sentiments will be commended in Prince Rupert which appreciates the able case made out, indicating that the Canadian National is really going out to bring the Alaska trade to Prince Rupert.

Mr. Fairweather forecast a bright future for Prince Rupert, and for the C.N.R.'s northern business, if the U.S. would relax the Jones Act of 1920. This act provides that only U.S. ships may carry goods between U.S. coastal ports and possessions. Effect of the act is to give Seattle shipping a virtual monopoly of the Alaska trade, and eliminate completely British Columbia ports.

The C.N.R. vice-president was supported by Governor Ernest Gruening of Alaska; E. L. Bartlett, Alaska's delegate to Congress; Ralph Rivets, Alaska's attorney-general, and Oscar L. Chapman, U.S. undersecretary of the interior. All of them have long been urging repeal of the Jones Act as discriminatory against Alaska. One of the underlying motives for Alaska's drive for statehood is the fact that such legislation as the Jones Act would then be unconstitutional as discriminating against one state.

Alaskans want Canadian ships to be permitted to carry U.S. goods to their territory. It would give Alaska more service, more competition, competitive rates, and an alternative lifeline in the event of strikes and other maritime disturbancs. Governor Gruening, in testimony before the Senate, said: "Shipping between Seattle and Alaska has been conspicuously inefficient and unsatisfactory. Canadians have operated superior ships and services."

Mr. Fairweather explained that goods from the U.S. east and midwest can be shipped to Prince Rupert by rail for exactly the same cost as to Seattle. He testified that, under agreement between U.S. and Canadian railways, rail rates from the midwest to U.S. and Canadian Pacific coast ports are identical. He told the U.S. senators of the Canadian government's plans to develop Prince Rupert as a major port; and he reminded them of the extensive warehouse, dockage and trackage facilities built there by the U.S. army during the war. He predicted that Prince Rupert would eventually replace Seattle as the focal point for Alaska shipping.

Outcome of the Senate hearing, if it results in a repeal of the Jones Act, will be a boon to Prince Rupert, to all B.C. ports and shipping interests, and to the C.N.R. Mr. Fairweather has done a valuable service to this country in presenting Prince Rupert's case clearly to the U.S. body.

THE GRIM REAPER

MHEN the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway was being built, the people of Prince Rupert could be looked on as a community of youth and early middle age.

Today, many indeed of those who could be classed as pioneers have passed on. Such was inevitable, and so will it continue. As time wears along it seems so much more frequent that another a familiar name is missed and another friendly face seen no more. The new generation gradually grows into its appointed place.

There will always be found those who go before. They are among the first in the sharing of hazards, uncertainties and discomforts and sometimes the rewards. It has been like this in every land and in every age.

FAITH REWARDED

T MAY BE SAID of Prince Rupert that no longer need there be serious question as to the future of this newest of the cities of the west. One realizes it now as never before. True there is still a long way to go. Yet there is a momentum, an impetus perhaps far off and faint but nevertheless on its way. It would be prodigal to suggest that there will be freedom from disappointment in days to come. That is part of the price of progress. Enterprise, faith, example and confidence will do much. Priceless natural advantages will do more as artificial barriers are removed.

And so, the men and women who came when Prince Rupert was young-many of whom are still carrying on-hold an assured place. A new seaport is rising in the northwest, a city destined to come, sometime, in a changing world. To have had something to do with its founding, even though in a comparatively obscure way, cannot but be a source of satisfaction and pride.

Reminiscences

Oh, oh - it's that sign again! - the one saying "Postage Due" on the letter. So she shells out a dilling - or maybe some francs or lire, and all for the sake of a letter that hasn't been properly prepaid!

And what a pity - because generally, friends like to hear from each other - but nothing takes the joy out of mail so f-a-s-t as postage due. Because the addressee - either here in Canada, or abroad, must pay double the deficiency.

So next time you use AIR MAIL - at home or overseas, be sure to check it for weight.

Today, OVERSEAS AIR MAIL rates are lower than they've ever been in history. A letter mailed to Great Britain, Northern Ireland, Eire and Europe costs only 15¢ per 1/4 oz. This allows about 1 sheet of thin airmail paper and envelope. More than this may overtip the scale - and that means extra postage.

Play safe - don't take chances on embarrassing your friends . . . or straining business relationships. Always check the weight of your OVERSEAS AIR MAIL before posting.
